BRITISH POLITICAL CRISIS NEAR CLIMAX

Political Situation Nears Crisis as King Consults with Leaders

MacDonald Is Given Dictatorial Powers in Food Control

TENSE FEELINGS

Parties Reconciled to the Forthcoming Elections

London, Eng., Oct. 1 — This evening the King had conferences and consultations with Lord Reading, Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader who is President of the Privy Council, and Sir Austen Chamberlain, Conservative First Lord of the Admiralty.

The fact these men were called by Ramsay MacDonald, Liberal leader, as an indication the situation is rapidly approaching a crisis.

London, Oct. 1 (AP)—Armed with powers approaching those of a dictatorship by virtue of the passage of its economy bill, Premier Ramsay MacDonald's National government stuck today at London's food problem to check prices which already had begun to soar.

The Socialist Premier thought the economy bill last night and the king approved it. Now the government rules by orders in council and puts its policies into immediate effect without consulting the parliament.

The self-protective bill gives the Board of Trade arbitrary power to regulate prices and trade in foods and provides a three months' maximum of $500 fine for violating its regulations.

Philip Lloyd Reading, the British Secretary, and other members of the government conferred with the king, presumably regarding the possibility of a general election in the near future. The premier left Windsor himself is going tomorrow to Seaside Park, Bognor, to obtain his decree before the constituents whom he represents in the House of Commons.

London, Oct. 1 (CP) — cable — While a definite decision is yet to be reached by the cabinet most people still expect a general election October general election as a virtually settled arrangement.

The Prime Minister's calculated vagueness at question time in the House of Commons yesterday; his visit to his constituency at Seaham Harbor, to morrow; cancellation of the Conservative party conference scheduled for next week at Birmingham and the continued pessimism in Liberal ranks are deemed significant of approaching dissolution and an appeal to the country by the National Government under Prime Minister MacDonald.

The general expectation is that Parliament will dissolve on Thursday or Friday of next week and the polling day will, according to the date of the dissolution proclamation, be either October 26 or October 29.

Saturday View

The main topic in the discussion in the election issue is now the attitude likely to be adopted by Sir Herbert Samuel, Liberal leader, who is Home Secretary in the National Government, and Major Lloyd George, party leader, at Church House, Westminster, where the Liberal colleagues Sir Donald Maclean, Viscount Cecil, Hon. Frederick

JOHN F. LYNCH DIES SUDDENLY

Brilliant Career in Commerce Cut Short By Pneumonia

Buffalo, N.Y., Oct. 1.—John F. Lynch, treasurer Buffalo, Niagara & Eastern Power Corporation and assistant comptroller of Niagara Hudson Power Corporation, died suddenly this Wednesday at his home, 470 Parker Avenue. Mr. Lynch, succumbed to pneumonia after a very brief illness, and his death came as a distinct shock to his wide circle of friends. He was 43 years of age.

A native Buffalonian, Mr. Lynch had a brilliant business career in accounting work with a number of business organizations in the Niagara area. Following his graduation from the local schools and the completion of a complete training in business, he joined the National Biscuit Company organization in 1906, during the seven years' connection with this company, he rose to the position of head bookkeeper.

In 1914 he accepted a position in accounting with the Concrete Steel and Coal Company of Niagara Falls, Ontario, resigning in 1915 to join the United States Army. He served his country throughout the war, and after receiving his honorable discharge, he joined the staff of the Niagara Falls Power Company as an accountant.

He was advanced to the post of chief accountant in 1921, and five years later was made assistant treasurer. From this point on, he rose rapidly, becoming the acting accounting officer of all the Niagara Hudson Power companies in western New York as well as an officer of Niagara Hudson Power Corporation.

In addition to holding the offices mentioned above, Mr. Lynch was at the time of his death treasurer of the General Electric Company, treasurer of The Niagara Falls Power Company, and its subsidiaries, treasurer of Niagara Lockport & Ontario Power Company, treasurer of Niagara Electric Service Corporation.

He was made a member of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce, Buffalo Athletic Club and Transit Valley Country Club.

In addition to Mrs. Lynch (formerly Marie McCormack) he is survived by a son, William Francis, two brothers, William B. of Long Beach, Calif., and Felix F. of Niagara Falls, and a sister, Mrs. Seymore W. McCartan, of Belleville, Ontario.

Funeral was held at 10 o'clock Thursday morning from St. Mary's Church, Niagara Falls, N.Y., Burial at Riverdale Cemetery, Niagara Falls, N.Y.

BULLETIN BOARD

STATION CLOSED

The Canadian National Railways closed its station at Deseronto on Saturday night and the day operator, H. Baldwin, has been transferred to Foxboro, says The Post. The night operator, Charlie Higgs, was moved to the Midland district some time ago, so what was once a bustling place of business is now no more. The Canadian railways continue to lose money, owing to the abnormal business conditions throughout the country and the closing of the Deseronto station was to be expected. For some time past the station has been served by a train which backed in from Napanee, but each day from Napanee. But even that service may be curtailed if not done away with—as The Post has been informed that in 30 days running this train carried but 16 passengers, in the meantime Henry Howard motors daily to Napanee for the mails and express and the service he is giving is unquestionably more satisfactory. Six passenger buses each way, run each day and handle the passengers out of this town. Then trucks continue to bring in freight and express. So in the face of all this competition it is little wonder that the C.N.R. decided to close the station. No businessman would continue a business that was losing money daily, so why blame the railways. The railways must survive.

FESTIVAL AT ST. PAUL'S.

The annual harvest festival service was held in St. Paul's church on Tuesday evening, St. Michael and All Angels' Day. The Vicar, Rev. A. During the offering Miss Muriel of Oshawa and Mrs. Foster of this city sang a duet very beautifully. The church presented a festal appearance with the fruit of the season.

Townsfolk Use Primitive Weapons to Quell Fire Succeed After 5 Hours

16,000,000 Feet of Lumber Destroyed at Foss Mills

RAIN AND WIND AID

Wind That Spread the Flames Suddenly Veers to Save the Town

North Bay, Oct. 1—Nature, in the shape of a change in wind direction and a drizzly rain, Wednesday night, brought sudden victory to the men and women of Foss Mills a lumbering town 30 miles southeast of North Bay, who for five hours had fought with only primitive means to save their town from destruction by fire.

The damage is placed at $400,000 and 16,000,000 feet of lumber were destroyed.

With belated help from the fire departments of North Bay, Trent and Powassan, the smoke-grimed and heat-scorched townspeople forged an epic of the north country in their apparently losing battle to save lumber mills, homes and town buildings from conflagration.

Their only source of water a creek a quarter of a mile from town, the grimly working citizens and their womenfolk were forced to use buckets of water, cutting away small buildings and mill equipment in the path of the fire and drenching buildings in fighting the blaze.

Wind Saves Town

A strong wind that fanned the flames and threatened to wipe out the whole village, almost miraculously changed about 11 o'clock last night, saving the town and the piles of furniture dragged from the houses by frantic inhabitants as a last resort.

The light rain which began to fall an hour later made certain the victory of the wind's sudden change, but it hissed on the smouldering ruins of $100,000 worth of lumber and buildings. The property destroyed included 16 million feet of lumber, two company houses and the telephone exchange, as well as minor damage to other buildings.

The surrounding bush was also threatened, but heroic work by the townspeople, equipped with backsets and barrels, prevented the blaze from spreading far into the forest. It had originally crossed the Canadian National Railway tracks and caught in the bush when the head of the racing flames drove the fire-fighters back for a time in the town.

So fierce was the fire that its reflection could be seen in North Bay, and the surrounding country, and many hastened to the lumbering town to help in battling the flames.

The fire apparently started in the centre of the massed piles of lumber in the yards of the Pyramid Lumber Company, and quickly swept through the yards as a raging mass of flames before anything could be done to check it. Cutting away of the trams of the mill building and frantic efforts of fire rangers from North Bay and Powassan with ten lines of hose eventually saved the mill itself from destruction.

Rails and ties in the yard were charred and twisted with the heat and flames, and a box car and a siding was destroyed before it could be moved out of the fire zone. Even with the steady drizzle of rain subduing the flying embers, it is expected that the great expanse of burned lumber will smoulder for days to come.

It was at first thought that the inhabitants of the little town in the town might be made homeless by the fire, adding to the distress of unemployment. The gift had been closed down for some months.

NEEDY ONLY TO GET WORK

Malcontents and Comfortably Idle Get No Relief

Napanee, Oct. 1.—Frankly admitting that he had undertaken a task which without the support and confidence of the public he would be unable to accomplish, Premier Geo. S. Henry told 500 Masons from all parts of Ontario last night that the government could provide relief only for those in actual want, and that the authorities could not accomplish the impossible and provide unemployment for all who desired it.

Speaking with a gravity that has not marked his previous appearances at functions of this kind—the honoring of a newly-elevated Grand Master of the Masonic Order in Ontario—Premier Henry gave his listeners a picture of the situation in the province today, and warned them that the impression in the minds of the public that a large army would be formed of all unemployed and needy was an erroneous one.

All that the government could hope to do, he said, was to give work to those who had been thrown out of employment for lengthy periods. The others, the men who faced slack periods in their various professions and trades and who had registered along with the more needy, could not expect relief from the government.

Gold Standard

"We are concerned because England has discarded the gold standard. And why? Because you-must understand that the generations British currency has been looked upon as standard for the world. The British pound commanded respect everywhere. Perhaps it is natural to feel that some thing is wrong, that we are slipping, that we are losing our good position in the eyes of the world. Let us leave to financiers the movements of international exchange, these things.

"We know that England has weathered blasts before that she has always won out. And just as sure as the sun rises tomorrow we will see conditions and the affairs of the world will go on with the British Empire in the lead. (Applause).

"We are suffering from the aftereffects of the greatest catastrophe the world has ever known, a fact which I sometimes feel is not fully appreciated by the individual. It is just as natural for all this to happen today as it was at other times in history following great wars. These afflictions are but for the moment. In the future, when we will have emerged from these trying times, we will have the consciousness of knowing that we bore the brunt of the suffering and won out."

Much African Fruit Finds Way to Canadian Mart

Cape Town, south Africa, Oct. 1.—(By The Canadian Press)—Regular consignments of South African fruit, both citrus and deciduous, have been going to Canada in the past seasons for these various fruits. This statement has been made by fruit growers and shippers in reply to a reported statement of Eric Louw that farmers of the South African Union, if they wished to capture the Canadian market, must join hands. Mr. Louw is South Africa's Envoy-Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary Washington, United States.

The Cape Argus says:

"H. A. Pare, of the Perishable Products Control Board, points out that monthly consignments of 2,000 odd cases per ship have been going direct to Canada by the Canadian-South African Line. 'The ships run according to the market conditions advised from the Canadian headquarters in London,' he states.

"An official of the Deciduous Exchange explains that fruit shipment to Canada is a costly business before the middle of April, when the ice breaks in the St. Lawrence. 'Early peaches,' he says, 'have to be landed at St. John, New Brunswick, or Halifax, and transported overland to Montreal and Quebec in warmed trucks to prevent the fruit from freezing in a temperature below zero. Later in the season, however, grapes, apples and pears can be transported direct at a reasonable rate. Mr. Louw himself financed these shipments the official continued, so that I cannot believe the blunting that the report of his speech has been garbled. No one knows the present arrangements better than he does.'

"A representative of Messrs. Attwell and Co., agents for the Canada-South Africa Line, suggests that Mr. Louw might have been referring to dried fruit. 'The bulk of this is presently sent via Southampton,' he says, 'but in any case the amount of dried fruit offering is negligible.'"

Unemployed Crowds Were Broken Up

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 1—A meeting of several hundred unemployed at Byward Market last night broke up into two gatherings when a typeturned soldier among the crowd resented statements made by a foreign born speaker and led a number of the workless across the road for a counter meeting. On one platform Communist sentiments were advanced while at the rival platform speakers warned the unemployed not to be led by imported agitators. Local and Royal Canadian Mounted police were present in force but no disorder occurred.

STOCK OR $300,000 CLAIMED FROM BANK

W. R. Boster Sues for Damages for Alleged Conversion

Toronto, Oct. 1.—Damages for alleged conversion of stock now having an aggregate value of $75,000 were claimed yesterday in Osgoode Hall in a special non-jury Assize Court before Mr Justice Masten by W. R. Bonlgy, formerly of Trenton, and now of Toronto, against the Bank of Montreal.

The defense of the Bank of Montreal is that the shares in question were never in its possession. Bonlay, as executor of the estate of the late wife, claims that the shares were pledged with Molsons Bank, later merged with the Bank of Montreal, in 1924, as security for a loan to himself of $1,000, which was repaid in 1925. The repayment of the loan is allowed by the defense.

The stock alleged by the plaintiff to have been deposited in the bank consists of 1,000 shares of Chaput-Hughes, 8,340 shares of Teck-Hughes, 2,000 shares of Lake Shore 2,000 shares of Wright-Hargreaves in old stock, 10 shares of McIntyre, 1,000, shares of Dome mine, 1,000 shares of Hollinger and 2,000 of Continental.

W. R. Willard and Cecil Carrick represent Mr. Bonlay and W. N. Tilley, K.C., and Henry Sankey, the Bank of Montreal.

EDGE OF THE FOREST

It is upon the obscure ring
Of the great darkness within
That the hunter walls and the last Birds sing.

There suddenly
Is the beginning
The single cry
And the trees thinning.

For when the sun comes over the meadow,
Scraping the dry rocks far below,
And passes into the angry hands
Of rotated trees, the dim, flat lands

Recede and above them
Hovers the Night.

She makes all woodlands
But does not love them.

Beneath her stare
All things are royal:
In her dark care
All things are right.

FALL FESTIVAL OF HITS!

TARZAN OF THE APES, No. 45 (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Early the following morning, the men in the cabin were awakened by the booming of a cannon. Clayton rushed out and saw two vessels lying in the harbor. One was the Arrow—the other a small French cruiser. Quickly he ran to light the pile of wood he kept in readiness.

Before the flames arose, Clayton saw in consternation the cruiser steaming away. Stripping off his shirt he waved it back and forth above him. Now the great column of smoke rose high, attracting the attention of the ship's lookout. The cruiser steamed slowly back toward shore. A boat was lowered.

As it beached, a young officer stepped out. Quickly Clayton told their story, ending with Jane's abduction. Lieutenant d'Arnot then narrated the capture of the Arrow; how it had drifted in heavy seas many days without water or food until all but two of the mutineers were dead.

The sight that met the Frenchmen's eyes as they clustered over the ship's side was appalling! Dead and dying rolled upon the pitching deck. Two of the corpses appeared partially dressed. Hunger had changed the mutineers to wild beasts. The sole survivor told the whole ghastly tale to the French commander.

The cruiser then sought the little camp. By the time the two parties had narrated their several adventures, the cruiser's boat returned with supplies and arms. With twenty sailors, they set off upon the hopeless and ill-fated quest into the untracked jungle to find the stolen girl.

POWER TO ENDURE

The power of the human body to bear up against hardship is borne out in the instance of the three fliers rescued some days ago after having been adrift on the face of the ocean for six days.

That is a shining example of the endurance of the body and the mind of man.

But do not the wear and tear of ordinary life prove just the same thing? Only the demonstration is not so striking and so sensational! If the shock and the destruction of brain and body tissue in the course of a serious crisis in private life could be measured, there is not doubt that the people would be amazed at the wonderful piece of work which is called man.

And then to crown it all is the age-old experience—that man may be physically crushed but his mind does not have to give way to depression. The mind or intellect will ride the rough seas and still look danger defiantly in the face.

THAT LEISURE TO COME

What to do with the leisure time which is coming for all the world when there is an adjustment of the inequalities of the hours of labor and when it is predicted, every man will work for a shorter day than at present, is a problem.

Fortunately the crisis will not come so soon that it cannot be faced. Man will be brought into it gradually and will adjust himself to the changed condition.

One thing is certain. He cannot break himself down with lethargy. If he did, he would go back to longer hours and start all over again the rise of civilization. But there are a good many things man will likely be ready for them when they come.

For instance it may be said that we had an experience of shorter hours which were not properly used by the people. Many used them for entertainment and pleasures to the disadvantage of a healthy outlook on life. They are paying for it now. But this is only a lesson from which man may take a warning.

NEW MORONS NOW

There is an adage about the fatal ending of "a whistling girl and a crowing hen" which has come down from time immemorial but never before did the whistlers have so strong an indictment directed against them as the other day in New York when the whistlers were called morons, that is mental deficients to say the least.

Everyone knows there is a common belief that people often whistle to hide their anger, fear or disappointment. Some have also been credited with whistling to tantalize a defeated opponent. But any good thing can be abused and for whistling is crushed by the charge made by Dr. Shaw of New York University who lashes the nuisance as the sound of "imagine Einstein, Mussolini, or Hoover making such notes." this teacher of philosophy suggests.

Whistling as a means of expressing or releasing emotion, he says, "There are still those who pursue the ancient art. Their birdlike tones cannot be heard but they pucker up their lips just the same. They are voicing their low mentality and confessing their sense of defeat."

Dr. Shaw takes the common belief in regard to whistling to keep courage up as the basis of his argument." That's just it except that there's more to the crude act of whistling than artificial affirmation of bravery. A country boy who had to walk home in the dark whistled his way along the lonely road. It never occured to him that he might betray his presence to his supposed foe or that he ought to sneak along on tiptoe. No, he whistled as loudly as he could in order to overcome the foe of fear within his own heart.

"The economic stress of the day, even when we are not as now in the embrace of the bears, is too great for many people. Many feel temporary defeat or a total loss. The streets are filled with such men, but why do they whistle as so many of them do? They show inferiority and reveal defeat but they proceed to advertise this by their impromptu music, which invariably is off the key.

"Whistling is an unmistakable sign of the moron. We might call it a part of his defense mechanism." After he has set up his perpetual barricade of self-protection he sounds a note of war in his foolish whistling. He resolves not to care. He's right and the world wrong.

"No great or successful man ever whistles. Can you think of Einstein or Edison or Mussolini tuning up to 'Just One More Chance,? can you think of President Hoover as whistling? Some of his critics may think that the time has come for him to brace himself by puckering up his lips for 'Yankee Doodle,' but the strength of the Hoover mind and will is such that will be no whistling in the White House.

"No, it's only the inferior and maladjusted individual who ever seeks emotional relief in such a bifdlike act as that of whistling."

Dr. Shaw may be correct yet thousands will deny his conclusion—and there is an end of the matter. Some good men and women here whistle.

IN A CHILD'S EYES

By Alice Michaelis

It is a bit of heaven sometimes
That I surprise,
A hint of far and loveller climes,
In a child's eyes.

There is a gladness pure and sweet,
Not quite of earth,
A joy no shadow can defeat,
In a child's mirth.

Something there is that others miss,
Some radiant gleams
Too rare for worldly wisdom's bliss,
In a child's dreams.

Better than all the treasured things
The years impart,
The echoed beat of angel wings
In a child's heart.

It leads the quickened thought always
To a high goal,
This memory of God that strays
Through a child's soul.

BASEBALL FANS, the world over, have been tuning up their radios for the World Series and hoping that static and other enemies of perfect radio reception take a vacation for the duration of the games. Folks having violet ray and other electric contraptions are requested to kindly refrain from using them while the games are in progress. Our sporting editor says that invalids, hypochondriacs and others can get more electricity out of listening in on Graham McNamee or Ted Husing giving a running account of these great contests than in a dozen electrical machines—so if they will just vary the treatment for a few days everybody will be happy.

HALFPENNY TOKENS which were common currency when men were boys and little women wore pigtails, when for a big copper cent you could purchase a brightly colored stick of candy near a foot long, have disappeared together with the cent stick of candy, but occasionally one bobs up to make a stir in this centless age. The other day a subscriber brought in a halfpenny token of 1816, but this morning, Col. W. G. Ketcheson topped that with a halfpenny token dated1814 which he picked up on his farm in Sidney township. The token was in good state of preservation with the exception of making a striking gesture for the land of the free and the home of the golden calf, or Queensfin. Col. Ketcheson's farm was first occupied by his grandfather in 1800 so the coin must have been dropped there during his occupancy. Col. Ketcheson's farm is noted among other things for the fine grove of maple trees and excellent maple syrup and sugar as anyone who has been privileged to visit the farm during sap season can testify.

MAYOR VISITS THE "JUNGLE"

It was characteristic of Mayor Stewart in his eager concern for the unemployment in the present crisis, to disregard an appointment at the Women's Jail and visit the "jungle" in the Don Valley in person. There he saw for himself the conditions under which the men live, and heard their story from their own lips. The Mayor found a camp of several hundred men, forced by circumstances to shift for themselves until the chance to work returned.

The camp was found unexpectedly clean and orderly, while men presented their case with reason and without self-pity. They had rather a sturdy independence of spirit as evidenced by their creation of shacks as temporary homes and their resolute aim to get work.

A refreshing aspect of the camp is the presence of Union jacks at various points. This gratified Mayor Stewart, who praised the respect shown the flag and warned to the deserving nature of the men on this account.—Toronto Globe.

STATE AND CHILD

"In every country in the world there are some children who, through the death, illness, immorality or crime of their parents or guardians, would stand in the protection and care given them by interested social welfare organizations. This is the case in every civilized and unfortunate children that the government of the province of Ontario is particularly interested and it is true for many years past helped in the work of protection and care, by passing necessary legislation, making money grants, and generally giving instruction and guidance to those engaged in the work." So begins a pamphlet issued by the Ontario Department of public welfare, children's aid branch giving particulars of the special division of responsibilities. It is an extremely interesting document, contributed to which ought to be more generally known. Much to be desired child legislation for the benefits of adults—old age pensions, mother's allowances, etc., but, naturally, the work done on behalf of neglected young citizens is, perhaps, of even greater importance. It is a well-established fact that the criminal classes are recruited largely from the children of "bad" homes, that is to say homes where parents are themselves delinquent or of low moral and mental grade. There are, too, the problems centering around the children who, in this province alone there were 2,180 in this stategory last year, according to official figures, orphans and other unfortunates.—Hamilton Spectator.

LEVEL CROSSING ECONOMICS

At the convention of Canadian Good Roads Association, meeting at Lucerne-in-Quebec last week, W. G. Robertson, of Ontario Motor League mentioned the fact that the crossings of this province as a factor contributing to the motor accident total. Whereupon, according to a press despatch, the department was made by A. D. Ferguson, of the Canadian National Railways bureau of economics, that level crossing accidents, while spectacular, were responsible for only 10 per cent. of violent deaths in Canada in any year. The report continues:

"Virtually all of these deaths could be avoided by care on the part of motor drivers. As the motor vehicle was responsible for the level crossing menace, the motor owner should pay for the elimination of these crossings, Mr. Ferguson said. It would cost $4,400,000 to avoid a single death, he estimated basing the estimate on the cost of eliminating the crossings on the number killed at each crossing."

Of course the motor vehicle is not "responsible for the level crossing menace." In most cases the public highway was in use before the railway crossed it, and, furthermore, horse-drawn vehicles were struck and their occupants killed or injured before the advent of the motorcar. Since the use of motor vehicles became widespread the number of crossing watchmen, gates and signals has been greatly augmented, and it is that regard it may be said that motor traffic has been responsible for reducing hazard.

It is therefore not logical to say that car owners should pay for crossing elimination. Railway companies are properly required to contribute in cases where the line crossed an existing highway. The Dominion contributes through the Grade Crossing Fund, and the province or municipality pays the remainder fit the interest of public safety and, in some instances, to

OUT OF THE SURF

by Dorothy Radcliffe Scoville

"I really don't quite understand how your father feels about things," Johnny Pitt said one night. "He knows we haven't had the exppience he's had and he doesn't know what we would do if we had to — I don't myself!"

"Could do your duty!" said Nance without hesitation. "And then everything would be easy after that — she added provocatively.

"Everything!" Johnny Pits held her hand a little tighter.

"Yes—" promised Nance shyly.

Captain Zach would look at the station in another day and Johnny would go there for supper and then Nance and he would sit in front of the fireplace and talk. The evening away.

"You know — I can understand — wind — they've sent up a flare —"

That was the night the northeasterly came without warning and caused such havoc along shore. Johnny hustled into oilskins and boots and with the rest of the crew rushed down to the boathouse on the beach. In an instant the big doors were back and the lifeboat was sliding down the rollers into the tumbling surf.

In Nance, watching with her mother on the shore, it seemed that the tiny white lifeboat would never get off the beach, and then when it had disappeared in the blackness there were hours of anxiety before it came back.

How the crew of South Side Coast Guard station fought their way out to the doomed schooner and came back with the eleven men from her crew, is still talked of in Little Harbor. Captain Zach, back on duty again, went about the village beaming with hups pride, while Johnny Pitt reddened to his ears whenever anyone mentioned the rescue. Everyone, that is except Nance. Only Nance knew that she had had a finger in the making of a hero, and being wise, she said nothing of it. Johnny had told her all about it, as if an explanation of the rescue were necessary.

"Of course it was only doing my duty," said Johnny, "but I kept thinking how everything would be easy if I could only get that crew safe ashore—"

"And wasn't it!" asked Nance triumphantly.

He kissed her for answer, while Captain Zach pussyfooted softly off in the other direction.

THE FOUR MARX BROTHERS IN NEW, HIGH PRESSURE FARCE

With the second anniversary week of the Belle Theatre rapidly drawing to a close it is hard to be told that Manager George J. Ferguson has never before presented a film attraction as popular as that which has featured Theodore Dreiser's great novel, "An American Tragedy," and "Monkey Business", revealing the Four Marx Brothers, with which open for a three-day run this afternoon.

Grim, realistic tragedy was the keynote of "An American Tragedy". It will take an expert microscopist to discover any tragedy in "Monkey Business." Groucho Marx with his pestalliating wise-cracks, would be a picture all by himself. When he is backed by his three brothers, Harpo, Chico and Zeppo the masterpiece is assured. The Marx Brothers make but one picture a year but that production is eagerly awaited from coast to coast. There is no more quaintete in the film world than the Marx Brothers.

Mixed generously with this humorous trio of "slapstick" humour, there is the finest music that can be heard at any price. New York music lovers pay fabulous prices to hear the world's great harpists. Harpo Marx, for his skerning, is considered by music critics to take his place in the galaxy of star harpists of the world. In his present picture he hurled the axe at Steinway's of north America with his masterful handling of this instrument and he does not disappoint in the new picture "Monkey Business". Once again Chico Marx, too, shows just how a piano can be played well and yet get a laugh.

And, as a final treat, a junior feature has been added to the bill. This is a production known as "Today and Yesterday", depicting the progress that has been made in every walk of life in the past twenty years. The camera takes us back two decades ago and shows us some of the customs which we nowadays consider quaint and queer.

Truck Smashes Guarnerius Violin

New York, Sept. 30.—A Guarnerius violin, made in 1691 by Giuseppe Antonio Guarneri, valued at $25,000, and the gift of August Heckscher, Philanthropist, to a promising student of music, was crushed by a truck last night at Fifth Avenue and Forty-Third street.

The violin was the property of Harry Brown, who said he would make his debut in January at Carnegie Hall, sponsored by Lieutenant-Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York, entered the east Forty-First street precinct crying, and told of the accident.

Eleanor Boardman, Lucille La Verne, William Bakewell and John Mack Brown in a scene from "The Great Meadow", at the Capitol Theatre, Thursday, Friday.

"THE GREAT MEADOW"

An engrossing epoch epic of American history is "The Great Meadow" Charles Brabin's striking talking picture, which opens tonight at the Capitol Theatre for two days.

Brabin and his collaborator on the story, Edith Ellis, have made a highly convincing talking picture version of the much-discussed novel by Elizabeth Madox Roberts. They have blended into a vivid epic of a story replete with pioneer adventure, love and hatred it with appropriate sprinkings of strong drama, comedy and pathos.

The story swirls around Dicon Hall, who marries Berk Jarvis on the eve of that leader's departure from Virginia, for Kentucky as head of the first band of pioneers to cross the Daniel Boone trail to Fort Harrod in the latter-named state. Evan Muir, an early discon important factor in a highly pointed suing of Dicon, becomes dramatic Enoch Arden twist which completes the tale.

John Mack Brown Scores

John Mack Brown repeats his triumph of "Billy the Kid" with his Berk Jarvis. This husky young man is ideal for these rough and ready roles, and his charming Southern accent fits perfectly into the characterization.

Eleanor Boardman is delightful as Dicon. In the scene concerning the birth of her child she gives a moving interpretation of the trials and the bravery of the pioneer woman. Gertrude Gordon, of Greta Garbo's "Romance," is a strong and vital Evan Muir.

Lucille La Verne is dynamic as the sturdy pioneer mother, Elvira Jarvis, whose death at the hands of Black Fox, an Indian chief, supplies important motivation for the story.

Other Good Performances

Russell Simpson and Sarah Padden are very convincing as Virginian pioneers, and especially fine performances are contributed by Anita Louise, Guinn Williams and Helen Jerome Eddy.

Tonight, ladies will be presented with gifts of E.P.M.A. silverware Desert Packs with the compliments of the manager.

London, Sept. 30—Disorder broke out yesterday between a group of unemployed and a large force of police outside the House of Commons, but it ended in general laughter when some 30 Blackers in shorts jogged by at the end of a practice run.

In attempting to clear the area, in which demonstrations are strictly prohibited, mounted police made several charges and used their clubs on men who attempted to drag them from their horses. No casualties were reported, although several arrests were made.

Split $50,000 With Partner Says Counsel

Toronto, Sept. 30—The sum of $50,000 which John Aird, Jr., received from the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission for services rendered, was split with his partner, R. W. Millard, according to a statement made yesterday by Aird's counsel, G. Hughes. He was addressing W. A. Smith, commissioner of the Court of Revision, during the hearing of Aird's appeal against being assessed on an income of $174,925 for 1930.

Aird's original income return for 1929 had been for $4,125, J. Palmer Kent, assistant city solicitor, stated during the brief proceedings. It was after his receipt of the $50,000 from the Provincial Hydro and the $125,000 from Beauharnois Interests had been brought to light that he was instructed to revise his income return for the year 1929. He had then placed the total at $179,000.

After half an hour's hearing, the case was adjourned for two weeks so that the original bank forms showing the payment to Millard of $30,419 might be produced and evidence taken for the city from Millard.

Driverless Car Fatally Hurts Man

Toronto, Sept. 30—Pinned against a pile of bricks by a driverless car here, his home just after he had started for his daily walk late yesterday afternoon, Charles Purkis aged 81, of 456 Northcliffe Boulevard was so seriously injured that he died six hours later in the Toronto Western Hospital.

The old man had just left the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. Cash where he had been living for the past eight years when the car which was parked at the curb suddenly started down a hill and after travelling 100 feet turned west, jumped the curb, and crushed him against a 16-foot pile of bricks near a partly-constructed house.

Both his legs were broken and he received severe head injuries. He was treated by Dr. C. W. Dales before going to the hospital.

The car is owned by Richard Maulton, 426 Caledonia Road. It is not known what started the car, the owner maintaining that the brakes were on when he left it.

While in Toronto it is entirely likely that Mr. Bennett will confer informally with party leaders there, and it is considered quite within the realm of possibility that the political aspect of Mr. Matthews' appointment will be discussed.

Who is Ruler of Uncle Sam's Navy?

Washington, Sept. 30.—The question as to which is the ruler of the United States Navy, the President and Congress representing the people of the country, or the Navy Department, is raised in Washington. The prospect of a first-class row between the administration and the big navy element, a row long brewing in quiet yesterday furnished a welcome diversion from the continual harping on gold, bankers and unemployment ringing in official ears for weeks. It became known President Hoover proposed to slice estimates for the navy for 1933, the cut to be made by a reorientation of strength.

THE GAY BANDIT OF THE BORDER

by
TOM GILL

He looked quickly about him, then laid a finger on her lips.

"Dark secrets like that," he cautioned, "deserve closed doors."

"You yourself deserve a closed and bolted door." She drew him to a chair before her dressing table. "It's been days—days—and days. Whatever you don't come I want to go to that ridiculous little major over in Verdi and say: 'Give me your bags of gold pesos and I'll tell you who El Coyote is.' He is your friend, Ramon, dear major, but still he is a damned unsatisfactory lover." Then what would your fat major do?"

"Speak you and send you back to me, I hope. If he let you escape I'd have nothing in the border country to live for."

"Strange man—as if anyone really mattered to you." Again her long white fingers pressed his cheeks. "Even I, who could easily die for you."

He smiled up at her, then abruptly rose. "When are you playing next?"

"Not for an hour—never if you will stay."

"I'd like to stay always, God knows. Here where there is peace and security and a very beautiful child to spoil me. Only—"

"Only you would get so weary of peace and security after a day or two. You never rest, you never lose yourself—even in love. Already you are glancing at that clock of mine and you haven't been here two minutes."

"It's because I have Radcliffe downstairs—I promised to come back."

"Your young giant? They talk of nothing else here."

"What do they say?"

"Everything. Some say he is Jito's master. Some say that Jito is willing for a chance to tear your Americano apart. They say too he is in love with Adela Morales." She stopped, with a cigarette half way to her lips. "That might be fatal."

Bob nodded. He raised one hand, those long white hands to his lips. "All the secrets of the border come to you, little Ann, sooner or later."

She looked about her at the heavily draped room. "Always secrets, and then times when every man will talk to a woman of the thing nearest him, and so I learn. I think the very ghosts of secrets must cling about every corner of this room, and behind every tapestry. Most of them are sad little unimportant secrets, but some of them have the power to wreck human lives. And all these tales that pass bring me are at the disposal of this imperious Don Bob. Not," she added, "because I am a damn about his border crusade—I merely happen to love him."

Suddenly she laughed. "Last night that young Mexican captain of cavalry was downstairs. It is he who tells me their plans against you.

"Tell me next week that they are to wait in force along the Verdi road down by the mesa. . . He was still very angry because the major let that peon escape."

Bob smiled. "The major didn't. I came back and released him." His eyes grew thoughtful. "He's going to hint along the Verdi road. When Manuel comes tomorrow, get him word for the band to keep back in the foothills. Tell him that on Thursday I'll lead them in a raid." Bob turned toward the girl and smiled gravely down at her. "If you only knew how indispensable you are in every way." His hand touched her shoulder. "And how desirable."

The woman's body thrilled a little at his touch, and a mist played before her eyes. "That I tell is nothing. You know I would do anything for you."

The man said nothing, but walked across to the dressing table and took one of her long cigarettes. He stretched out comfortably on her chaise lounge.

"Have you ever heard of say piece of land owned in the name of Radcliffe?"

She shook her head.

"Probably it doesn't exist, but Ted thinks his father bought land here in the old days. He has sent back Blast for maps and records. In the meantime—" A knee jerkily came open." He smiled. "You know, Ann, I think I'll disturb you—but still after me?"

She laughed. "That must give you grave concern."

"It does. Out of danger. One of them is that any traitors in my band would be more likely to give information to Blount than they would to the Mexican soldiers. They have greater confidence in Blount's ability to protect them, and they know that if he promises a reward he will pay. The major has let it out that someone in the band is already free the Rich Ranch's gold." He may know much of his raids. He may be able to rule. Tell Manuel what I have said —have him send anyone he may suspect to me." Bob smiled reflectively. "I should not like to kill this dog without good cause. But neither can I wait until it is too late."

"And if you find him?"

"My dear, what would I do- This is not work for sentimentalists. For two years I have existed because I strike first. That is a fundamental rule of warfare and this is border warfare, so I strike— must I am a killer. Does that disturb you, my dear?"

There came again to the girl that look of submission and utter yielding to this man.

"How little you know women. Nothing you do disturbs me. To me your little finger is worth more than the life of all your band, for I find you in every way perfect." Bob rose and, walking to where she stood, took her face in his hands. For a long time he looked down into her great black eyes. Then at last he shook his head. "You make me wonder, Ann, why all this loveliness and youth of yours should end in any way desirable, and you make me wonder too, what all this loveliness and youth of yours is ultimately destined for."

"Old enough."

"One is never old if one loves. That is your tragedy, Bob, you have never really loved. If you could give yourself as I give myself, freely, happily and utterly, you would never be old. Why have you never loved, really?"

The man patted her cheek and for answer lighted another cigarette. "When you were about five years old, I had already learned a little about this thing called love. The girl who taught me that dangerous station decided at last that there were better men in the world than I. So she chose a better one. And since then, little Ann, life has never seemed a very important or vital business, even in the game I am playing now. That may be why I can't seem to fall in love."

He smoked for a time. "Love, I think, has come to this Radcliffe boy, and that way danger lies. Morales suspects it. Jito suspects. Once they are sure of it, once they believe Adela cares for him." Bob shrugged his shoulders. "Morales will issue orders."

"Does your giant foreman know you are El Coyote?"

"I never want him to know. What I do is my own affair. I can't drag him into it. The kid has had a hard enough road since he came here. I want him to go on as foreman for Don Bob—whatever comes."

"But he must know sometime, Bob."

"When it is all over."

"And that will be?"

"Soon. One way or another it will all be over soon. Either I win or I lose. I think the border is ready to declare itself and follow me. Already I am planning to strike—one suggest and all the country will follow us. And if we fail—"

"Yes?"

"Then I shall kidnap Mendoza's star singer and take her to some quiet island where there are no bandits or peons or tyranny, except the tyranny of love."

Submissively she laid her dark head on his arm. "And I could have you to myself," she murmured. "Bob, I am so tired of revolutions and their hates and secrets. What does it matter about these peons, whether they are free or slaves? Always something is happening. All this is an ass—and it is only love that matters."

Bob smiled. He looked down at her with a vast tenderness. "Ann," he said, "you are unbelievably precious of sentiment. Now I must go. Tell Manuel to be waiting." He raised her long, delicate fingers, and I put my life in these pretty white hands."

"And if these pretty white hands should betray you?"

He shrugged. "I should say that you would be part of the great game. Yet even then it would sadden me to destroy this lovely body of yours, for I am really very fond of you."

"I wonder," she questioned. "I wonder if you are really fond of anyone."

From the open door Don Bob smiled back. "There are one or two people I have a great affection for, Ann mia, and you are the loveliest of them all."

For a long time after the door had closed the girl sat staring into the mirror before her. At last she smiled, and once again she touched those lips of her with decent carmine.

CHAPTER XXI

As summer gave way to autumn, the whole world about Verdi found itself girding for war. News of approaching revolutions from Mexico City added to the unrest. All knew that if the Mexican government should fall, or find its hands filled with revolution, Morales would flare up, spread on his own vaqueros alone. So both sides built, ruthlessly but secretly, and men rode the Mexican ranges cautiously, not knowing friend from foe.

From time to time the war department prodded the little army to see that he would not slacken his pursuit of El Coyote. And although Blount hunted early and late, following every vagrant clue, he had only the memory of long, fruitless pursuits through sun-baked desert as a reward for all his efforts. Aunt Clara was the chief beneficiary.

"It's doing the major a world of good," she said more than once, to his discomfort. "The dear man's figure is absolutely serious, and his digestion is strong as an ostrich's again. These little games of hide-and-seek are making a new man of him. I wonder if El Coyote knows he's being chased? It has never interfered with his activities."

But, as a matter of fact, it had. Don Bob, throughout that torrid summer, had spent long days back in the Mexican hills, laying his plans, keeping his men scattered. Rich groups that dared meet openly for an ambushed raid and a quick retreat to the hills again.

Bayside W. M. S.

The regular meeting of the Women's Association of Bayside United Church was held on Wednesday afternoon, September 23rd, at the home of Mrs. Leonard Reid with the president, Mrs. Wright in the chair.

The meeting opened with hymn 383 "Rescue the Perishing" followed by the Lord's Prayer repeated in unison. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Glenn Meyers. Minutes of last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Frank Reid. Mrs. Chandler Green, the treasurer was absent and Mrs. Glenn Meyers thanked the association for the lovely flowers that were sent her husband.

It was decided to have another meeting soon in order to choose how to raise some money for the association. Hymn 234 "My Faith Looks up to Thee" was sung. The president thanked Mrs. Reid for the lovely lunch she had served and our open ing hymn. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Hacker closed the meeting with prayer.

We have not made so much progress as the chatter of the times would suggest.—Sherry Fest.

Today's Verse

MADEMISTIC

You would have kept it, too, I know
you would!
There is such a crase for modernistic stuff!
Umm; yes, I know it is bizarre, but then,
Those modern things cannot look bizarre enough!
It is art or bellik work—just stopped and inhaled,
With black on white; oh, yes; of course I have!
It would have looked much nealer
Had, been all black, not just its
Only now
And if its feet had been left white instead
Of half and half—and if that inky blot
Had not soaked in around one greenish eye,
It would have been less freakish,
Ilke as not!
Snow-white it would have been too sweet; you are right!
But sweetness is pase in looks just now,
Cool-black, it might have made a silhouette
But silhouettes are passing — anyway I'm glad
You would have kept it, too, I know
you would!
If it had followed you down some dark street
Where you could only hear it purr
And feel it twisting warmly round your feet!

APPALLED BY TOLL

Peterboro, Sept. 30—The number of tires taken on the highways of this province is appalling," said Mr. Justice Wright in addressing the grand jury at the opening of the sessions of the Supreme Court of Ontario here this afternoon. "Under courts and jurors impress upon drivers of cars that they must pay care, there will be no restriction upon persons driving automobiles," continued His Lordship. "It goes thus to impress upon the unusual loss situation that now confronts the courts in connection with deaths caused by automobiles on the highways."

What snowy clothes—with these rich safe suds!

THERE'S no mystery to the ever-growing popularity of Rinso. Women like gleaming, snow-white clothes. And Rinso washes clothes the whitest ever . . . safely!

Then, too, Rinso saves hard work. Its thick, creamy suds soak out the dirt. There's no scrubbing, no boiling. Saves the clothes; easy on the hands, too. The makers of 37 washing machines recommend it.

Cupful for cupful, Rinso gives over twice as much suds as lightweight, puffed-up soaps because it's granulated, compact. Get the BIG household package. Try it for dishes, too!

ST. THOMAS' GREETS VICAR

Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne and Mrs. Payne Welcomed to Parish

Most hearty and happy was the reception tendered to the new Vicar of St. Thomas', Rev. and Mrs. A. Beauchamp Payne and Mrs. Payne by a large gathering of the parishioners at the parish house, Wednesday evening. Everything was very tastefully decorated with an abundance of flowers and the affair, which was a most pleasing one in appearance, the environment being conducive to the happy socializing which was entered into by all present. The reception was given under the auspices of the Women's Guild and as is usual with their undertakings the arrangements were perfect; nothing was overlooked which would in any way add to the evening, the great success which it proved to be. Mr. C. Arthur Tillson, President of the Women's Guild, received with Rev. and Mrs. Payne and Mrs. Payne, who were most happy in greeting their many friends.

Mr. John Elliott, who is always an ideal chairman in a very happy address conveyed to Mr. and Mrs. Payne and their young son the sincere and hearty welcome of the parishioners and congregation. He said he had enjoyed knowing Mr. Payne for some time and had met on many occasions at Diocesan Synod and he referred to the delightful time in which Mr. Payne is held in the councils of the Diocese and in the estimation of his fellow clergy. He made mention of the successful work done by Mr. Payne in Western Canada, prior to coming to the Diocese of Ontario. He felt quite confident that whole-hearted cooperation would be given to Rev. Payne by the members of St. Thomas' Church congregation and that his labors in the parish would be eminently successful.

Rev. Mr. Vere Ivan is an interesting and bright address expressed sincere appreciation of the very kindly welcome given to Mrs. Payne in his boys and girls work in the parish. Mr. Payne said, much kindness had been shown to them—their coming here and that they had been made most happy. He was looking forward to a satisfactory year with his parochial work in the old and historical Church of St. Thomas' and he asked for the loyal and active co-operation of the parishioners.

During the evening very enjoyable vocal solos were given by Mr. Harold Howard, Mr. Alfred Evans and Spencer Wood, and Mrs. Gerry Hunter, in her usual pleasing manner, added an encore number.

The dainty and abundant refreshments served by the members of the ladies of the Guild were, indeed, most enjoyable. The table was beautifully set and artistically arranged; exquisite roses and graceful green ferns and fern fronds and sticks, created a most delightful effect. Mrs. A. McClintock was in charge of the arrangement of the tables and the following assisted: Mrs. H. A. Thomson and Mrs. E. A. Geen very graciously presided at the tea table, assisted by Mrs. Wood coffee.

The evening was truly most enjoyable and marked in a very happy way the start of Rev. and Mrs. Payne and their young son, Beauchamp and David, in their new home in St. Thomas and to the City of Belleville.

MALE MEMBERS DEFEAT LADIES

Men Restricted to Use of Midiron in Their Play

Plenty of entertainment was provided, when the men and women met in a freak contest at the Belleville Golf Club on Wednesday afternoon. The women were allowed to use all the mashies necessary for this ancient game, while the men were restricted to the use of one club, the midiron. Thirty pairs teed off and the women were unable to win one match, Mrs. Russell Smith defeating Earl Bryce very close at the eighteenth hole and Mrs. H. Scott tied her opponent, P. G. Allen. Prizes were awarded for the greens, low net and sealed hole, and some close scores were turned in for these competitions. Mrs. W. H. Reeves won the low net for the women with a card of 100, while Mrs. Harold Hanna had the low net with 75. Mrs. Virgil James won the sealed hole, here being the lowest score for the hole picked by the committee. Arthur MacCoubrey won the low net prize for the men with an 86, a fine score considering he used but one club for the 18 holes. Mike Howe, O. H. Scott and W. H. Reeves tied for low net with 77, while Earl Bryce was the winner of the low gross with 72. The scorekeeper did not give the name of the figure of the number of strokes taken.

At the conclusion of the match the whole company repaired to the spacious club house, where tea was served and a social half hour spent around the cozy grate fire. The occasion is fast drawing to a close and the Belleville Club has enjoyed a most prosperous year in all branches.

GREEN BOW TIES AND WEE HATS GARB OF ALBERT FRESHIES

Freshmen Undergo Mild Form of Initiation Ceremony

Initiation night was in order at the Albert College hat evening. All of the "Freshies" or newcomers on the way the First Year Men, were lined up in front of the school and marched in single file in a parade the main streets of Belleville under penalty. The parade then took the matter with all seriousness and proceeded upon their way. They paraded down the school down to Front street were marched up as far as the upper bridge and then were told to about face and march back again. The leaders were also a bit weary but with that freshman fear clung of dignity and commands. The boys gave the citizens a rare treat when they endeavored to sing their college songs while parading down Front street. While parading down in imitation of the famous snake-dance when they started to weave in and about while parading in single file. Upon their arrival back at the school the "freshies" were told that they had a treat in store for them. Now exactly what it was of course were overjoyed to hear this good news but were disappointed at the grandstand they were received with a little different attitude. The boys were then ordered called upon to do some stunts for the amusement of the older pupils.

After the seniors had had their fill of amusement they took the "freshies" into the dining room where refreshments were served. Here the boys were a little while. As another mark of inferiority the "freshies" must wear green bow ties and small Princess Rosette hats for a few days. The boys were then told that they would be called upon to prove their worth to the school by singing some feat similar to that they had so graciously just performed. The youngsters are visibly wended their way to their beds wondering just what kind of an initiation ceremony they could many feature for next year.

Larkin, which was accepted some months ago by the Canadian Legion, Province for Canada House, has just been placed in position at the corner of the main chancel. CONJECTURES ARE ENDED STATISTICS THROWN AWAY AS CARDS AND A'S BATTLE

Gabby Street Will Depend on First Year Rookie As Hurler

GROVE LIKELY

Series Promises Many Tense Moments Before Completion

St. Louis, Oct. 1 (AP)—The curtain parted today, conjecture ended and argument ceased, and on the great stage of baseball was thrown once more the annual drama of the world series.

All the statistics diamond scientists could muster were tossed into yeast baskets. All the predictions of all the brave declarations of hope and confidence slipped into the background. And on the battlefield of Thursday dented Sportsman's Park, the rival champions of Philadelphia Athletics and Cardinals of St. Louis Cardinals in athletic parlance, first joined in the 1931 world series.

Seventy-odd since the first of the diamond's great heroes, now shrouded by chimerical memories, swung into action in the starters' box. Of these fall battles, has been a setting so tense in the minds of pugnacious fans as this appeal to baseball men and the faithful alike.

Maybe, Three Straight

For two straight years the Philadelphia Athletics, champions of the American League and one of the most powerful baseball machines assembled, have mazed into subjection the champions of the National League.

At their head, Mahout of the White Elephants, Connie Mack, the tall, lean old, tall' stately, time-ridden, retiring to stalk before the curtain falls on his career, possibilities, or wide in his appeal to baseball men and the faithful alike.

Maybe, Three Straight

For two straight years the Philadelphia Athletics, champions of the American League and one of the most powerful baseball machines assembled, have mazed into subjection the champions of the National League.

At their head, Mahout of the White Elephants, Connie Mack, the tall, lean old, tall' stately, time-ridden, retiring to stalk before the curtain falls on his career, possibilities, or wide in his appeal to baseball men and the faithful alike.

In his ranks are three of the outstanding players of the period—Jimmy Dykes, Al Simmons, the battling champion, and Mickey Cochrane, greatest of the present day catchers: On the firing line he has Lefty Grove, the lanky hickburn one, probably the outstanding pootpower of all times, "Big Jarge". Earnshaw, the burly right hander, Rube Walberg, another lefty, the veterans Max Bishop and Eddie Rommel and the youngsters, Hank McDonald and Leroy Mahaffey.

Riddled By Injuries

Against this formidable array, the National League mustered the Cardinals, battered by injuries, whipped in six games last fall by these same Athletics. For the Red Birds of Gabby Street it was more than just a struggle for fame and the gold that comes of world series victory. It was a battle for vindication of the league itself, and the calibre of ball in the circuit, that has sent its last four champions out to defeat at the hands of the American club-holders. Another victory for the Athletics in this series would set a new record for straight series victories in the inter-league competition.

But against this background of history making possibilities, there stood out the possibility of individual drama overshadowing all else.

For instead of pinning his faith on grizzled Burleigh Grimes, the substituted split-ball hurler, who lost two tough games to the A's last fall or depending for the all important triumph in the brief seven game fray on his veterans, Letty Bill Hallahan, Flint Rhem, Sylvester Johnson, or Jim Lindsey, all with world series experience, the old sergeant, Gabby Street, sent out a rookie to carry the load of a man.

He was Paul Derringer, 5 feet, 7 inches of carrying, but with one of the finest first year records ever compiled in the National League. Never before had a world series man ager ever gambled in the starting game of the classic with such inexperienced material.

Only once before has the history of the historical series recorded anything to compare with the choosing of Derringer as the number one pitching hope of the Cards. In 1909 another youngster, Babe Adams, stepped into the series against the with the Pittsburgh Pirates against the Detroit Tigers. He won three games for the Pirates and was the sensation of the day, but he had been tried out in the majors twice before although his service had been brief both times.

Grove Likely

To climax the pitching drama and bring out the widest possible pitching contrasts on the two clubs, the experts, betting in place of a manager, who will not talk about such things, selected Grove as the Athletics' opening hurler.

The big Lumsonning Lefty is everything that Derringer is not. A veteran, now, rounding thirteen, the swiftest hurler of the day, Grove broke all modern southpaw records by winning 31 games for his club in the American League season.

The Cardinals beat him last fall.

Cardinal injuries, plus the all-around inexperience of the National League champions in recent series, have aided in making the Athletics an 8 to 5 favorite to make history in the present classic.

The all star game—Today and Friday, Saturday Tuesday and Wednesday in Philadelphia, Thursday and Friday and Saturday here if if more are necessary start at 1:30 p.m. C. S. T. in St. Louis, E. S. T. in Philadelphia.

NO LOCAL MEN ON 1ST DRAFT

Unemployment Situation Will Be Well Taken Care of

No men from Belleville will go north on the first draft for the construction work on the trans-Canada highway.

That is clear from what can be learned from those in close touch with the local unemployment situation.

At the meeting called by Mayor Reid tonight something very concrete, it is expected, will be brought forward. The city list and the list of unemployed registered by Mr. Lorne Greene of the Employment Bureau will have been gone over and will be used as the basis of statistics and plans put before the meeting.

Mayor Reid and his associates have a close watch of the situation and are devoting intense study to the problem.

Short Selling May Be Barred

Washington, D.C., Oct. 1—Unless the stock exchanges themselves act, Senator Watson of Indiana, believes congress will legislate safe guards against short selling by speculators who seek profits through depression of security values.

The Republican leader of the Senate' yesterday warned the exchanges that members of congress were convinced these transactions were retarding recovery from the depression and stood ready to go to quire into the practice.

Because of his position as administration pilot on Capitol Hill, it was believed here that Senator Watson reflected also the view of high government officials toward the recent bear raids in the stock market.

THREE YEARS FOR MAIMING

Sanford Hope Sentenced For Running Down Cycle Cop

Hamilton, Oct., Oct. 1.—Convicted of maiming a traffic constable, Sanford Hope, 24, was yesterday sentenced to serve three years in Portsmouth Penitentiary by Magistrate Vance in county police court.

According to evidence brought out at the trial, Hope had been drinking on the night the accident occurred, August 18. Driving at a high rate of speed on the Hamilton-Caledonia highway Hope drew the attention of Constable Morris who attempted to stop him. Hope instead knocked Morris from his motor cycle and left him lying in the ditch seriously injured.

He then drove back to Hamilton, where he was arrested.

The magistrate told Hope he would not impose a maximum penalty because he believed the prisoner was too drunk at the time to know what he was doing. The Criminal Code provides a maximum penalty of life imprisonment.

FATHER, SON QUESTIONED

Police Refuse to Give Any Clue to Information Gathered

Daytona Beach, Fla., Oct. 1.—A father and son were held today for questioning in connection with the slaying of Mrs. Gladys Lange Ritchie in Long Island, New York.

Police were detaining L. D. Ritchie, 51, and William E. Ritchie, 23, yesterday, although no report with information, if any, was obtained in preliminary questioning of the two.

Ritchie, who was a winter resident in South Norfolk, Conn., formerly operated a boarding house with William Smith, whose body was washed ashore by the waters of Long Island Sound, Tuesday far from the place where the Collings' murder was committed. New York authorities think Smith may have been the "wounded man" mentioned by Mrs. Collings in her story of her husband's murder by an elderly man and a youth," on board their yacht.

The Ritchies arrived here Sunday from Connecticut. They have lived here at various times for the past 12 years.

Canada Soon to Lead With Gold

Washington, Oct. 1 —Simultaneously with the announcement of the new gold strike on the big Salmon River, in southern Yukon, expert mineralogists here expressed the opinion that there was small hope of an increase in gold production in the United States. They predicted Canada would shortly surpass the United States in production, and take second place next to South Africa, which annually produces some $200,000,

By The Observer

Late despatches from St. Louis last night stated that Paul Derringer, youthful baseball pitcher, would start today's game against the Athletics. Considering that this is Derringer's first season in the "big show" this honor that has been bestowed upon him is almost a record for all time. Namely that a first year pitcher be given the assignment of opening game of a World's Series. Witness will, no doubt, be Derringer's battery mate. Manager Gabby Street also stated that it was a 50-50 chance that Sparky Adams would be able to fill his regular position at third base.

Manager Street said yesterday: "Connie Mack may be able to outsmart us, but he can't outplay us." Well there is nothing like confidence.

The "Old Fox," Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, has not stated who he would start as pitcher in the opening game. Most of the sport writers and also the Cardinal players look for Robert Moses Lefty Grove to set them, Mr. Mack may fool them and start a veteran pitcher. But with the weather probabilities stating cloudy weather for today, it would be Louis it is more than likely a left hand pitcher will be used by the "A's."

The four umpires, who have assigned to officiate in the series, will split exactly $19,000, between them for their work. It matters not whether there are four games or seven, they receive the same salary. (Not bad considering the hours, from 1 to 3,

A dispatch from Toronto yesterday stated that the Toronto Maple Leafs were ready to offer pitchers Earle Cook, and Al Yarnell of the St. George's a contract for next season. Perhaps Vice-President James Dunn is still smarting over the loss of Vince Barton, who, the late Jack Dunn of the Baltimore Orioles, signed right under the nose of the Toronto magnate.

It might be added that Cook hails from Stouffville while Yarnell comes from Moreton. This does not speak so good for the Toronto born pitchers as both of these boys learned their twirling before they were moved to the Queen City. The Toronto St. George's are at present batting with the Gail "Terriers," in Ontario's baseball classic and it is worth noting the fact that Toronto's two star pitchers, Yarnell and Cook, are imports, and did not learn the game in "Hog Town." This proving the fact that just as good or perhaps better ball players are to be found outside the city limits of Toronto.

The first game of the City League play-downs between the Kiwanis and the Firemen scheduled for yesterday afternoon had to be postponed as "the service boys" could not field a team. The question now arises will the "Firefighters" claim the game as being won, inasmuch as the second game when the Oddfellows and the K. of C. met to decide the winner of first place in the league, the K. of C. won by the score of 19 to 9 after a hitter struggle.

Anybody with a flair for figures can estimate how many runs Babe Ruth had to his credit for his 600 home runs, amassed over a span of ten years. Also the 200 feet around the bases and 600 times that is 216,000 feet. That's 72,000 yards or about 41 miles.

Georgia Tech's football players expect to take the wallops incidental to gridiron play during the approaching season with a smile. They will wear new model headgears, invented by Coaches Alexander and Clay, which are claimed to be shockproof.

Bottoms of lakes and ponds where there is much picturesque matter are usually devoid of oxygen.

MICKEY COCHRANE

HE GOT AN EARLY BREAK FOR HIS JOB WITH A TRADE TO THE ATHLETICS

Mickey Cochrane, the great Philadelphia Athletic catcher will again be behind the bat—no mistake about it—when Connie Mack's squad clash with the St. Louis Cards tomorrow. We have been hearing for a long time that Mickey is sick, a victim of dire things, etc., etc. But when the time comes he is ready. Mickey, on his record is, if not the greatest, at least one of the finest catchers in the history of the game, and what a pot-

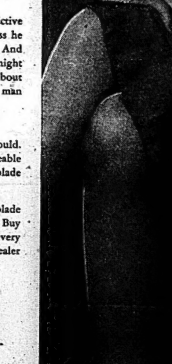
CORRECT CLOTHING FOR MEN

"Your morning shave is badly shopworn at midnight"

"I'M not trying to sell razors or razor blades. I don't shave and I don't give testimonials. But I'd like to tell you what I think of men who don't shave carefully. I believe my opinion really means something because I'm a hostess in a night club and we girls must take them as they come. So we learn as much about men in a week as the average girl learns in a lifetime.



"Of course it really doesn't make much difference to me, but you'd be surprised at the number of men who think their morning shaves will last until midnight and later. Along about 11 o'clock they're nobody's bargain and I wouldn't dance with them if I didn't earn my living that way.

"My experience has taught me that a man can't be attractive along about the time the milkman starts delivery, unless he takes a clean shave before he steps out for the evening. And speaking of milkmen—what I've said doesn't apply to night club customers alone. Most men aren't as particular about shaving as they should be. To get along with women a man should be clean shaven all the time."

Yes, few men shave as frequently or carefully as they should. Until now shaving may have been a somewhat disagreeable task. Now Gillette is manufacturing a fine new razor blade that can be used morning and night without discomfort.

It never irritates or roughens the tenderest skin. Every blade is equally keen. Try the new Gillette on our guarantee. Buy a package and use a blade or two. If you don't agree every shave is cool and pleasant, return the package to your dealer and get your money back.

Back Once Broken, He Plays Rugby, Now Neck is Broken

Reuben Getschow Called Greatest "Iron Man"

MAY RECOVER

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 1.—Iron men? Why, you haven't heard anything yet until you've read the story of Reuben Getschow.

Reuben may come and go but the 23-year-old youth from Appleton, Wis., promises to beat them all with his stirring battle for life. A broken back and a broken neck have been his lot but he fights on and on.

Four years ago, Getschow was working with a construction company near his home town of Appleton when he fell and was crushed by a pile of rock. His ribs were crushed and his back was broken. Physicians marvelled at his great fighting spirit but gave up even the slimmest hopes for his life.

But Getschow recovered and grew strong enough to take up football. He made the Elmhurst College team during his freshman year and starred at guard. He was a greater star than ever last fall and was rewarded with the captaincy of the College football team and named all Illinois intercollegiate guard first. That comeback alone stamped him as a real "iron man."

Last Saturday, in Elmhurst's opening game of the season against Valparaiso University, Getschow was ripping up the bourne line when he got tangled up in a bad jam. When the jam was lifted, Ray fat on the ground. His neck was broken and he was paralyzed completely from his shoulders down.

Once more, but with conviction, physicians predicted he could not survive.

But once more it looks as if they were wrong.

Carried on by a remarkable spirit of good cheer, Getschow today was granted more than an even chance to live.

GRAND MASTER IS HONOURED

W. S. Herrington K.C. is Given Present By Masons

Napanee, Oct. 1.—The largest gathering of members of a Masonic order that was ever attended a function in this town filled the Armouries Wednesday night to honor Victor Walter S. Herrington, K.C., who was recently elevated to the position of Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada, A.F. & A.M.

From all parts of the province came Masons to honor the veteran Mason and Napanee Grand Lodge No. 8, who has had the distinction of having been Worshipful Master of the lodge on six occasions since it first held the office in 1856. Premier George S. Henry and officers of the Grand Lodge occupied seats at the head table and many old friends of the Grand Master came long distances to join in the reception. A special delegation of twenty-five members of Toronto lodges was present.

W. J. Harris, worshipful master of Union Lodge, presided, and addresses eulogizing the work and character of the guest of honor were given by Major O. Daly, of Napanee; W. R. Fenton, K.C.; W. M. Logan, Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge; John A. Bruce, K.C.; Premier Henry and Wilfrid Wilson who presented to Mr. Herrington a loving cup, suitably and similar gift for Mrs. Herrington, on behalf of the members.

Replying to the addresses, the Grand Master expressed his gratitude to the assemblage for their kindness of esteem. He urged himself to do all in his power to carry out the duties of his office along the high standard set by his predecessors. His long association with Union Lodge had been a happy one and he hoped to continue this association for many years to come. The Napanee Citizens' Band and several vocalists rendered a musical program during the evening.

No nation was ever made or unmade on a contest between men whether New York quoted the Kingship [illegible] of 1931. In fact, 1066's of England was very little affected, [illegible] D.D.D. declared in his address.

"The future of this country does not depend upon a few stock brokers in Toronto and Montreal and New York," he declared. "The future of this country depends upon the farmers. Masonry will play its part in these troublous times. It is not a theory but an important part in the past. It is our function to create a spirit of understanding and love in the people, and I have every confidence that Canadian people will share nobly and well."

Premier Henry, lack of hair which amounts to a noticeable inclination to baldness, referred to as humorous incident. W. M. Logan, Grand Lodge secretary, said in the course of his address that when men were getting on in years, the hair was the first part to be touched grey matter, the hair came out grey. If there was no grey matter, well the person became bald.

Premier Henry joined in the laughter as jovially as the rest but when it died away he said that he did not delay long in hitting back. "About that matter of hair and lack of it," said the Premier, "it reminds me of another matter, the effect that grass doesn't grow on a busy street."

Premier Henry paid a deep tribute to the work of the Grand Master, to Masonry and Masonry in the province. He declared that he was eminently fitted to carry on the high precepts of the order and he felt assured that his influence would be productive of splendid results. In times such as the present, said the premier, men of high character and proven ability were needed in all walks of life and he was confident the Masons of Ontario would play a large part in the depressed economic times through which Canada was passing.

Sir Robert Falconer Refuses Shock Over Power Probe

Toronto, Oct. 1.—(C.P.)—Although in the past that name of one man implicated in the Besuharnois revelations were university men had been students at Hart House, Dr. Falconer, president of the University of Toronto, addressed the students yesterday at the commencement of the academic session and declared he had confidence in the law-abiding qualities of most students.

"For the moment one was accepted," he said, "when we learned that not at least of the leaders in the Besuharnois affair, which had been a shock to many, Canadians were men who had attended a university, and, moreover, both by way in which they grabbed up vast sums of money, and by the way they got control parliament, had done more than anything that had happened in many years to diminish grate the public confidence which is a vital element in the state."

Man's Body is Walking Museum of Old Relics

Scientist Says No Limit to Growth of Human Mind

THOMPSON'S VIEW

London, Oct. 1.—(By The Canadian Press)—"Man's body is a walking museum of his ancestors," declared Sir J. Arthur Thomson, at the Conference of Modern Church, here at Oxford today, as he drew a striking resemblance in their bodily life, and in their habits of machinery when victims of the same disease, such as rheumatism, rheumatism. Human blood may be transfused from chimpanzee to chimpanzee, though not into the much more distantly related monkey. "Life is the evidence even of the degree of the literal blood relationship.

"The largest fact in the story of organic evolution," continued Sir Arthur, "is the growing dominance of mind. Mind is not a fact, and of this trend modern man is for the time being the climax. There is no reason, naturally in our very imperfect understanding of the mind, to think that the future evolution of this side of our being has reached its limit.

Sir Arthur said that apes had never been known to weep; that was the prerogative of man. Man alone could laugh. Man alone had been known to make a sentence—they had no language. Because of these differences there was no missing link; Cook's butcher shop at 97 Yonge Street were asked to supply 2 pounds of sirloin at $150 to the A. and P. store at 779 Yonge Street received an order for $250 worth of supplies.

A scientist of the United States named Bridges has discovered that butterfly wings emanate some kind of rays that make the wings iridescent. Bridges himself is enclosed with photographic plates for exposed periods.

Canada A Front Window—By The Sea

Another front window in England has been filled with Canadian produce. This is at Blackpool—in many ways the most remarkable seaside centre in the Motherland—where the Empire Marketing Board opened a shop for the season. The two previous Empire Marketing Boards' shops were in Glasgow and Birmingham, and have carried on, for six months each, the good work of putting Canadian products directly under the eyes of Old Country buyers. The Canadian display is a tribute to the energy and experience of the Canadian officials who have staged it, and this unique chance for Canada is being used to full advantage. The picture above gives an idea of the huge crowd of holiday-makers on the promenade at Blackpool with the Empire Marketing Board shop in the arrow right on the front next to the famous Blackpool Tower. Inset shows the Lady Mayoress of the famous resort being presented with a basket of Canadian produce.

SECTIONAL W. M. S. MEETING WELL ATTENDED AT FOXBORO

Three Hundred Delegates Gathered at Foxboro

SPLENDID REPORTS

Year's Missionary Work Reviewed at Session.

Representing thirty-four auxiliaries of the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church of Canada, the members of the Belleville section held their sixth annual sectional meeting in the Methodist church at Foxboro. Three hundred delegates were present and received inspiration and encouragement in their work from the interesting reports and addresses heard during the day.

Mrs. Parnsworth, Belleville, the vice-president of the section, occupied the chair during the morning. The opening service was taken by Mrs. Revell, Foxboro, Plainfield, Mrs. Reddick for Trenton, Mrs. H. Ketchason for Stirling" and Mrs. P. McMullen for Belleville were appointed auditors for the day.

A very cordial and kind welcome was extended to the delegates present by Mrs. (Rev.) Mutton, of Foxboro, and Mrs. L. R. Fraser responded. Mrs. S. C. Gay, Presbyterial president, and Mrs. J. C. Clarke, corresponding secretary of the Belleville district of Foxboro, were called to the platform.

A message from the branch presidents, Mrs. W. Smith of Tweedsmuir, who is at present ill in the Hospital) was read by the secretary. She urged the members to follow the Japanese prayer, "O Lord, revive Thy Church, beginning with me." She gave five suggestions which were very helpful and revived to salvation and encouragement in their work. The interesting reports and addresses heard during the day were:

Study: prayer for more consecrated the church that it may be roused to a realization of its duty and its kindness each day. Mrs. Glenn McKinnon, Belleville, led in a hymn, with Miss L. Brown acting as accompanist. Mrs. Parnsworth offered prayer for the presidents, Mrs. Smyth.

The secretary's report of Belleville section for 1930-31 was delivered by Mrs. J. C. Clarke, who gave a clear and concise picture of auxiliary activities during the district. Thirty-four societies, six circles and twenty-three bands were on the list, representing about 1,000 members of thirty-one societies, and eleven bands.

The report follows:

"For the 30 societies reporting all but one report that they give a special place to prayer and Bible study on every program.

Only reports one special meeting a year for temperance, and two others state that the temperance question has been brought up only regularly this year. All the others give it a place in their program through readings or items arranged for by the temperance secretary. The societies report the study book chiefly in connection with the regular meeting, members taking turns at synopsizing. Only the Belleville societies report much time given to the study of the book. Some feel that to use it at the regular meeting takes too much time. Fifteen societies have talks or readings by the Secretary of Christian Stewardship at every meeting. Others report that the duty of the envelope system a help in this respect and a few emphasize the value of each member taking a duty in connection with meetings.

Bath St. Belleville, has the highest allocation per member, and reached it, too. Mount Pleasant, Rawdon, has the second highest allocation per member, $1.50 and exceeds it. Foxboro, has the highest average givings per member of any rural society, $1.40 and exceeds its allotment. Stirling gives the largest percentage of their allocation in the envelope system, 75 per cent. of all their money is given on it. Only two reports record that every woman in their congregation is a member of the society. Zion and Chatterton are close seconds with 85 per cent. of the members enrolled. John Street has ten more Missionary Monthlies subscribed for than it has W. M. S. members while Phillipston has two.

"The Blue Book seems to have been very little in the great majority of cases. Trenton, Wesley used it several times in regular member had never heard of it.

How do we get our dues paid in? Here are some of the methods—Dalsie and Alnwick have dues mentioned during the business part of every meeting. Bridge Street hand out a special envelope at the beginning of the year in which to understand the dues are to be placed. John St. occasionally reads aloud the list of paid members.

"West Huntingdon and Scott's Bay have the largest envelope giving in the country societies.

"Ten there are several suggestions which may be of general interest. Bayside prepares an outline of the programs for the year in January. Bridge Street uses a duplicator which is run off by Mrs. Denyes will tell us about later. They also appoint a special subject for prayer at each meeting. Trinity has a very helpful chalk offering over one-quarter of their total being given that way. Many societies bring added interest. Phillipston says that meeting in the home has brought more home-interest and attendance. Shannonville is the only society to report an increased membership. Melrose had open meetings.

"Stirling has been doing a little home mission work by holding meetings at outside missions. They have also had a Baby's Day and Young People's Day. Queen Street, Trenton, Grace, found special interest in the Home Department this year. Eggleston and Trenton Wesley, entertained their Cradle Roll mothers.

"Bridge St. mission circle prepared a Christmas box that was distributed.

"Tabernacle Circle have given an example to the Old Ladies' Home and spent one in the Nurses' Residence. This circle likes the group system. Bath has a Birthday Social for Y.P.S.

"Wellington Band held a Hallowe'en festival, in which old and young participated, creating much merry spirit and a fine way to bring the young people into the work of the church. Bayside Band has the benefit of the help and presence of a member of the society appointed each month by the Ladies' Aid. Tabernacle Band state that Band leadership be stressed; well learn that Mrs. Rowland Foxboro Branch has an average attendance twice the size of its membership. An opportunity there surely. Melrose with 16 members and 24 World Fellowships sounds pretty good.

Eggleston Band reports increased interest. The band at Mount Pleasant, Rawdon, sent in an excellent report. They giving and all given, no money is raised by entertainment or sale. They have a special canvas for fees. Stirling and Wellington have very helpful envelope givings better than some of the auxiliaries.

Wellington are the only bands that report using envelopes for giving. Bath Band reports interest high enough are making notes on the study book. They have a band night each month; at the end of the year, they will be asked to prepare papers on the book and suitable prizes will be given for the best papers.

"Zion Hill wants to know why Bridge Street do not have suitable report forms of their own. Tabernacle Mission Band presidents have been at every meeting this year, and their 21 members take World Friends.

"Trenton, Grace Church Band asterisks work and study meetings. They have a Mission Band, Y. P. and W.M.S. programs. They held a Japanese tea. They are raising their allocation by talent money.

"The secretary extends her thanks to all the society secretaries who sent in their reports especially those who sent them early.

Report Given

The programme of reports opened with that of Mrs. J. C. Clarke, Foxboro, corresponding secretary, who explained what was required in filling out the annual questionnaires.

Miss Lazelle Hoven, Belleville, reporting on Christian Stewardship and Finance, defined the real meaning of Stewardship. She pointed out that in carrying on this phase of Missionary work, there should be a secretary of Christian Stewardship and a finance committee. The committee should be the inspirational force of the auxiliary. Mrs. Brown urged the use of the budget in organizing finances and pointed out that this year the 'keynote of Mission giving would be sacrifice.

Miss Alice Moore, reporting work among strangers, treated these activities of great importance. She gave the history of Strangers' Work in the churches of Canada. Through the years of its existence, the Strangers' Welcome Committee of the United Church of Canada had twenty-five volunteer workers. Miss Moore asked the secretaries to be sure to welcome and look after the strangers, remembering that they were dealing with the sore, the discouraged, the lonely and the friendless.

Mrs. Wilfrid Smith, Belleville, explained the serious aspect that the question of temperance is faced with the situation faced in Saskatchewan and Alberta, where there is the generous filling of the supply of liquor. She suggested the need that if each auxiliary devoted a day every week to sewing layettes, the work of the Mission Band would be begun; much practical work would be accomplished.

Temperance Questions

The relation of the temperance question to Missionary work was the next item. Mrs. Ketchason, Mrs. H. K. Denyes, Foxboro. The assistance of the study of scientific temperance in the Mission Band should be part of each branch's programme. Mrs. Denyes said that every worker was usually energetic W. M. S. meetings were important as an integral part of the whole work.

"On our missionary study," she said, "we are studying other countries, we are trying to help overburdened people, others in foreign lands. Are we not overlooking the greatest need of our own land—traffic in fermented alcohol." In closing Mrs. Denyes said, "We are reminded her hearers that prayer with faith was the supreme need.

More widespread reading of the Missionary Monthly was suggested by Mrs. G. S. Sharp, who deplored the fact that in the Bay of Quinte Conference ranks low in subscriptions to the Missionary Monthly. She outlined a plan of canvassing during Missionary Monthly Week to be held in November.

C.G.I.T. Activities

The reading of the Canadian Girls in Training organization by Mrs. Parnsworth, Belleville, explained by Miss R. Templeton, of Belleville.

Twenty-five per cent. of C.G.I.T. membership is generally devoted to missions. The C.G.I.T. is the most practical method of missionary education among teen age girls and the best contribution to the girls as "World Friendship" rally based on the country that was the subject of the study. Miss Templeton told the nature of the customs of other lands and the work done in other lands. These rallies helped to make the girls' world conscious and they would have a bearing on the outcome of the conference.

Mrs. Glenn McKinnon gave a greatly appreciated solo.

A period of "Quiet Thought" was conducted by Mrs. (Rev.) Truscott, West Huntingdon, and the morning session closed with prayer by Mrs. Revell.

Lunch Served

The delegates were entertained to luncheon in the basement of Foxboro United Church and a splendid meal was served. Flowers for the tables had a place on the menu and the ladies of Foxboro are thanked for their praise for the delicious luncheon.

ERNEST ARTHUR BELSEY

After an illness of quite some time, Ernest Arthur Belsey, beloved son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Belsey, Belleville, passed away early at his parents' home early Thursday morning. He was born in Brockville 19 years ago and has lived in Belleville 16 years ago with his parents. Ernest attended the Albert Street school where he made a host of young friends. For the past two years Ernest attended the Anglican church where he was loved by his pastor, Rev. Canon Bedford-Jones, William, all of this city.

FRANKFORT FAR BEST IN HISTORY OF SOCIETY IS OPINION OF PRESIDENT

Receipts Were Larger and Exhibits On More Pretentious Scale

FEWER CATTLE

Horse Racing Was the Best Held in a Number of Years

Better exhibits, larger attendance and more receipts was the summing up of the Frankford Fair held on Wednesday afternoon by the president, D. R. Ketcheson. "It has been the most successful fair since I have been connected with the Agricultural Society," was the prevailing opinion to be the expression of opinion from all fair directors this year and it is coupled with all the depression and talk of hard times that is heard. Probably the people of a community are trying to forget their troubles and take a day off to visit the community fair and meet with other people and get a fresh hold on life. Whatever there were over 2,000 paid admissions although the crowd did not seem as large as on former occasions. The fair has outgrown the grounds and have and the crowd could not be noticed the same as in a smaller one.

Horse Exhibit Large

The cattle ring was not large, the big breeders considering the ring was too small for the trouble, while the same could be said of the sheep and swine. The exhibit of horses was large, formerly and the large crowd was much interested in the horse ring. The number of the awards given. William Cowan of Codrington showed several pairs of cherons and each one carried home a red award. He is one of the large breeders of this class of stock in the eastern part of the province and has been breeding for years has been bred in the Cowan family for nearly one hundred years and the interest of yesterday he would continue to uphold the tradition of the family.

Carriage horses have not entirely disappeared and the young man on the farm still likes his flashy turnout. Allan W. Mikel of Frankford showed a fine Hackney mare to buggy, which took down the award in her class. Another of the exhibitor's turnout and the horse was awarded the blue ribbon for the lady driver's contest. George O. Hickle of Trenton showed three teams of heavy draught and generally speaking all of the teams were purpose type and of a fair. Malcolm Bird was second in nearly every class. The Belleville Collegiate Institute was adjudged best in the show and what is more remarkable is that the best walking team was owned by Malcolm Bird and his son, Baby Show

An event of considerable interest occurred in the baby show when a pair of parents was the baby show which was held in the agricultural hall. The committee, which building is utilized for the display of canned goods, etc., several entries and the youngsters eventually looked the parents over for consideration. The age and weight of the baby shown were taken into consideration in the awards. Judges had no easy task in awarding the prizes and when the awards offered. Their selections were as follows:

Lois Marie Bush, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Bush, Trenton.

Lorne Hinman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Blake Hearns, second.

Doreen Ketcheson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Quaterhout, third.

Horse Racing

A number of the spectators enjoyed the horse racing which was held from Frankford village and Wallbridge, Sidney township. From start to finish it was a very interesting game as at no time was either team leading by more than a length. The result was a win for the Wallbridge boys who were driven by Ross Records's 7. Keller and Ketcheson were also starters in the competition, while Montgomery and Hynes were for the Frankford team. Mr. Turvey was starter and Mr. Hall was judge.

Vadder of Bancroft, taking down the big end of the money. Class B went four heats, while the Limit captured the next two heats to win the event. The three heat event was won by Helen B. Todd and never headed after the word was given. Helen B. Todd, the stylish trotter from Roseneath, was too good for her field in Class B. June B., owned by Billy Smith of Belleville was the first trip but after that it was all Helen B. Todd. Mr. Smith's mare was off and she was not extended at any time, the track was not in the best of shape but the time was good considering.

IDLE CLASH NEAR COURT

Londn, Sept. 30 (A.P.) — British unemployed clashed with police again today in Hyde Park from a demonstration near the House of Commons last night, even worse in the New Street police court.

While the court was sitting, a section of a crowd outside tried to break through the police cordon. Mounted police reinforced the guard, the crowd was pushed back and order restored. Twelve of the persons arrested last night were remanded for trial. Several persons were knocked down and one man was injured by a horse's hoofs in today's clash.

The unemployed then dispersed into Hyde Park where they surrounded a man riding horseback. The rider, clad in green coat, fawn breeches and gaiters, dismounted and attempted to escape, but was unable to get away until mounted police charged into the crowd.

For some time afterward the police rode up and down the sidewalks of Oxford street while shoppers and others scurried out of their way.

Have Boys Lost Adventure Spirit?

London, Sept. 30—(CP)—Fears that British boys have lost the spirit of adventure were contained in a report to the education section of the British Association for the advancement of science, by a committee on current questions headed by Sir John Russell.

The report asserts those associated with schools are coming to the belief that boys are reluctant to go overseas and their mothers are also afraid. The committee recommends among parents seems to be that the education authorities should find good posts for their children near home.

The report suggested every school should have a master or mistress who is acquainted with the labor market and with the opportunities in the overseas Empire and urges senior scholarships should be ten each in the Dominions as well as in British universities.

AFRICANS APT STUDENTS OF MISSION ZEAL

Returned Missionary Tells of Work in United Church

FOXBORO MEETING

Anecdotes from Lives of Students Are Related

Reaching the heart of the African through music, and holding his interest by responding to the native's ardent desire to be taught, the missionary teacher to that continent is warmly welcomed and sincerely appreciated, said Miss Edith Clarke, B.A., a missionary on furlough from Mendi, Africa, whose absorbing address was the feature of the afternoon session, yesterday, at the semi-annual meeting at Foxboro, of the Belleville Section, Women's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. S. C. Gay, who presided during the afternoon. The meeting had opened with prayer by Mrs. English and Mrs. Badgley.

Angola—the station field of the United Church in Canada—is on the west coast of Africa and is a Portuguese colony. Missionaries must first go to that country to learn the tongue before proceeding to the mission. Tremendous advances have been made in Africa but in remote parts of Angola there are many to whom one ray of light has penetrated their darkness of ignorance. Fear holds the non-Christian Africans—fear of spirits who bring sickness, death, misfailure and calamity. There is also the fear of the white people whom natives have known by the bitterness often with merely to exploit them for gain. Once this fear has been overcome and the African realizes that the missionary expects nothing from him, relationship is friendly and cordial.

Miss Clarke told of the three mission station and of her work of teaching kindergarten. Her house held ceremonies at the Mesna School for Girls, their study, sewing and work, practice teaching were part of the curriculum as well as a course in domestic science.

The African women are not naturally inclined to sewing—as are those of the Orient. The men become, with a little teaching at the mission, the village dressmakers. The treadmill sewer, are making progress in the teaching of sewing. The girls, learn cooking, at which they are adept, as are the children. They then go back to their villages with their education in what they have been taught. For their study in home-making a model cottage has been built at Mesna School. Miss Clarke said that the vast contrast between this simple, clean home and the mud-floored, unventilated huts to which the girls returned must be discouraging.

In many cases the pupils had carried out at home the principles of cleanliness they had learned. Once cleanliness is instilled in the minds of natives, missionaries believe that much of the disease so prevalent will disappear.

Africans learn quickly and are industrious. Young men at the Curry School are taught trades of carpentry, masonry, shoe-making, etc. When graduates of the boys and girls' school marry, their home is a model. The man contributes a modern storey, in place of the fire in the centre of the mud-floor at which his mother cooked. The young mother cares for her children as she has been taught, not in the old ignorant manner.

Miss Clarke told interesting anecdotes of the lives of some of her students. She concluded her remarks with a description of the jubilee of the Mission, when the fiftieth year of its establishment was observed. Fourteen thousand natives attended, six thousand of whom partook of the Lord's Supper. A wonderful chorus of five hundred voices sang a cantata, taking all parts. The words and music had to be memorized by the singers. This was a wonderful feat for the director. So responsive is the African to music that one of those taking part returned to his village, organized a choir of fifty to whom he taught every part of the cantata, the solos, ensemble work, quartettes, for every voice. This was accomplished without the director being able to read music and his choir members having to commit words and melody to memory.

In concluding Miss Clarke urged continued interest and more workers in missionary endeavours.

During the afternoon reports were given by Mrs. (Rev.) Rowland, Stirling, on Mission Bands; Mrs. F. O. Bennett, on Associate Helpers; Mrs. E. M. Hubbs, Belleville, on Mission Circles; Mrs. P. McMillan of Rawdon, speaking on the work of Press Secretaries, showed how faithfulness to this part of duties was furthering W.M.S. work.

Mrs. J. C. Butler, Stirling, gave a solo. Miss Retha Reynolds, Elzerada, the sectional delegate to the Whitby Summer School, gave a comprehensive description of the school and what it had meant to her.

The Question Drawer was conducted by Mrs. S. C. Gay and it was decided to meet next year at the Stone Church.

The hope of the disarmament conference lies not in the statesmen of the world but in the peoples of the world.—Newton D. Baker.

CRESTS ARE PRESENTED TO KI-Y WINNERS

Thanks are Offered to Those Who Made League Success

Crests were presented to the group winners at the Y.M.C.A. Most of the players of the winning teams were on hand to receive their awards for their season's efforts in the Ki-Y League. Mr. Ed. Logan, of the Kiwanis Club, acted as chairman of the meeting and also awarded some of the prizes. He was assisted by Mr. M. P. Duff, who represented the Belleville Amateur Association at the meeting. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to all those who had helped make the league a success during the past season, especially the umpires who so graciously donated their services throughout the year.

After the president's remarks the secretary's report was received and adopted. The crests were then distributed among the various players of the winning teams. Each section of the league received a different colored crest so that no two teams will be wearing the same kind of crest.

Refreshments were then served by the officials of the league and after the boys had moved a vote of thanks to the officials the meeting was closed with the National Anthem.

The names of the players of the winning teams are:

Bantam Softball Winners (Maconnell)—Joe Volpin, Bruce Keegan, Art Thorne, Milton Easley, Max Madden, Laurence Vance, Frank McKinnon, Bud McArthur, Merrill McPee, Roy Hoard, Gordon Carter.

Embarrassing Moments

W. M. SOCIETY

A meeting of the executive committee of the Bay of Quinte Conference Branch W.M.S. was held in John Street Church, Belleville, on Monday, the action chairs of the President, Mrs. W. L. Smyth, B.A., of Pembroke, the chair was occupied by the first Vice President, Mrs. R. O. Jolliffe, of Kingston.

Greetings from the conference were brought to the meeting by Rev. W. D. Harrison, who paid a glowing tribute to the work being done by the W.M.S. and assured them of the heartiest co-operation and sympathy, from the members of the conference.

He referred to the necessity of retrenchment by the Home Mission Board, but they were striving to accomplish this without leaving any people without the Gospel, by amalgamating where possible and dividing the burdens which lay too heavily on certain circuits.

During the afternoon session, the reports of the various offices and of the treasurer, Miss E. Lazelle Rogers, and the secretary of Christian Stewardship and Finance, Mrs. H. Thompson showed that everyone was doing her best to keep up the standard of other years. There was no thought of discouragement, but rather a determination that the work should not suffer, though times may be hard.

It was decided to give to the boys of Bowmanville school the gift of a Bible in each of the halls, when done last year.

Mrs. Lawlor, B.A. of Norwood, was appointed as representative to conference next year, with Mrs. H. Thompson as alternate.

Interesting reports from the board meetings were given by the delegates Mrs. A. I. Brown and Mrs. A. C. Denike.

The reports of the work accomplished in the different Presbyterials were very encouraging. These were given by Mrs. Gay, President of the league received a different colored crest so that no two teams will be wearing the same kind of crest.

Refreshments were then served by the officials of the league and after the boys had moved a vote of thanks to the officials the meeting was closed with the National Anthem.

The names of the players of the winning teams are:

MAKING HEALTH INTERESTING TO CHILDREN

It is often very difficult to make children eat foods that are absolutely necessary for them. Every child, for instance, should drink a quart of milk a day. Because milk is one of the most wonderful foods for children.

Many wise mothers have found that Kellogg's ready-to-eat cereals are the easiest as well as the most healthful way of encouraging a child to take plenty of milk. The number of combinations of Kellogg's Cereals with other foods is almost endless and, even over a long period of time, they can be made different and thus tempting to the child's taste.

And then there are s omany Kellogg's cereals too. A favorite for each appetite.. A preferred dish for every individual. Some like Corn Flakes. Most Kiddies are crazy about PEP Bran Flakes. Rice Krispies with their snap! crackle! pop!" never fail to delight them.

Adding honey or fruit makes a brand-new dish. Serving cereals in combinations is a new taste delight.

In order to help you with the problem of encouraging your child to eat foods that are really good for him, Kellogg has prepared a series of booklets especially for the children. Here in the midst of play, for example, they learn that hot, heavy foods are not so good for them at night as crisp, easily digested cereals—and many other facts that will simplify your feeding the children.

JUNIOR RED CROSS HONOR

King and Queen Have Special Photographs Taken

Montreal, Que., Oct. 1.—(By The Canadian Press).—A signal honour has been conferred on the school children of Canada by Their Majesties the King and Queen, who graciously consented at the request of the Junior Red Cross Society to be specially photographed for them.

Some time ago Dr. W. P. Percival, Director of Protestant Education for the Province of Quebec, found on visiting the schools that pictures of Their Majesties were rarely to be found there. Feeling that this was a very real lack in training for citizenship, he asked the Junior Red Cross to make enquiries as to where suitable photos could be obtained, with the result that it was decided to ask Their Majesties to be specially photographed for the purpose, the request being made by A. E. Holt, chairman of the Junior Red Cross, Quebec Provincial Division through Her Excellency Countess Willingdon, then president of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

A letter received from Sir Frederick Ponsonby, Keeper of the Privy Purse, by Brig.-Gen. Eric McCuaig, president of the Quebec Division Canadian Red Cross, leaves no doubt of Their Majesties' great personal interest in the matter.

The pictures, beautiful sepia engravings measuring 18" x 22" are to be distributed to the schools through the agency of the Junior Red Cross and will be sold for the actual cost of printing and framing.

TAMPERED WITH WITNESSES

Lindsay, Oct. 1.—In police court John Stephenson, from near Bancroft, pleaded guilty to interfering with crown witnesses and jurors in a recent case in the Supreme court and went to jail for one month. Stephenson endeavored to have two of the witnesses make a statement that, on the day when the prisoner broke into the home of a Finnish woman at Minden, the occupants were about to make a batch of home brew. At the time Crown Attorney Anderson was notified and warned Stephenson. When Mr. Justice Kelly heard of the matter he ordered that an arrest be made. Police Magistrate Jordan took into consideration the mental condition of the accused when passing sentence.

TODAY'S VERSE

GUESTS FOR THE NIGHT

I hung no signs above my door to say
That traveling guests would be made welcome here,
Yet you have come! A fluttering array
Of friendly birds, and who could be sinless
To scorn small visitors. Excitedly I hasten for fresh water for your bath
And search each cupboard with swift scrutiny
For morsels to spread out upon the path
But when tomorrow's dawn shall waken you
And the wind's clarion calls, skyward again
You will lift, and leave this garden to renew
Its wooding, wondering perhaps what lane
Or meadow you will captivate by night
Now far south you go in one day's flight.

HOW FALSEHOOD GROWS

First somebody told it,
Then the room wouldn't hold it,
So the busy tongues rolled it,
Till they got it outside;
Then the crowd came across it,
And once more lent it,
But tossed it and tossed it,
Till it grew long and wide.

This lie brought forth others,
Dark sisters and brothers,
And father and mothers,
A terrible crew;
And while headlong they hurried,
The people they flurried,
And troubled and worried,
As lies always do.

Germany's Naval Stronghold Rapidly Vanishing

Heligoland, the formidable island which the former Kaiser's Government got from Britain by trading Zanzibar, in East Africa, some years ago, is tumbling down slowly but steadily, despite every effort of German engineers in check its disintegrating. Last week some 2,000 cubic metres of decayed rock fell from the stone bluffs on the north side of the island and vanished into the sea. It was the largest single slide recorded in recent years. Enormous sums have been spent to check the erosion but geologists believe that eventually the island will be entirey gone. Above is a picture showing Heligoland at low tide.

RECOVER OLD ROMAN SITE AT ST. ALBANS

Ancient City of Verulanium Being Revealed By Students

INVADERS' CITY

Roman City Built Between 120 and 140 A. D.

London, Oct. 1.—(By The Canadian Press)—Twenty miles from London there is now being unearthed the city of Verulanium which was flourishing when the Crucifixion was an event but of yesterday. It lies within a mile of the city and Abbey of St. Albans—the great church dedicated to the first martyr to suffer in Britain. London was a mere upstart amongst towns when the mosaic pavements and the walls of flint and tile, now being unearthed, were laid by the Roman builders. Every British child has heard of how Boadicea the early Anglican Queen, led the tribes in rebellion against their Roman oppressors. Colchester, however, was but a stronger Romad settlement than Verulanium, left before them. Verulanium, too was swept by fire and sword but within a few days the Romans effected such reprisals here as to shock even the most hardened of Roman soldiery. The city was then built and prospered exceedingly for a century or more until it again fell with the coming of the Saxons. St. Alban's Abbey, as we see it today, was built with bricks from the ruins of the Roman forum.

Within the last twelve months, thanks largely to the practical interest of the Corporation of St. Albans and of Lord Verulam, an elaborate series of excavations has made substantial progress. The work is being conducted under the superintendence of Professor Robert E. M. Wheeler, Secretary of the London Museum, one of the greatest archaeological experts in Britain. Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler have the capable assistance of bands of students from all parts of the country, who voluntarily spend a week or more of their vacation in assisting over the ruins of one of the most powerful settlements ever established by a foreign invader. Many visitors who come to the area under excavation will perhaps find the experience reminiscent, to some degree at least, of their earliest introduction to the trenches of Flanders during the War. Ordinary laborers do the rough preliminary work with pick and shovel. By the time they left here, the visitor will be told young men and women scraping with careful diligence with earth from tessellated floors, the exquisite patterns of which have been hidden for ten centuries. The area which was originally enclosed by fortification alone exceeds 250 acres. There is no suggestion the whole of this will be upturned.

What has already been done makes fairly clear that the Roman city was built mainly from A.D. 120 to 140. Although there are distinct traces of a much earlier foundation. Some of the buildings have been preserved for the present generation by reburying for the curious circumstances that when they became unfit for further habitation by their Roman owners they were merely filled up and either left derelict, or other buildings were placed upon their foundations. The defence walls of the city are very well marked. Outside one of these has been discovered a cemetery. The dead in most instances had been interred in a crouched position, within oblong coffins. One of the most interesting sites uncovered is that of a Roman shop. The two doorways are clearly discernible, and a millstone is upon the floor.

Verulanium came upon its final dissolution largely because the builders of the Abbey used it as a quarry. It also proves that the early Abbots were much troubled because the wreckage of the city of the Romans provided a resort for thieves and malefactors. The Saxons used these Roman bricks for their church more than 1000 years ago, and 300 years later the Normans used them again in the great tower which still crowns the hill.

GOLD MINES TO PAY U. S. FUNDS

Toronto, Oct. 1.—Canadian dividend-bearing gold mining stocks sailing sharply down through pressure exerted in New York yesterday, served only to draw, from unperturbed mining company executives, cheerfully blithe announcements that their dividends to Canadian shareholders would be paid either in United States funds or in Canadian funds plus a premium equal to the prevailing discount on the Canadian dollar in New York.

Harry Oakes, president of Lake Shore Mines, Limited, said that: "When the time comes we will hand out to shareholders, with the regular dividend, a bonus equivalent to the discount on Canadian funds. It hasn't gone through yet, but such action would be proper in the ordinary course."

Fuse as Extra Profits

It was learned yesterday also that E. L. Miller, managing director, of Wright-Hargreaves, has stated that he will suggest to the board of that mine that future dividends be paid in American funds or their equivalent, to Canadian shareholders.

By this means Canadian shareholders are to have passed on to them the extra profits accruing to gold mines from the premium returns paid by the mint at Ottawa for bullion, these premiums being calculated on a three-day average basis, the discount for the day prior to shipment, day of shipment and day following being averaged for the purpose.

The above statements of prominent gold mining executives are considered in financial circles as being highly significant. What effect the considerable numbers of gold shares are changing hands with concurrent wide losses in quoted values. In the view of Mr. Oakes, however, the selling is largely from speculative accounts at this stage, and does not represent the transfer to other hands of shares bought as investments.

More Money for Shareholders

Canadian gold mines will mean that listed in New York are obliged to pay dividends in United States funds to United States shareholders. Wright-Hargreaves at one time paid all dividends in New York funds, but changed over to the practice some years ago at the request of Canadian shareholders. General adoption of the policy of paying all dividends in United States funds, now that the discount against Canadian dollars around 12 to 13 per cent. would mean materially higher cash disbursements to Canadians.

Annual dividends of six leading dividend payers, Hollinger, Teck-Hughes, Lake Shore, Dome, McIntyre and Wright-Hargreaves, aggregate $12,875,000. Only a portion of that total is distributed in Canada of course; but the discount on domestic dollars being in excess of 10 per cent., dividend payments to Canadians which are made either directly in United States funds, or on the basis of bonuses equivalent to the discount, would mean substantial extra distributions in this country.

Discount on Dollar is Cause Increased Rates on Rails to U. S. Areas

Canadian Passengers and Freight Made Up Depreciation

CHARGES GRADED

Rate of Exchange Set At 16 Per Cent For Two Weeks

Ottawa, Oct. 1 — Railway fares and freight rates between Canadian and United States points are substantially increased, commencing today, by virtue of an order of the Board of Railway Commissioners authorizing the transportation companies to levy a surcharge to compensate for the decline in the value of the Canadian dollar on the American side of the international boundary.

A ticket from Toronto to New York will cost, roughly, $3.50 more than normally because of the imposition of the surcharge which the Canadian railways will levy to meet the adverse exchange when they come to settle with the United States railways at the end of every month for their portion of the haul.

Pay Exchange

A passenger boarding a United States-bound train at Windsor, Sarnia or Niagara Falls must pay the full rate of exchange daily for the next two weeks while he is per cent. The same applies to passengers boarding trains at any other point near the border and travelling for the greater part of the journey in United States territory.

There are, however, other sones. Toronto, Ottawa, and other places 70 or 80 miles from the United States border are in what is known as the first zone, and passengers from that zone who are bound for New York, Chicago or other points in the United States will be required to pay 75 per cent. of the adverse rate of exchange, or 12 per cent. on the normal fare. In other words, they will pay $3.50 more than the 12 per cent. surcharge, because 25 per cent of their journey is in Canada.

People from the second zone, still further away from the border, will be charged 50 per cent. of the adverse normal cost of the ticket, and those in the third zone, the major portion of whose journey will be in Canadian territory, will have to pay only 25 per cent. of the 12 per cent.

Adjusted Every Two Weeks

The surcharge is adjusted every two weeks, and the amount to be paid during the ensuing fortnight is based upon the rate of exchange prevailing at noon on the day when the adjustment is made. The rate for the next fortnight was fixed today.

The surcharge to be levied on freight shipments from Canada to the United States and vice versa, was also fixed at noon today, and will be adjusted every fortnight, regardless of fluctuations in exchange at New York. For the next fortnight the surcharge on international freight movements will be 10 per cent., that is to say, a Canadian shipper sending freight to the United States will pay $110.00 on a shipment which normally would cost $10.00.

A study of the international movement of traffic between Canada and the United States has convinced the railways that 60 per cent. of the mileage is in Canada and 40 per cent. in the United States. The Canadian and United States railways have a settlement monthly, when the proceeds of the gross earnings are distributed among the different carrying companies. Sixty per cent. of 10 per cent., the exchange rate prevailing today, is 9.6 per cent., but the round figure of 10 per cent. is taken for the sake of simplicity.

The surcharge was in effect back in 1921 and 1922, when the change was against Canada in the United States funds. Then the Canadian lumber companies profited at the expense of the railways by prepaying the freight charges from Canada to the United States, and obtaining a refund from New York of United States customers in United States funds. It was then arranged by the Railway Board that if the freight charges either way—to or from the United States were paid in Canada, the railways would be authorized to collect 60 per cent of the prevailing rate of exchange. That was called a surcharge. Now the 60 per cent. of the rate of exchange is the amount to give the Canadian carriers sufficient to meet the United States carries for their portion of the haul and the premium on United States funds.

The surcharge automatically becomes effective when currencies in either country are disturbed.

Passenger and freight agents throughout the Dominion have been notified by their head offices in Montreal to make the additional levies commencing tomorrow.

DOING DISHES

Little daughter doing dishes,
Think of water—
It is so gleaming white, so green,
Child, remember it has seen
Meadows, and has run between
Cool rocks of trees.
It has ministered to these.
Sing, dear at your work.
Be proud!
The old dishpan holds a cloud,
Holds a snow bank from a mountain
Turn a faucet.
You're a fountain!
You have rivers, you have ocean
Open to scan your whims, your notions.
And your finger, dear are fishes—
Think of water.

ANDY HIGH TO GET STARTING ASSIGNMENT

Sparky Adams' Injury Has Not Responded to Treatment

MARTIN INJURED

Speedy Rookie Likely to Start, Despite His Handicap

(By Charles Dunkley, Associated Press Sports Writer)

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 30.—Facing the possibility of a crippled line-up, the Cardinals breezed through their final batting and fielding drill today preparatory to opening world series warfare tomorrow against their 1926 conquerors, the champion Athletics.

Adams May Be Out

That was the situation as the Athletics sped westward from Philadelphia to dawn at the Missouri. Gabby Street, manager of the Cardinals, champions of the National League, was giving consideration to a last minute change in his line-up with a view of replacing Earl "Sparky" Adams at third base. Adams' right ear sparkling out of the Cardinal machine, injured his left ankle two days ago, is still badly swollen, painful and bandaged with the result that Street may decide to keep him out of the first two contests.

If Adams it unable to start in the opening game tomorrow manager Street will call on Andy High into the third base position with the batting order remaining the same.

Coming on top of the shoulder injury that forced Jess Haines, one of the Cardinals' pitching aces out of the series, the injury to Adams put the Cardinals suffered a third major casualty in the injury of John "Pepper" Martin, Cardinals' dynamic knee. Martin, however, undoubtedly will get into the game despite his injury, but Manager Street has several other combinations available if Martin is unable to play in center field.

A's Are Favorite

With the Athletics ruling as 7 to 5 favorites, the Cardinals nevertheless are determined to triumph in spite of the jinx pursuing them. Manager Street and his club is well equipped in reserves and with capable players available to fill any gap that accidents may create, the Cardinals will take the field with confidence against their American League rivals. Street declares, that several times during the season, while the Cardinals were fighting for the championship he was several times forced to call on reserves because of injuries or illness to regulars and that the reserves came through with colors flying.

There is a dramatic possibility that Paul Derringer, 25-year old pitching sensation who took the first game with the Cardinals, may pitch his team mates to victory in the initial contest tomorrow as it is considered reasonably certain today that he will be selected to oppose Robert Moses Grove, pitching ace of the Athletics and greatest hurler of modern time. Derringer, possessing rare courage and pitching ability, is eager for the opportunity and manager Street intends to give it to him, saving "Wild Bill" Hallahan to face the Athletics Friday.

Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, has definitely decided to start Lefty Williams on sport stop in place of Joe Boley, thus making his first switch in the Championship lineup that clubbed its way to victory over the Cardinals a year ago, and the Cubs in 1929.

GET REPUTATION LEONARD TOLD

Commission Refused to Sanction Bout Set In Oct.

(By Herbert W. Baker, Associated Sports Writer)

New York, Sept. 30—In effect, it seems, the New York State Athletic Commission has told Benny Leonard, one of the greatest fighters in boxing history, to go out and get himself a reputation.

In a pronouncement, that left sports writers stunned, the commission declined to sanction a bout between the retired undefeated lightweight champion and Paulie Walker, hard hitting young middleweight from Trenton, N.J., and informed Leonard, that he would have to prove his ability in the smaller fight clubs before appearing again in Madison Square Garden. The Garden had booked the Leonard-Walker bout for Oct. 16 with every indication of a sell out.

The lead in barring Leonard from the Walker bout was taken by 87 year old William Muldoon, famed "solid man," who maintained, that Leonard's seven year absence from the ring justified the commission's action.

CANADA WILL MEET ALL HER OBLIGATIONS

Premier Bennett Says Nation Will Stand By Contracts

PAYMENTS TODAY

Warns Against Inaccurate Statements Tending to Alarm Public

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—"All obligations of Canada will be met strictly in accordance with the terms of the obligations," states Premier Bennett. His statement embraced all was in answer to questions as to payment of unconverted parts of a Canadian war loan issue payable, amounting to $12,000,000. The Ontario Government also has sizable interest payments to be made and is arranging for further credit. Other provincial and municipal governing bodies have obligations falling due, bringing the total of such payments due from Canadian sources up to about $20,000,000.

Premier Bennett, branded as "quite wrong" a New York report that $50,000,000 of Dominion bonds were due today.

"Insofar as the Dominion, as Canada herself, is concerned," he said, "there is a total of only $11,000,000 falling due. "I believe that certain provincial and municipal indebtedness is coming due in the present time, and it may be that when these are added the total from the Dominion, provincial and municipal treasuries may come to $20,000,000."

Queried as to the origin of the New York report that the Canadian an announcement that "All obligations of Canada would be met strictly in accordance with the terms of such obligations," the Prime Minister replied that he had made such a statement yesterday afternoon in a brief interview with a newspaper correspondent in the Ottawa railway station, shortly before he boarded a train for Toronto.

He had given a statement to the same effect, and slightly amplified, to the Associated Press, he remarked, and could add nothing to it at present.

FATAL CRASH INTO FREIGHT

Driver of Car Fails to See Freight on Siding

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 1 (CP) When the car and driver they were riding crashed head long into a freight train at Hollymount, a few distance west of Toronto, early today, Mrs. Lena Shragg, 62, of Brampton, Ont., was instantly killed and her son Alexander 34, was seriously injured.

The auto, proceeding along Queen Street to Malton, failed to see the freight cars standing across the road until it was too late. The elderly lady was thrown through the windshield, and died almost instantly.

Mrs. Shragg, a widow, was well known throughout the county-side from Malton to Long Credit, as a member of a number of women's organizations. She was also correspondent for Brampton of a number of Ontario newspapers.

FIREBUG SEEN SETTING FIRE

Thornburg Posse Is On Lookout For Fugitive

Thornbury, Oct. 1.—A pyromaniac whose still smoking trail is the ruined business section of Clarksburg and three other fires deliberately set in that village and in Thornbury in the last twenty-four hours, is this morning being hunted in the woods near here by a grim-faced posse of armed citizens and policemen.

Surprised at an early hour today when setting his fourth blaze in Binkley's general store in Thornbury's main business block, the firebug scuttled for the bush while villagers put out the flames and organized a determined search to prevent the fugitive's apparent plan to destroy both settlements.

WORSE OFF IN 1911 THAN NOW

Sir Alexander Lawrence Gives Hopeful View of England

Toronto, Oct. 1. — Conditions in England are better at the moment than they were in 1911, Sir Alexander Lawrences declared last night, speaking at a banquet in the Royal York Hotel which inaugurated the Ontario branch of the English Speaking Union.

"In spite of widespread unemployment, you were then plunged into hungry children," Sir Alexander told the gathering. "Conditions are better fed, better clothed, better housed and better educated than ever before. This is not the first time we have passed through the valley of depression, and I am only certain one thing—we shall fight our way out and up."

Sir Alexander believed the people themselves considered the government justified in the reduction of the dole. Unemployment insurance was originally on an actuarial basis. Under normal conditions such a basis it could be continued but the present depression, extending further than normal, he thought, had placed the dole issue in a different light.

"The increasing amounts drawn from the treasury could no longer be considered as an advance on loan," he pointed out. "An accounting became inevitable. I don't think we can afford to pay as much as we have been paying in view of appreciably lowered living costs."

Sir Alexander deplored sensational headlines and stories in newspapers magnifying the difficulties under which Britain was labouring. He reviewed briefly the history of the Old Land, and recalled the oft-quoted assertion of Napoleon: "The British can be depended upon to always win at the end of every battle—the last."

Turning to the political situation, the speaker pointed out that men would have been torn from a political standpoint to let the Labour Government reap the whirlwind alone. Similarly, the Conservative party had joined in a national effort to better the situation.

The Conservatives under Stanley Baldwin had given up watching the ball roll into their hands. The Liberals had given up the one life-line that might have saved the party.

Handling sixty broken eggs a minute in the packing houses of Whites and yolks, or delivers the two together, is a modern miracle.

Total wool consumption by the United States manufacturers for the first quarter of 1931 was 3,728,000 pounds.

Social Revolution is Under Way Says Inge

London, Oct. 1.—(By The Canadian Press)—Dean Inge is far from pessimistic when he looks at the present condition of human society, writing in "The Church of England Newspaper," he says: "If we look at the matter not from the point of view of parties or of classes, but from that of the well-being of the nation as a whole, shall judge the social revolution through which we are passing less unfavorably.

"For the first time in our history," he adds, "we are trying to share the boons of a high civilization to the whole community, and not to one not only by far the most heavily taxed nation in the world, the second spent on socalled social services was out of all comparison with similar charges in Continental countries. We alone have kept faith with our creditors. We were paying for the world orgy of spending between 1914 and 1918."

The Dean has hopes that if we can reduce our population to the optimum number which can be done by State-eugenication on a voluntary basis, the labor-saving machinery may make life comfortable for everybody.

Meanwhile, those who felt with good reason that they have been unjustly plundered must cultivate plain living and high thinking, and hold up before their children the men the ideal of disinterested service.

Bishop's Ban Failed to Prevent Wedding

London, Oct. 1.—(By The Canadian Press)—Because Dr. W. T. Perrin, a former Bishop of Wilmington, who is taking a rest cure during Dr. Winnington Ingram's visit in Canada, is opposed to the marriage of an uncle and niece, and stopped the reading of T. A. Grose, a solicitor of St. Clement's Inn, and Miss Jean Gordon Jones, at St. Clement Danes, they were married at the register office, Hendon. The Rev. Lord Gwydyr, H. J. Edwards, performed the ceremony in the absence of the Superintendent registrar, who was on holiday.

This was the third marriage of an uncle and niece under the new Marriage Act of Great Britain.

An authority on Church law says it is obvious from the fact that degrees of affinity prohibiting marriage included in the Prayer-book had not been altered, that the authority of bishops disagreed with the new Act. "The prohibitions in the Prayer-book can only be altered by a resolution in Convocation," he says, "and until such a resolution is passed it seems to me that bishops must abide by the Church law as it stands."

Bishop Perrin says: "It is a very simple matter. The law of the Church is quite definite on this point, and one has to administer it. That is all. I cannot comment on the law."

GLASGOW RIOTS ECHOED IN COMMONS

"You'll Take Our Lives or We'll Take Yours," Shouts M. P. in House

David Kirkwood Says the People Will Not Stand the Police Batons

WORDS RECORDED

McGovern, M. P., Arrested at Glasgow for Rioting.

London, Oct. 2 (AP)—Charges of "repression" were hurled at the government in the House of Commons tonight as a group of left wing Laborites from the Clydeside district of Scotland in the House of Commons today as a sequel to rioting in Glasgow last night.

David Wood led the group in refusing to accept the denial of secretary for Scotland, Sir Archibald Sinclair, that no measures of repression were being invoked against unemployed parties who battled with police and looted stores in the Scottish industrial city.

Sinclair said he would go to Glasgow himself and defy the law, he declared said, "you will have to take our lives or we will take yours. You can do anything you like, you think we are going to stand for our people being battered?"

The speaker took cognizance of Kirkwood's outburst as the House quieted down without further fireworks.

London, Oct. 2 (AP)—Rioting by unemployed in Glasgow was led by a member of parliament, it was charged. There were demonstrations against debt reductions in Britain and land today.

John McGovern, Labor M. P., who was arrested in connection with the Glasgow riots several weeks ago, was arrested on charges of forming a mob in Glasgow and he and a number of his followers spent the night in jail.

McGovern is Jail

Glasgow, Scotland, Oct. 2 (AP.)—John McGovern, Labor M.P., who was suspended from the House of Commons during a commotion last July, is in jail and Glasgow streets are littered with debris from the last night's rioting by the unemployed.

Fifty thousand jobless men put up a fight when police tried to disperse them in the night and early the morning the rioting started again when police tried to check a mob of looters breaking down store doors and stealing whatever they could by their hands on.

They armed with clubs, with hammers and hatchets and crowbars. Their young leaders at the heads of the police on foot and only the charges of mounted men could drive them back.

People leaned from second storey windows bombarding the police with chunks of broken furniture and bedding. Many persons were injured in the fighting, including at least three policemen.

Looting Occurs

The looting today began with most of the police were concentrated on the Glasgow green where last night's serious fighting took place. Merchants came running to report disturbances while in their stores and mounted police came at the gallop.

Sometimes they would surprise the looters but as they drove them off showers of canned goods, jars of jam, even loaves of bread, and cakes were tossed. The litter was still in the streets this afternoon, for the police were on guard against a further outbreak.

They went about the city helping store owners and peaceful citizens to put their shutters, to board up the broken windows and doors, but up to the middle of this afternoon they had been no new troubles.

McGovern and eleven others were arraigned today on a charge of "forming part of a disorderly crowd, threatening violence and committing a breach of the peace." They were sent to jail until tomorrow when they will be tried.

HOME MARKET CALLED BEST

Green of A.F. of L. Says Too Little Thought is Given it

MEETING ORGANIZED

Vigorous Response to Suggestions of Speakers

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 2.—Resolutions from committees of the departmental pre-convention gatherings of the building and metal trades and the Union-Label divisions of the American Federation of Labor are expected to be voted on in departmental sessions today.

Full development of the domestic market will do much to put the idle workers of the nation at work, Mr. Green said, "through all the ramifications of our complex economic system, science and managerial efficiency have constantly increased productivity. Increase the power of purchasing power by distributing more wealth and the labor now going on there has been too little thought about the market," Mr. Greene said.

"The greatest market is at home."

Mr. Geen is in his eighty-third year—enjoys good health, does not look his age and moves with activity which would be an exertion to many much younger men.

One Banana, Apple, Orange, Pear, for Gandhi's Guests

Ice Water For All and Goat's Milk For Gandhi,

GIFT OF WHEEL

London, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Three hundred invited guests, including Gandhi, most of them English, had luncheon with him today in honor of his 62nd birthday. Each place at each guest there was only one pear, one banana, one apple and one orange.

There was ice water, except for the Mahatma himself who drank goats' milk.

The Independent Labor Party and two Indian Societies in London were hosts at the luncheon held between Finner Brockway and the long-haired, sandal-shod Indian Mission.

As a birthday gift Mr. Gandhi received a tall spinning wheel on which a ball of thread already had been wound.

He was not the only guest in a strange costume. One young Englishman with wavy blonde hair had styled in the garments of Wazidistar Pane for the function wearing only a shirt and a loin cloth while Anglo English women were housepun dresses and there were a few typical Hindu girls whose jewels and flowered shawls were a sparkle of color.

The table in front of Mr. Gandhi was sprinkled with red rose petals chrysanthemums and red dahlias, one of which had a definite relation to his English disciple, pinned to her homespun shawl.

In a brief expression of his appreciation for the luncheon Mr. Gandhi Mahtma reaffirmed India's stand for independence and asserted that although Indians have no wish to gain independence at the cost of a single life, nevertheless he said he "willing that the holy sanges should go run with blood if that is necessary to win the freedom so long delayed." Canada Leads U. S. in Gold Production

Toronto, Oct. 2.—Canada passed the United States in gold production during the year 1930, officials of the statistical department of the Ontario Government of Mines said yesterday. Canada's production was valued at $43,500,000, while in the same year the United States produced $42,800,000 worth of gold, an official of the branch said.

Brother Searches Isles For Lost Flier Craner

Aberdeen, Scotland, Oct. 3 (A.P.)—William Cramer, brother of the United States flier, Parker Cramer, who was lost on a trip from Detroit to Copenhagen, left today for the Orkney and the Shetland Islands in the search for traces of the expedition.

The flier received a hunch that Cramer and his Canadian radio operator, Oliver Paquette, were still alive and that he intended to combe uninhabited islands in that vicinity in a small fishing vessel.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 2—The belief of William Cramer that his brother, Parker and Oliver Paquette, missing trans-Atlantic fliers are still alive is based upon a remark the aviator's brother made to him a near the Orkney Islands on August 11th apparently undamaged and with neither flier in the ship.

This was revealed today by Mrs. Paquette, wife of Oliver Paquette, who is at the home of her parents here.

Mrs. Paquette said she had been advised by William Cramer that Mr. Guthrie, Glasgow manufacturing agent, had seen the plane drifting in the water about 30 yards off the coast of the Orkney Islands and escorted it out of sight.

Mrs. Paquette declared that his brother and Paquette, forced down by bad weather or motor trouble, had landed on the island by the aid of an island of the Orkneys or Shetlands and that it was carried away by the tide.

14 Millionaires Will Contribute Half of Wealth

General Butler Has Support in Plan to Relief Poverty

EDUCATE YOUTH

Newton Square, Pa., Oct. 2.—Fourteen multi-millionaires, representing $3,000,000,000, General Smedley Butler asserts, stand ready to contribute half their wealth to relieve poverty and furnish widespread employment. He refuses to name them but says they have pledged support to a plan he has formulated to educate the youth of the nation to build a stronger union.

In an interview last night Butler outlined his plan whereby between 50,000 and 60,000 trade schools would be built by the Government. No one under 16 years old would be allowed to work and all must be educated in the Federal Schools. Dependents of youths would be cared for by the Government.

With building of the schools labor would be necessary, he said, and building material would be needed in large amounts. Thousands of teachers of all types would be employed.

Aviation and other industries would be subsidized; inventions would be expanded and supported by a bureau which would encourage "every form of new appliance, machinery or other inventions of modern science."

Real estate men would be ordered to tear down insanitary houses and other crowded living quarters. Homes, modern in every respect would be built.

Cardinals Score First Run In Second on Two Hits

(By Edward J. Neil, A. P. Sports Writer)

Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 2.—The purple haze of autumn clouded Sportsman's Park today as down upon the National League ball-park as the world champions Philadelphia Athletics sought today to beat the St. Louis Cardinals again in the second game of the World Series.

It was another good day for fast ball pitchers, cloudy enough to keep the sun in hiding most of the time and the languorous weather suited perfectly the thousands of short-sleeved patrons, who poured into the park early and late in time damaged.

Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh had just climbed from the plane and had been lowered from the deck of the Hermes preparatory to making a survey flight to the vicinity of Tungting Lake, 75 miles southwest of here, with the King of China Famine Commission as a passenger.

One wing struck the water as the plane turned sharply, capsizing the craft and throwing the Lindbergs and Dr. Ling into the water.

The Hermes lowered a lifeboat and pulled the trio out of the water in short order. The plane was then picked up and lifted to the deck of the Hermes.

New York, N.Y., Oct. 3— The upset of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's plane in the Yangtze River in China marks the second time the famous "Ws" couple have been in an accident.

At Valbuena Field in Mexico City in February 1929, Colonel Lindbergh and then Anne Spencer Morrow cracked up their landed their monoplanes, which had lost a wheel in the air.

Lindberghs are Thrown Into Yangste River When Plane Capsizes

British Aircraft Carrier Crew Rescue Them Quickly

WING HITS WATER.

Upset Follows of Two Lindberghs and Passenger

Hankow, China, Oct. 2 (A.P.) — The monoplane of Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh capsized in the Yangtze River here today, throwing the famous fliers into the water but they were rescued quickly by men from the British aircraft carrier Hermes.

The upset occurred while Lindbergh was turning the plane about on the surface of the river preparatory to a takeoff on another survey flight over China. The body and a wing of the plane was damaged.

Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh had just climbed from the plane and had been lowered from the deck of the Hermes preparatory to making a survey flight to the vicinity of Tungting Lake, 75 miles southwest of here, with the King of China Famine Commission as a passenger.

One wing struck the water as the plane turned sharply, capsizing the craft and throwing the Lindbergs and Dr. Ling into the water.

The Hermes lowered a lifeboat and pulled the trio out of the water in short order. The plane was then picked up and lifted to the deck of the Hermes.

New York, N.Y., Oct. 3— The upset of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's plane in the Yangtze River in China marks the second time the famous "Ws" couple have been in an accident.

At Valbuena Field in Mexico City in February 1929, Colonel Lindbergh and then Anne Spencer Morrow cracked up their landed their monoplanes, which had lost a wheel in the air.

Canoeist Is Drowned In Lake Ontario

Since former President Calvin Coolidge has announced he will not be a candidate for the Republican nomination in 1932, everybody admits, as Gary Cooper, President Hoover will be the candidate of the grand old party to succeed himself in the White House.

A few months ago despite the President's unpopularity with the press few observers in Washington but were willing to concede his re-election as extremely probable. But the hammering of hard times and the determination of the president to fight it out on the line of economy and charity and "rugged individualism" if it takes all winter may, it is now believed, result in a change of government next year.

POLICE AND DOLE

(By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 2.—(CP)—The police are debarred from making public demonstrations concerning their service conditions, but they have the permission of the Home Secretary to present their case privately, it was announced today.

Sir John Simon, Home Secretary, said in the council told you all that was to did when the delegation came down to the City Hall. Friday night, regards to unemployment relief this winter for the laboring man, the council had done everything possible so far and will soon have a permanent committee out. Certainly there is somebody who thinks we have not done everything possible and this meeting is the result. I understand a committee was appointed at a labor meeting to attend this meeting and we are ready to hear what they have to say."

Labor Protests

The Mayor then called upon each member of the committee appointed to speak to the gathering and his Worship asked that all be given a fair hearing. Mr. Baldwin was the first one called, stating that the laboring man was not satisfied the way the dole had been handled last winter. "I think," said Mr. Baldwin, "that the council should give out tickets to the unemployed and that they should be given the tickets should be punched by the paymaster." Councillor Wheeler, of the committee, asked the council if they considered the man that was given last winter got three days, while a few were working for the city practically all the winter," said the speaker. "There should be an organization to look after unemployed ranks to see that all men got their turn. Again there were contracts let in this city where the contractors sent outside for their help when there was enough labor in the city to take care of all contracts that are handed out."

A. E. Worrell told the meeting that he had a wife and three children, that he was born and raised in Belleville and that he received but one day's work in three weeks.

Business Claim

Charles K. Hanna, appointed chairman of the unemployed committee, was the last speaker for the delegation. At times the place was in a turmoil as the speakers came back and forth. He believed, he said, the unemployed should receive more consideration than they have had and the duties of the meeting called by the mayor was an excellent idea. "There should be a committee appointed to carry on this work," said Mr. Hanna. "I am in favor that the city council could do to relieve the situation and relieve it now. I am not charity. There is still three months of winter before us and I can't see but I am led to understand that it is the intention of the O.N.R. to close down for the rest of the year. There are 40 men employed at the car shops and I think the council should endeavor to have the railway to operate during the winter months for a short space of time. Some of the men have completed their 20 years service when they are often discharged and there formed a strong committee of citizens to look after these men. Some of the men have families, numbers, to handle the unemployment situation in this city this winter. Mr. Lynch, Mr. Lynch was appointed secretary pro tem and Mayor Ketcheson as chairman of the evening. A report from the committee will be made at a re- are not satisfied but the laborers, a wonder council has everyone to satisfy, not only the men but the public and critics but we are to help if possible in any movement to relieve the situation.

"His Worship replied to, all the speakers, that the city council had done everything in their power and was still moving forward, he said.

$548,413 Work Planned

"I think in my hand a list of the proposed relief work the council intends to do. This will be done if the money is forthcoming, assuming the grants from the Provincial and Federal governments will be forthcoming. The total amount of money for dollar for dollar with the government and there must be a happy medium found. You are here tonight demanding that the taxes be raised. Where are you going for once, something should be done and the council is willing to do all in its power.

Labor Must Relent

"There were 10,000 meals given out in the city last winter. I am not in the city hall "Who got them? His Worship stopped and answered that question. "Let's have a soul the same as you and I."

Miss Lynch has been fair and impartial, and she has looked after a great number with an energetic committee, but of course they are only human and they have made mistakes, the same as you and I. There is no soup kitchen in Belleville and there will not be one while the present Mayor and Worship respecting ting six days' work a week besides the foreman. Mayor Reid stated he had not heard of this statement was right and a low hum went over the audience. Continuing, concerning the money from the government, his Worship stated it was not the intention to draw the money from the city by publishing the amount that will be received, the Mayor was now warming up to the subject and he struck straight from the shoulder when he said the laboring men not to send their wives down to see if there was any work. "Come yourself like a man," said his Worship.

Auxiliary Wider Main

"As far as carrying the suggestion made by Mr. Hanna as to using influence with the railway to operate during the winter months, the council tried at the time the car shops were moved from the city but the railways are finding it difficult to finance and they have been capable of running the railway and will act as they see fit." said his Worship. "Some suggestions have been made that should be considered, that is the dole type that would be held from the flitration plant to the pumping station and the council and several small sewers would be constructed."

Mr. Arthur Leitch, a ratepayer asked how much over the $548,000 did Mayor Reid expect to raise? and Mayor Reid stated the figures were not available but he did not believe it would go over the stipulated amount.

It is Humanity

Another member of the audience asked the meeting if the council on the question of only Belleville men for employment and Mayor Reid said he was sure that no one would see a man starve. "If a man with a large family comes into the city and has not been here he will certainly look after him, because that would be British," said the Mayor.

One of the delegation, who waited on the council with respect to the bricklayers on the city schools, stated he was a taxpayer of the city and he believed that 60 per cent. of the wages paid on the work went to outside labor. "All the delegates got at the time of the interview with the Board of Education was "the passing of the buck" and they had nothing to do with the matter. It was decided by the council to build the schools, while the Board of Education passed the buck" to the city council. The speaker asked what was being done with the outside labor part of the work now going on at the six brick schools and the Public Utilities section should be taken at least.

Never Passed Buck

As soon as the man was finished Mayor Reid went into action. He said he was surprised to hear from the audience to ever say that he passed the buck. "I have no argument with the Board of Education and I repeat that the action of the council voted the money, the matter was entirely out of the hands of the council. Another man rose from the centre of the hall asked what was being done about low wage for the laboring man?" said the speaker was a taxpayer also and the speaker stated it was time that the council look into this point there was considerable boozing and the meeting was becoming bedlam. Mayor Reid endeavored to smooth the troubled waters by stating that the meeting was becoming nothing more than a racket.

Mr. Hanna returned to the platform and stated that many men who were served to the transients last winter and he took for the Retail Merchants Association that the dole is president, credit for most of the is provided for the men to the police department to carry on this work. Mr. Hanna thanked the City A. in this work and he asked them. Mr. Hanna also thanked the press. The Mayor thought the farmers were deserving of praise for the many bags of potatoes that were left for the use of the kitchen and Mr. Hanna added credit to this body. The Mayor thought $548,000 should be given to the unemployed citizens who gave cash donations and there were also included. There being no other queries the meeting adjourned, the council remaining in session to attend to order in the council chamber.

DIVINE GRACE ALONE WILL SAVE WORLD

Premier Bennett's Faith In Providence Expressed

PICTURE OF WEST

United Church Missionary Gathering Crowds at Massey Hall

Toronto, Oct. 2.— The great gathering which exceeded every available space at Massey Hall last night was inspired, and in turn enthused as Premier R. B. Bennett eloquently outlined some of the ways in which the difficult problems of these days should be met. The occasion was the assembly of the Missionary Congress of the United Church of Canada, and the seven thousand delegates were also addressed by Right Hon. Edmund Burton Haydon, K.C., D.C.L., Moderator, who delivered a spoken message from the Canadian West. His Worship Mayor Stewart appropriately welcomed the delegates, and the devotional exercises were led by Rev. J. S. Bonnell, B.A., Hon. R. W. Rowell, K.C., presided.

The grace of God saved England in the eighteenth century, and I am firmly convinced, as I stand here that nothing but the grace of God will save this world," declared Premier Bennett. The trouble of the world, he said, had resulted from a mad orgy of extravagance, reckless expenditure of money, forgetting the old Scottish virtue of thrift, the care for tomorrow.

In the course of his devotional address, Rev. J. S. Bonnell, B.A., spoke on "Spiritual Resources." "There can be no despair of the future," he declared, "in the mind of him, who believes that God exists." It was plain to the speaker, "that we have had too much past tense religion. Thank God that we can talk in Pentecostal terms in 1931. Praise God, that we can do that also in Toronto as in Vancouver. It seems to me that the central glory of our United Church of Canada lies just there—that: God's power, manifested more than 1,900 years ago, is again being made manifest in the midst of our great cities." The speaker quoted Sir Josiah Stamp as having said: "We can catch again the principle that dominated the early church in that one hour." We can catch again that spirit of brotherhood, and retranslate it in economic terms of the living present."

In closing, Dr. Oliver said with simple and convincing power: "We in Canada have got to see that this year that Christ would have us do. I summon you to courage, to consecration and to cross-bearing. I summon the United Church of Canada—as did General Foch in those dark, pivotal, pre-victory days in France—to fight, and fight, and fight. I summon you to be courageous, to be consecrated, as was Nehemiah, who 'steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem.' I summon you in the name of the most unanswerable people of the West. They are not dead, they are not sick, they are not sleeping."

Orgy of Extravagance

"What is the trouble with the world? A mad orgy of extravagance, reckless expenditure of money, forgetting the old and homely virtues of thrift. We are the victims of the belief that "Get rich quick" should be the motto of every speculation; extravagance — all these things have brought us to this pass. How shall they be remedied? How shall they be overcome? Some look to remedies here and there, but must do it. Others look to churches. Men and women" "will be done in one way, and one way only; by you and me, ourselves, and by no one else. It is what the individual will do that will determine the issue. Not you for me, and me for you, but you for yourself, and me for myself. That is why I say that we will save the world and not until.

"The Grace of God saved England in the eighteenth century, and I am firmly convinced as I stand here that nothing but the Grace of God will save this world. I am convinced, You may talk about your economic series and the delegations of Governments, of gold standards, the evils of demonetization of silver, and balances of trade and reports of commissions, but only will save Christendom, and that is the Grace of God." That is my conviction and I am not ashamed to say it here to you tonight."

A country is like an individual. It cannot keep in a solvent position forever if expenditures exceed income.—Philip Snowden, British statesman.

POLICE HANDLE MOB OF 50,000

Laborite Is Arrested As Leader of Mob at Glasgow

London, Oct. 2—In Glasgow Scotland, Salford, Lancashire; and Bristol and London demonstrations were attempted by crowds of unemployed yesterday and last night. In all cases mounted police, armed with batons, proved sufficient to handle the disturbances, although the mob on Glasgow Green numbered fully 50,000. A number of the rioters and some policemen were slightly injured, and numerous arrests were effected.

The most important disturbance was that in Glasgow which ended last night in arrest of John McGovern, turbulent Labor member of the House of Commons, Scotland's principal industrial city was the scene of various demonstrations during the day. Early, thousands of men and women paraded, but despite constant singing and shouting and traffic holdups, order was maintained. The corporation received a deputation of fifteen and afterward agreed by a vote of 57 to 53 to remit the grievances to the Public Assistance Committee. Then the trouble began.

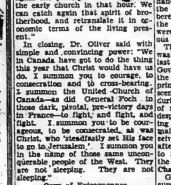
Glasgow's main disturbances occurred last night. A crowd of 50,000 jobless, gathered on Glasgow Green, was charged by mounted police. Several persons were injured. The demonstrators were led by John McGovern—who participated in a free for all fights to disperse crowds, works and was arrested on a charge of forming a disorderly mob.

Superintendent of Police Sweeney warned the crowd before the trouble started that they would have to disperse. The demonstrators ignored this, and mounted men then rode into their midst. The area was quickly cleared, and the cries of men and women hurrying to get out of the way of the horses and the policemen's batons.

Letters in Bank Suit Are Attacked

Suggestion Made Man Wrote Ones Attributed to Wife

Toronto, Oct. 2.—That the plaintiff, W. -R. Bonter, formerly of Trenton, and now of Toronto, who is suing the Bank of Montreal for $300,000 damages for alleged conversion of letter, but signed letters and written and signed letters which he identified were by his late wife's hand, was the suggestion made before Mr. Justice Masten in Osgoode Hall, Thursday by Mr. W. Tilley, K.C., representing the Bank of Montreal. Bonter's contention is that stock valued at $275,000 the property of his wife, was deposited by him in the Bank of Montreal's branch at Trenton as security for a loan of $1,000 in 1924. His wife died in 1927. The bank's defense is that no stock was ever deposited.



Letters were produced by the plaintiff which he declared were written by his late wife, and found after her death, and in which his contention as to the depositing of the stock in the Trenton branch of the Bank of Montreal was borne out.

"I don't know anything about that," Mr. Bonter said, when Mr. Tilley suggested that the wording of the letter sounded much like his own phrasing. Particular emphasis was placed by defence counsel on a letter written in November, 1927, and in which it was stated that Mrs. Bonter did not expect to live long. This letter, Mr. Bonter said, was not opened till after his wife's death; when it was read aloud by his sister in the presence of other persons and himself. The case is continuing.

CITY TREASURE

1100 JOBLESS OWN MOTORS

In Toronto 2331 Have Liquor Permits Report Shows

Toronto, Oct. 2.—A statement analyzing the number of unemployed who registered for relief work from the point of view of occupation, their dependents and their religion, was submitted to Mayor Stewart yesterday by Commissioner of Public Welfare, A. W. Laver at the request of the Mayor.

The statement showed that 29,474 men were registered for work, and of the number approximately 15,000 were Protestants, more than 4,300 are Roman Catholics; 1,400 are Greek Catholics and only 275 gave their religion as Jewish. The explanation of the small number of Jewish people to register for relief work is said to be that the Jewish unemployed think they are not fit for the type of work at present being on their trade unions and commercial societies to carry them through the depression.

The largest number out of employment according to occupation are general laborers. The total is 12,325. After the general laborers come the carpenters, totalling 2,032, and clerks, who number 1,525. There are more than 1,100 painters and decorators seeking employment, and almost as many chauffeurs.

Continuing, the statement shows that 2,331 permit liquor permits, more than 1,100 own automobiles, more than 1,700 have bank accounts, and 8,364 carry life insurance among the number who have registered for employment on Government work. The statement also reveals that, out of the number of unmarried men on relief work, only 732 are listed as being the sole support.

The birthplaces of the applicants who registered are as follows: Canada, 4,256; Great Britain, 4,354; the United States, 96; and foreign 5,078.

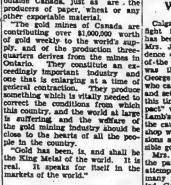
GOLD DEMAND STILL GROWS

Hon. Charles McCrea Sees Nothing to Daunt Prospectors

Toronto, Oct. 2—In the opinion of Hon. Charles McCrea, Minister of Mines, the possibility of the Dominion's gold mining industry suffering by reason of the "tumultuous changes" that have taken place in the world's financial relationships is an extremely remote one.



"Instead of gold bullion becoming less valuable, it would appear to be more desirable than before," declared Mr. McCrea yesterday in a lengthy statement issued from his Queen's Park office with a view to reassuring gold mine owners who have manifested worry over the future. "Great Britain and other countries have taken action which is described as 'raising' the gold standard, have actually taken steps to prevent further loss of the precious metal and are endeavouring to restore their former reserves. There seems little danger of the United States ever again declaring dollars worth, of France, with another huge total, doing or permitting anything which would reduce the worth of their enormous holdings; such an occurrence is unthinkable of demonetization.

"Nor is it likely that the British Empire, which produces three-quarters of the world's gold, and possesses billions of dollars' worth of ore, will propose anything which will diminish the value of their great resources.

"Both United States and Great Britain have been off the gold standard in previous times of stress, but gold has never lost its credibility nor its usefulness. There is nothing in the situation which should discourage prospectors in their search for new discoveries, nor cause gold miners to restrict their activities. On the contrary, we shall likely find that both will be accelerated. The exchange premium represents not so much extra profit for the gold mines as Ottawa authorities agree that the premium is merely a means by which gold may be selling their gold outside Canada, and that producers of paper, wheat or any other exportable material.

"The gold mines of Canada are contributing over $1,000,000 worth of gold weekly to the world's supply, and or the production three-quarters comes from the mines in Ontario. They constitute an extremely important industry and one that is enlarging at a time of general contraction. They produce something which is vitally necessary to correct the conditions from which the country, and the world at large is suffering and the welfare of the gold mining industry should be close to the hearts of all the people in the country.

"Gold has been, is, and shall be the King Metal of the world. It is real. It speaks for itself in the markets of the world."

LIPTON NOW PAST CRISIS

"Sporting Chance" For Great Merchant Sportsman

London, Oct. 2.—Sir Thomas Lipton had what his doctors called "a sporting chance." Wednesday night he survived a chill and several cold from which, it was revealed, he has been suffering for several days.

"There is an encouraging improvement," one of his doctors said, regarding the condition of the Dutchman who has tried so many times to win the America Cup and always lost.

Sir Thomas was conscious all day until evening when he dozed off. Members of his household appeared relieved last night at the development.

"The physicians believe the crisis past, and unless there are complications we shall continue very hopeful," a secretary said.

Death Breaks Link With Rebellion Days

Calgary, Oct. 2.—A link with the fight for responsible government has been broken in the death of Mrs. Jessie Maguire, at the residence of her son, Walter Maguire, of the Canada Postal Service. She was the only surviving child of George Lamb of Hawick, Scotland, who came to Upper Canada in 1834 and settled in Thornhill. It was at this time that the "Family Compact" was at its strongest, and, as the family stories were given, in the cause of Reform, his coopershop was often the scene of discussions among those who favored responsible government.

Mrs. Maguire was very proud of the part her father played in the attempted revolution, and treasured many relics of the disturbed period. George Lamb's connection with the Reform movement was well known, and after suppression of the dawning by Sir Francis Bond Head, in a culvert at York Mills. After several days' flight, under cover, escape and Lamb gave himself up. He was sentenced to three years' hard labor and then exile for life.

After Lamb had spent eighteen months in Toronto Jail, Lord Durham's report was published, and the sentence was commuted to four years' exile, which he spent in Lockport, N.Y., and then returned to adopted country, he re-established himself at Thornhill.

Mrs. Maguire was one of ten children. Amos Mclean, prominent Liberal and business man of Toronto, is a brother-in-law.

TARZAN OF THE APES, No. 46. (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Jane realized she was being borne away a captive. She struggled desperately. But Tarzan's strong arms held her more tightly. Once he looked down into her eyes and smiled. The face above her was of extraordinary beauty. Presently he took her to the tree. On and on they went for many miles.

Now they had come to their destination. In his strong arms Tarzan placed her softly upon the green turf. She noted his magnificent figure towering above her, its perfect symmetry, the poise of his fine head upon his broad shoulders. Surely his purpose could not be base or cruel.

With a bound Tarzan sprang into the trees and disappeared. Had he left her there to her fate in the lonely jungle? . . . Suddenly, a sudden, slight sound! . . . There stood Tarzan, his arms filled with luscious, ripe fruit. He stroked her hair and tried to comfort and quiet her.

The last few hours had taught her to trust this strange, wild creature. It commenced to dawn upon her that she had, possibly, learned something she had never before known before—LOVE. She wondered—and then she smiled . . . And still smiling, she rushed forward eagerly away, pointing to the food.

Together, in silence they ate. He made a little bower of boughs and grasses. Then he did the only thing he knew to assure Jane of her safety. He handed her his knife—motioning her to sleep. She hesitated, while Tarzan stretched himself upon the ground across the entrance.

A'S TIMELY HITTING BLASTS PAUL DERRINGER FROM MOUND IN 1ST WORLD SERIES START

Athletics Overcome Two-Run Lead Over the Cards

NEVER HEADED

Simmons Hits Homes in Seventh to Score Cochrane

By Ernest J. Mell Associated Press Sports Writer

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 3—Amid bleedthy increasing plaudits of a baseball world, that knows a thrill when it sees one, the World Champion Philadelphia Athletics have picked up their threads of world series conquest where they dropped it last fall.

It isn't so much that the A's setting a mark of three straight series championships, whipped the St. Louis Cardinals 6 to 3 yesterday in the opening game of the annual fall diamond classic one game, important at the start of a short, seven game clash, still does not necessarily indicate ultimate victory.

Rather it was the way the champions of the baseball world, insolent in their confidence, rose up in their might to come from behind and administer a typical Athletics' drubbing to a team that led to the point of desperation in a round of 9 innings. The cold, old story of athletic power, administered with machine-like efficiency, steam-rollering the enemy into broken submission when they began to be beginning to sprout again.

Last fall the Athletics leaped upon these Cardinals in the world series, blasting them apart at its last seams in the fifth game moments, to win their second straight world baseball championship mark. They entered the first game of the 1931 games of the world series at 8 to 5. And today, facing the second and last game here until three days hence, they packed up in Philadelphia next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, they stand one to 1 to 1 choice to gather in their third straight, same conquest, something never before achieved in the history of baseball.

Large Crowd Present

A crowd of 36,853 jamming flag-draped Sportsman's Park, to witness a few hundred of absolute capacity, paid $108,521 yesterday to see the Athletics with absolute ease and nonchalant confidence in execution that had dramatic possibilities as great as any ever contained in the history of these time honored duels of the American and National leagues champions.

There was Lefty Grove, probably the greatest southpaw of baseball certainly the finest pitcher of his day, seeking to add that laurel into the hurling box to oppose a wizard right handed pitcher, Paul Derringer, No. 1 man of the Cardinals staff of 12 pitchers in both the Major Leagues ever to start the opening world series game for his team.

It was a situation crammed with misery and suspense, and although the great crowd, basking in the warmth of a brilliant October sunset afternoon, caught every bit of the tension, Derringer, weighing the 215 pounds, 6 foot three inch farmer boy just a few years out of the cow barn, held back none of the mighty A's with his sweeping curves and sinkers that at times could go on with every possibility of going into the discard, broke up the club that finally smashed the American League pennant.

The big rookie, solid and chilly as a cold storage turkey, went to his task. Four of the first six men to face him went down, hunting fielder's at the end of strikeouts. And in the meantime the Cardinals swinging lustily at Grove's every motion, climbed aboard the mighty Giyove.

There was something wrong with the great left hander's control. Control is the very first inning, after he had fanned little Andy High, substituting for Jimmy Dykes at base corner for the injured Sparky Adams, Wally Roettger was handed him for a single. Frankie Frisch shot a single to right field, a wild and run play and Jim Bottomley, the hulking Cardinals first baseman, promptly drove home the first run with an infield single. And there the trouble was over Pepper Martin, the young centre fielder like Derringer a new comer to the sort of thing, banged a long double off the right field screen and the second run was over.

Some of the highest and widest cheering and uproar any series ever saw waited Derringer on the mound for the third inning, but two run lead looked large to the grandstands. The second inning seemed likely to have turned to the undertow.

Then it was that the Athletics cards came toppling down as the champions turned their power loose on the rookie, who had given too much of a target to swing and benders blotting out the A's in the first two innings.

Jimmy Dykes rounded a single over third, first off the rookie, and Bob Williams, sensational young shortstop who ousted the veteran Jess Haines from the championship, made a safe shot into right. Grove fanned for the first out of the inning, and Al Simmons's grounder led to Dykes being forced at third. Max Bishop landed a double into left and one run was over, Mickey Cochrane walked.

Crowd Sat Tense

But there were two out and the big crowd sat tense as Derringer, the big rookie, pitched a curve ball on the outstanding slugger of them all, Jimmy Foxx, and the young fellow got three balls and two strikes on the big fellow before missing the plate. One more strike, even a ball that got a fanly crack at, would retire it, and Derringer might have come through to hear his name sung from one end of the baseball world. Instead the crucial pitch was an inside ball, and Foxx walked. And the deluge came with the run getting blow of the afternoon. Simmons hammered a vicious single through the infield, which it mean little except for counted, and the game was on ice.

Later, in the seventh inning, when it mean little except for the picture value, Simmons pluckily got a long drive to the rear of right in the left field bleachers. Except for that one blow, Derringer kept the A's in check.

Grove, hit harder than was expected, coasted in after the big inning, but was never in trouble. He reached him for 12 hits, one more than the total that the Cards made. They hit the big Lefty only, when the pinch people sure the their baseball).

Mortie Weaver, who will seek to get a pitching trial with Washington, hopes to some day oppose Jim Bottomley in the Cards in the box. As young stars in the south, they hooked up in a thriller which-Mooney won, 1 to 0. He fanned 24 men and Weaver fanned 24. That game attracted the scouts.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 3.—With their Little World Series all even at one game apiece, Rochester and St. Paul had an open date today.

The Rochester Red Wings, champions of the International League, engaged in a postseason series of 5 to 3 victory over St. Paul, pennant winners of the American Association. The Saints won the first game, 4 to 0.

Rochester won behind the fine pitching of Herman Ball. A fourrun rumble off John Murphy in the sixth inning served up the game for the visitors, who drove in three runs for the Saints.

A total of only 3,983 persons paid $5,946.25 to see the game, bringing the attendance for the two contests to 8,837 and the receipts to $21,-163.75.

The series will be resumed Saturday, with the fourth game scheduled for Sunday.

The Napanee Gibbards, Ontario intermediate baseball finalists, are being banqueted and suite regularly these days. The Rotary Club entertained them last Monday and while the Legion invited them out for the eve-ning's festivities. Tonight the Gibbards are planning a big civic banquet for them next week.

No date has been set for the Kiwanis-Firemen game as yet. These two teams must play off to decide the second and third place in the league. After Wednesday's games the C.I.L. leads first position and the Oddfellows are entertaining the second rung on the league ladder. Now they are going to have a "round table" meeting to decide championship. (Stick in three boys).

MIGHT CHANGE BEFORE GAME

Connie Mack Gives His Reason Why Hurling Selection Not Given

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 2.—Connie Mack, 68-year-old manager of the victorious Athletics, explained today he never gives out his pitching selections in advance of the World Series games.

The reason is because he might change his mind at the moment before the game and the baseball public might think he was trying to put something over or become mysterious.

"I usually make up my mind the day before the game," Mack said, "but I don't announce it.

"If I gave out my selections and then changed my mind, the public might believe I was trying to fool them, or that I had something up my sleeve.

"I haven't anything up my sleeve," Mack said, raising his long right arm and dropping it to show nothing there.

"If I don't tell who is going to pitch, I don't have to explain myself back if I change my mind. Now, that's fair, isn't it?"

CUBAN WON SHORT BOUT

Kid Chocolate Defeats Scalfaro in 39 Secs. of First Round

New York, N.Y., Oct. 2.—The Junior lightweight championship of Cuba, held by Kid Chocolate, world in general, but Kid Chocolate, the Cuban, disagreed with the world on it.

The black-skinned Cuban won the synthetic 130-pound crown by stopping Benny Scalfaro in 39 seconds, several months ago. Last night, with the title at stake, he disposed of Joe Dundee, hard-hitting Italian boy, in 39 seconds of the first round of a scheduled 10-round bout.

The sudden ending of the contest provided considerable confusion among the experts, many of whom thought Dundee was in shape to continue. Joe, who held Chocolate to a draw in their first meeting a few months ago, went in the first flurry of punching and came up groggy but full of fight, at the count of eight. He was ready to go on when Referee Arthur Donovan, Kid Otto, waved him to his corner.

Scalfaro protested vigorously and tried to get at Chocolate and eventually required the help of his seconds to restrain him from attacking the champion before his handlers could get him into his dressing room.

Chocolate weighed 128 1-4 pounds; Scalfaro 126.

Communists Looked After Destitutes

Toronto, Oct. 2.—How Communists went to the aid of several destitute families during the recent strike was declared here by Mrs. Florence Custance, president of the Missionary Congress of the United Church of Canada, to Rev. J. S. Rondell of that city.

Mrs. Custance was summoned by Communist leaders to the home of a Finnish family, she said. Going to their headquarters, she had been shown several families facing starvation.

Rev. Rondell somehow failed to see between all other relief bodies and had been left here and there in all Winnipeg only the Communists had looked after them," he said.

Port Huron Banks Ask 18 Per Cent. Discount

Sarnia, Oct. 3.—While the New York money market yesterday was quoting the Canadian dollar at a discount of 11 per cent., banks at Port Huron were advertising Canadian money to the extent of 18 cents on the dollar. The lower purchasing value of Canadian money in United States dollars is causing a big slump in border money that yesterday was expanded in the United States.

Whistling with Throat "OKayed" but Not Puckering of the Lips

New York, Oct. 3.—Deluged by hangover from childhood days," he mail and perturbed by the incessant whistling of students who paraded up and down the corridor adjoining his office, Dr. Charles Gray Shaw, Professor of Philosophy at New York University, announced Monday that "if men" whistle they usually are nervous," urged a ban on whistling as a nuisance.

Dr. Shaw, who for twenty-seven years has been one of the most popular professor at the university and who is the author of numerous books on culture, asserted that "whistling with the throat is often done by intelligent people." The type of whistling to which Dr. Shaw said he objected was the one obtained by the "puckering of the lips." The puckering of the lips is merely a said.

"Whistling from the throat is indicative of the intelligent person, while whistling with the lips is significant of the moron," Dr. Shaw continued. "Musicians usually whistle from the throat. They have lips through."

In the matter of the shades of mail that cluttered up his desk, Dr. Shaw said that he had received many letters from very cultured persons or from very uncultured persons, but none from persons in the middle class. He could offer no explanation.

Meanwhile students seemed obliged with the idea of dispensing or proving Dr. Shaw's theory by whistling up and down the hall chirping notes of popular songs. Some even went as far as to spy on Dr. Shaw to find out if he whistled.

Brown Race in U.S.A. of 12 Million Negro, White and Indian at Basis

Chicago, Oct. 2. A new race, brown skinned, formed of the fusion of Negro blood with white and Indian, is group new in biological make-up, has been developed, 13,000,000 strong, in the United States of America, Dr. Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, has set forth his contention in a book just out (he proves it) entitled "Brown Democracy of a New Race".

The family tree of the browns is complex, he writes, but roots reaching back almost to the time of the Mayflower. Some of the blood involved in a century as contrasted with the blood of Indians from Asia, the Egyptians, Greeks, Jews or the Chinese.

Mr. Embree's researches lead him to the conclusion that more than 12,000,000 people in the United States have some white or Indian blood in their veins. Many are passing for white fusion, a few more generations will be nearly every Negro with some white blood through the distribution of inheritance characteristics.

"Black forefathers of the new race," the author wrote, "were among the first settlers of the New World. In 1619, according to John Rolfe, twenty Negro slaves had arrived in Jamestown a Dutch man-of-war that sold us seventy Negroes."

The diversity of Africans brought in during slave days even with no admixture of white or Indian blood, Mr. Embree says, would itself have produced a new race different from the white and the red. The Negro and Indian blood began to be fused with the white from

"No special odium," he writes, "attached to the Negro-Indian, mulatto children almost as a matter of course. Thomas Jefferson was reputed to have fathered, and regretted that certain of his own children were mulatto, being born because of the conditions imposed by their surroundings.

"These blood mixtures of slave days were often what scientists today call hybrids, and were fertile. The best white blood, represented by the Virginia aristocracy, was mixed at will with that of Negro girls chosen for their beauty, intelligence and attractive personalities.

Mr. Embree says the general blending of the brown race has two peculiarities.

"First, it has been formed in an environment of great tension and conflict. Second, instead of developing in isolation, as did the Negro, its immediate association with a highly developed civilization—Western industrialism.

7 FOREIGNERS ARE WOUNDED

Italian Quarter in Niagara Falls Scene of Struggle

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 2 (C.P.)—Following the shootings in the Italian colony here Friday night, Gaeti and Vito Del Vechio were today charged with attempted murder of Vito Ferri and Sanio Menino and also with shooting with intent to cause bodily harm to both men. Ferri, who fired a shot that killed Assunta Del Vechio, divorced ilo Rosanni and his wife and children, was charged with murder and unlawful wounding. All three defendants were remanded for a week. Sanio Menino was released from custody but served with a summons to appear in police court next Monday.

Mrs. Ferri, who was completely prostrated by the tragedy, declared she would move herself and ten children to Welland where she became she feared for their lives if they remained in their own home. Fighting broke out in the Italian quarter here when Ferri, Menino and seven men, women and children were hurt in the struggle. Seven armed men and two wounded are being held in custody. Gaeti Del Vecchio and Vito Del Vecchio are held on open charges as also are Vito Ferri and Sanio Menino. The fight was the climax to a series of bombings and shootings which have taken place in the Italian section recently.

The wounded in hospital are Vito Rosanni and his wife, their three children, Angelina, 12; Rose, 10; Linzie, 13, all with gunshot wounds which they received in the home of Ferri. Ferri and Menino were among those with gunshot wounds here. Ferri and Menino said early today that they were shot at from a window started by Gatti and Del Vecchio.

Fired From Ambush

Police said that as far as they could learn Menino was visiting at Ferri's home when the shots were fired. Ferri was leaving the Rogas Ferri establishment at the time. Both the men were targets for a barrage of shots fired from ambush by Gatti and Del Vecchio, police said. Both men escaped and got his own gun and opened fire at the Del Vecchio home. Both Italians were in front of their house when they fired the shots.

Police claim that Gatti and Del Vecchio fired the shots seen fired by Ferri. Both were wounded by shots from Ferri's gun.

During the past few months there has been considerable trouble among members of the Italian colony here, a section, all foreigners, police said. Recently Gatti was severely injured by a bicycle through Queen Victoria Park and was attacked by an unidentified assailant and slashed with a razor or knife. Pasquale Serafia was arrested for the crime and was committed for trial but so far has not been tried.

During the past six months there have been several bombings in the Buchanan Avenue sections. house near the Ferri home was bombed recently and badly damaged.

According to Mr. and Mrs. Ferri, they had been in bed when firing in their home when repeated shots were fired through the glass of the door. They jumped up and two, fusiliers of shots hit them. They say the two men running away after having fired the shots were Gatti and Del Vecchio who are married to daughters of the latter family.

An attempt was made to murder Vito Ferri in March, 1930, when he escaped out from ambush in Victoria Park, Niagara Falls, with a pistol. Shrattz is in Welland jail on charges of attempted murder or murder at the assizes and Gatti and Del Vecchio are charged with the attempted murder of Vito Ferri and Sanio Menino and also with shooting with intent to cause bodily harm to both men. The Belleville Lodge Entertain Their Visitors

FINE MUSIC

Paying their annual fraternal visit to the Belleville Lodge, A.F. and A.M., the R. Ross Robertson Lodge of Toronto, No. 566 A. F. and A. M., G.R.C., were guests of the Belleville Lodge, No. 122, last evening. The Toronto brothers were met at the C. N. R. station and transported to the lodge rooms where dinner had been prepared for them.

The visiting members of the John Ross Robertson Lodge were officially welcomed in the lodge rooms by Wor. Master Bro. Charles Hall. The members of the visiting lodge then accomplished the second degree in masonry and their work in the lodge room was an inspiration to the local brethren.

After their labours were finished in the lodge room the members adjourned to the banquet room where the tables had been decorated and served a picture. The music was supplied by the orchestra from the John Ross Robertson Lodge. Their playing brought many rounds of applause from the visitors and many words of praise were heard in their favor.

When Wor. Bro. P. Chapman called the banquet to order, silence fell down, forty of whom were from Toronto. Most Wor. Bro. Dr. Ponton, Grand Master, was present and was called upon to act in place of the sitting master and proposed the toast to the King, the music being supplied by the visiting orchestra, and the fifteen stroke, the toast-master then called for the toast to the King and the members responded. He proposed the toast to the Grand Lodge and the Grand Master, Most Wor. Bro. Ponton responded to Rt. Wor. Bro. J. W. Bruce, Rt. Wor. Bro. Dr. Edward District No. 14. Rt. Wor. Bro. Major Ketchum and Rt. Wor. and this remark met with the unanimous approval of the company. He also called upon the Belleville lodge which has always been upheld by the Toronto brethren. "The ancient and will of God have always been held up by the members of the lodge. "For our order is based on that great benevolence, kindness, love and fair dealing." He added that it was a pleasure to have a body of men connected with the lodge present from Toronto.

The toast to the "visitors" was responded to by numerous visitors from Toronto, who spoke in various parts of the province.

The toast of the evening was then proposed by Rt. Wor. Bro. H. Clarke of Belleville Lodge, which he asked to rise and drink to the health of the Ross Robertson Lodge and its successor. Bro. Clarke said that he considered it a privilege to see the Toronto lodge and the many members had shown in the lodge room. He also wished to thank the orchestra for their music which was responded to by several members of the orchestra. Wor. Bro. Chapman, Master, Dan Martin, stated that he was glad to see that the head of the company the members of his lodge had been initiated in the Masonic order. He also stated that he was glad that he could say that Most Wor. Bro. Dr. Ponton was a member of the John Ross Robertson Lodge. Wor. Bro. Chapman Ponton and said that he had always been a friend to the lodge and its work and members of his mother lodge. "There is a debt owed to the men who have founded our order in the east," said the speaker.

"We are trying to carry on the work was in evidence perhaps more today than ever before. It is a good time to prove the principles inculcated in our order," said Wor. Bro. Martin. In closing, he declared that the success of the John Ross Robertson Lodge was due to the fine motto left by its founder—"I pass this way but once." "I pass this way I, for I may not pass this way again." He thanked the visitors for their kindness and the officers and members for their kind and courteous treatment and established by stating that it was a privilege to come to Belleville.

Wor. Bro. Brethren of Queen City Lodge was in a very humorous mood and told many humorous stories a few comical tales after which he said that the members of the John Ross Robertson Lodge was doing in the city of Belleville and the principles laid down by their founder was responsible for their success. Before proposing the toast to Belleville Lodge, Wor. Bro. Middleton spoke very highly of the Duty of Quebec and Ontario and referred to it as the "cradle of Masonry." Wor. Bro. Gillies of Toronto spoke on the Brotherhood of Masonry and stated that there was a need for more spirit of Canada through this present crisis, as it was the ideals of the Masonic order that made Canada what it is.

THE COUNTRY DOCTOR

The country doctor still exists, says Current History, relating stories of a general practitioner "somewhere in Arkansas." One story told of a call in an appendicitis case on which he went over two mountains and through 17 miles of underbrush. The New York Times quotes the description of the operation:

"The doctor arrived shortly after sundown. After a brief diagnosis, he diplomatically shut everybody from the house save two level-headed farm hands whom he had known since their babyhood. He directed them to build a fire in the kitchen stove, put water to boil, and when they had finished to set up the dining room table 'real steady-like', and, after they had washed their hands and arms in lye soap, to spread clean sheets over it. In another five minutes the patient was on the table taking ether. The doctor told his assistants to blow out the oil lamps. Fire and anaesthetics should not be too close together. A farm hand brought the doctor's flashlight, pressed the magic button and there was light right where needed. The operation proceeded and the appendix was a bad one. But within forty minutes the patient was back in bed, the operation a complete success."

Old people and babies make the most demands upon the country doctor. Blinding storms and washed out roads and bridges, flooded paths, and treacherous river crossings are all in the day's work of this doctor and of the country doctor the world over. Even today the country doctor hereabouts has such experiences as that related where the doctor was stopped by floods and tied his car to a tree and made the call on foot by wading to the house.

The Times praises this type of doctor who is found not only in Arkansas, but here in Ontario. He is modern in his methods, resourceful, and self-sacrificing. And he hopes to use an airplane some day in his calls.

LINCOLN NOT GROTESQUE

Lincoln's ugliness is a myth and Washington's handsomeness is in the same class, declares Charles W. Thompson, in a volume published this week.

The pendulum has swung too far towards the popular conception of Lincoln as an uncouth figure, he says, and he asks that it swing back a little, there is no danger that it will swing back far enough to present the United States with another George Washington of fiction.

How the public opinion was gradually warped in regard to Lincoln's appearance is described. Lincoln's homeliness of Lincoln were emphasized until the time came when the whole conception of him as he visited was warped. Similarly the public opinion of Washington had been changed from all likeness of the man because his dignity, his stateliness, his fine proportions were always emphasized.

It was impossible to paint Lincoln as beautiful so the pendulum swung to the extreme of the opposite direction, of his length of limb, his furrowed face and his great hands and feet have given, says Thompson, a grotesque conception of Lincoln—which he might himself have resented if he were living, though in Lincoln's case the greatness of the figure shows it in brighter light. In any city or town, there are people who are either deified or rendered grotesque. Some men walk in a halo among their neighbors and others are never appreciated at their worth. It is an curious conspiracy of everyone to raise one and lower the other.

AMUSING PHENOMENA

Prof. Einstein, discoverer of relativity, has found a new use for science—to cheer people up in the midst of depression. So he took the other evening to relate amusing phenomena of natural science.

No one would expect natural science to have a sense of humor but the smiling modest Einstein would almost have us believe that science does crack a joke.

Here are some of the questions he propounded:

Why is sand solid when wet but muddy when in water?

Why does an airplane fly?

Why do tea leaves gather in the centre of a cup when the tea is stirred?

He answered these and many more.

"You can fool any accomplished scientists on the last question, which is just a little trick," he said.

"Why does the wind die down at sunset, leaving the sailor helpless out in the middle of the water?" he asked, adding that this was a grave matter, as he had once been left with a young lady alone in a boat until 2 A. M.

ONSTANT

By Alice Michaelis

Soon spring is past,
The year, grows old,
On wintry blast
Flings autumn's gold.

From summer's glade
Bloom dies away,
The roses fade
On lips once gay.

Each joy has wings,
Youth's reign is brief,
Of all glad things
Old Time's a thief.

Yet hand in hand
And heart to heart
Together stand
We two, apart.

Sometimes above
Bird, beast and grass,
The soul has love
Which does not pass.

THE OLD HAIR SOFA, which stood in the front room for so many years, used only on state occasions, such as the nights when Sis's steady company came, and finally thrown into the discard with the changing of the styles, has attained new dignity with the modern craze for antiques. Incidentally quite a flourishing infant industry has sprung up in re-upholstering the old pieces and in restoring ancient tubes and chairs. Tourists from the United States in Belleville this summer have been ardent hunters of the antique and many pieces were picked up and left here to be re-upholstered and shipped to distant points. One set of table, chairs and sofa are being fixed up in a local factory for shipment to California, and a number of other pieces are in process of transformation, in fact three men are kept busy all the time in this factory on this class of work.

GET LAUGH OUT OF LIFE, don't be too critical of the other fellow. If he is a crank, or a crab, or a grouch, or any of those things which instinctively raise the fighting spirit in you on coming in contact with him, laugh at his idiosyncracies, give him credit for being just a bit different from other fellows and therefore entitled to a measure of respect in a bedlam of folks cut apparently on the same pattern. Let's laugh at the other fellow's peculiarities as long as they are not malicious or harmful, smile at his absurdities, and give him credit for being courageous enough to escape from the army of YES-MEN—who always outwardly agree no matter how much inwardly they may differ and vainly but mutely raise at someone else's concepts. Let's get a laugh out of life wherever possible, and you'd be surprised how many frowns can be turned into laughs by just seeking for humor in odd places.

MAHATMA AND COMEDIAN

Chaplin knew Gandhi. Gandhi did not know Chaplin. One's first reaction is that we say it—that Gandhi was joking. Was this not another quirk of a person who treads such Olympian fields that he could not unbend sufficiently to see below him. There is precedent for such aloofness. When, with cap and bells, Lord Darling sat in the high courts of England, one day was chanced to mention the famous English comedian. George Robey. Whereupon Judge turned quizzically to the attorney, and asked "And, who is George Robey, pray?" Quick as a flash the attorney replied "He is the darling of the gods, m'lud," meaning of course the "gallery gods." But Gandhi does not joke like Lord Darling. His negative answer to the question whether he knew the renowned Charlie and the simplicity of an amazing things is like apart.

That Gandhi should not know Chaplin, however, is surprising not for the obvious reason that they share the floodlights of world publicity but because they have so much in common. Both are champions of the underdog battling with the might and power of outrageous fortune. Both bring to the world the appeal of the man fit in society. In Gandhi's case those who are left high and dry by machine's harsh economy, and in Chaplin's those who are equally stranded by sentimental hangovers. Secondly, they use a stage instead of a soap box for their sermon. Both have therefore become symbols rather than voices. Gandhi, with his lisp, cloth and goat's milk, is quite as histrionic as Chaplin, with his cane and cavalier shoes. In no other way could their conceptions have won such world-wide acceptance as from a world audience for the portrayal of world wide types.

Yet Gandhi did not know Chaplin. It is as though two constellations had never been introduced.—C. S. Monitor.

A CALL TO DUTY

Sir Arthur Currie does well to stress so strongly the splendid opportunity for leadership and service which present conditions offer to the men and women, trained or in training, in our Universities. To quote the Principal, "If your University education has given you any thing, it should be the willingness and determination to be a good citizen in all things, and the good right to the heart of things, to be uninfluenced by the interest, to have a desire and the willingness to expose and to combat shams, fanaticism, bigotry, hypocrisy, greed, dishonesty, selfishness, and fraud and injustice." "I think," he added, "the world expects you to do those things."—Montreal Star.

Letters to the Editor

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir:

GOLD

This beautiful metal has a great many uses, gold plate, gold teeth, gold rings and other decoration purposes, but as money it may accomplish many to know it is practically useless. It is of no more good on earth than it is in the bottom of the sea, in both places it is hidden. It is only used as an endorser and does not have to officiate as often as an endorsee. If you have a bank with a $5.00 bill and asks a $5.00 gold piece for it he gets it but what better is it? Not so good. He loses the crispness of a bill and if he has a hole in his pocket he loses the small coining. A gold coin is not pure gold, that is one reason it can depreciate. A bank of Dominion note holds its own. Mourn not for the pound, the eagle, the franc or that most expressive name of them all, the lire. We have other mediums of exchange.

Yours very truly,

J. E. Walmsley

LEAVES BENCH AT 86

H. B. Bedford retired Thursday as Police Magistrate of Deseronto and Tyendinaga, after 34 years on the bench, at the age of 86. Mr. Bedford presided on the Bench for the last time Tuesday, when a Liquor Control Act case came before him. Thousands of cases have come before Mr. Bedford, and his decisions, in the main, have never been overruled. He was the oldest Police Magistrate in the Province, and also the oldest in point of service. Mr. Bedford still walks with a sprightly step.

It takes a short time to shake public confidence. It takes a much longer time to restore it.—George M. Glaser.

CHEESEMAKERS' LAST MEETING

J. F. Hill, J. P. Griffin, J. H. Echlin and E. V. Illsey Speak

Mr. J. L. Irvin, federal dairy produce grader, states that he has seen bushels of apples and tomatoes going to waste in Hastings and Prince Edward counties. A large amount of the corn grown this year has been refused by the canners and is rotting in the ground. The reason for the present condition is the fact that there is below the usual market for fruit and produce this year.

Mr. Irwin was present at the final meeting of the Eastern Ontario Cheesemaker's Association Wednesday when the meeting was held in the Orange Hall at West Huntingdon and was the most largely attended of the year. Cheese factory patrons and cheesemakers heard addresses from Mr. J. F. Hill, M.P.P., J. P. Griffin, Secretary of the Ontario Milk Producers Association, J. H. Echlin, Dairy Instructor for Lanark County, and Mr. E. V. Illsey of this city. Mr. Illsey delivered a very fine address on the dairy situation. Mr. Irwin spoke to the meeting and invited all to the annual meeting in Belleville.

Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association will hold their fourth annual convention in the city hall in Belleville Thursday and Friday, November 1 and 2. The association expects at least 200 delegates. An excellent program will have the privilege of hearing some of the finest speakers in Canada on the subject of dairy products.

Some of the speakers expected to appear at the annual meeting are: Hon. T. L. Kennedy, M.L.A., Geo. H. Barr, Director of Dairying in the Province of Ontario, Dr. J. A. Ruddick of Ottawa, Canadian Dairy Commissioner, Mr. J. Burgess and other prominent speakers in dairy circles.

Railway Employees Are In The Market For Your Products

Would you be interested in a guaranteed market represented by the buying power of over 1,000 workers?

Merchants, manufacturers, jobber, no matter what you are, you have a two-fold interest in the railroads of Canada. First, they are the bone and sinew of the Dominion. They made possible the coast-to-coast development of Canada, and brought this young country through its period of adolescence and up to its present-day state of development. The railroads open new territories for you—they made it possible for you to ship your goods in record time from one point to another—some times at a loss, rather than a profit, to the carrier. And above all, they built up a new and substantial element in the markets of Canada—the Railway Employee.

He and his family are steady, industrious, respectable factors in your community. They have worked for you and bought from you many years. They were your father's customers and his father's. They spend millions of dollar annually in this country in food and clothing, in real estate, and all classes of commodities.

Now, these customers of yours, these people who have spent millions with you and who are still in the market for your goods, face a situation which threatens their source of income—the same income that they spend to buy your goods.

You can help them to hold their patronage by shipping and having shipped by rail the products that they are in the market to buy. Consider what the railways have done for you in the past, and what they are doing now.

Then, SHIP BY RAIL and insist that goods you buy be shipped by rail—the safe, dependable way. It is your assurance of service and it will help hold the railwayman's market for you.

Attention Railway Employees Of Belleville

Do you think it good business on your part to insure business for the indutry on which you depend for your pay cheque twice each month?
Do you know that it has been necessary to curtail both passenger and freight crews and equipment of Railways here because of the lack of business and that the reducing of equipment means less repairs and construction work in the Belleville Railway Yards and Shops?

Do you realize that you can boost your own business by buying commodities and merchandise brought to Belleville by rail and thereby make more work for yourself and other railway employees?

Do you know that the monthly railway payrool in Belleville is approximately $125,000 and that some of this money is finding its way into the hands of competitors of the industry for which we are working?

Do you realize that several hundred men in the various railway trades have been laid off or transferred, and that their dependents, numbering considerable were cutoniers for every business or profession in the City of Belleville?

You can help yourelf to prosperity by asking your merchant to patronize your firm as you patronize his. If he gives his business to your competitors he cannot hope to hold yours, because yours will decline as a result of his action.

Co-operation of the employees and the merchants will assist each other and maintain steady employment for the employee and a firm and steady market for the merchant.

C.N. TERMINAL STIRS OTTAWA

Government Uncertain What to Do Regarding Construction

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—Hon. Dr. Robert J. Manion, Minister of Railways, was in Montreal in connection with Canadian National Railway business? One of the important decisions to be made relates to the new $50,000,000 Canadian Nationals terminal there. The Government is loath, to stop work on this project, in view of the fact that 800 men are directly employed on it, and many more whose jobs may be indirectly affected. It is not a popular thing to throw hundreds of people out of employment at the present time, but the decision the railway management and the Government have to make is being influenced by the financial situation. The present project is that if not enough money altogether it will be greatly slowed down.

Influential Montreal interests have been urging the Government to carry on with the new terminal, arguing that it would be a bad advertisement for Canada if operations are stopped. It has been urged that the Government go ahead with less-needed works and that if the terminal scheme is temporarily abandoned it will be tantamount to saying Canada is going out of business.

The other side of the picture is that the railway is losing money at the present time, that it is not a favorable time to make upon large capital expenditures and that many economies are necessary if any kind of showing is to be made this year. It is further pointed out that Toronto has had to wait many years for a new Union Station and that, while the inconvenience is experienced, the net results to the city were not too disastrous.

Man Dies in Well As Fire Razes Home

Sutton, Oct. 3.—When his home on the Virginia Road became enveloped in flames Wednesday afternoon, Walter Rae, aged 33, along with a number of neighbors, fought the blaze with water conveyed from a near by well. When the supply appeared to be getting low, Rae went down in the well, only to be found there dead from the result of becoming overcome by ground damp, it is believed later. All efforts at resuscitation by Dr. W. Noble of Sutton were unavailing. In the meantime the house had been razed to the ground. It has not yet been decided whether an inquest will be necessary, according to the police.

CANADIAN QUARTET RECORD WELL KNOWN HAYDN CLASSIC

Music lovers in Canada will welcome the announcement of the inauguration of a Canadian Chamber Music Masterpiece Series on Victor Records, the latest release of which is the Quartet in F Minor by Haydn, in assigning to the Stuart House Quartet the task of recording this well known work, Victor could hardly have chosen better for all the beauty and breadth of the world. Plaiting tribute has been paid to the musicianship of the four artists who make up this internationally famous group and their interpretation of the Haydn work is something which will add to an already established position in the world of music. The Haydn work is Opus. 20, No. 5. It is reproduced on three double-sided discs.

Toronto, Oct., October 2—Shooting of pheasants in Durham and Northumberland townships of Ontario will be permitted for a few days next fall, Hon. Pond declared 23,000 persons perished and 5,000 square miles of territory were inundated as the result of continual rains in the Yenning district of Northern Yunnan Province.

Bank Deficits Are Up Ten Millions

Toronto, Oct. 2.—An Ottawa despatch to the Mail and Empire says: "Jumping $10,000,000 during August, the rising total of savings deposits in Canadian banks, when taken in conjunction with the prevailing low prices of commodities, seems yesterday to give evidence of returning prosperity in some quarters.

"Unemployment and western distress to the contrary, both savings and demand deposits rose during August, according to the Finance Department's monthly bank statement."

Automobile accidents took a record toll of 31,273 lives last year.

SMALL RIOT IN FORT WILLIAM

Efforts to Stop Parade of Reds Precipitates Disorder

Fort William, Ont., Oct. 1 (CP)—Police efforts to halt a Communistic parade, for which no permission had been given resulted in a riot on Simpson street last night in which two score of the paraders suffered head injuries and the police received minor cuts.

The Communist organization called a meeting in Minnesota Park where addresses were made. They were not disturbed by the authorities, but when the mob started to parade along Simpson street a force of about two dozen city, provincial and mounted police halted the procession. The Communist leaders refused to stop and the crowd was charged by the officers armed with truncheons.

Tearing banners from the poles on which they were mounted, the Reds used the poles as weapons and for about five minutes there was a free fight. Then the police got the upper hand and the mob fled, after about two score of their number had been laid out with broken scalps. The police were not without their casualties and Inspector Watkins received a bad gash on the head.

When the crowd had been dispersed the officers went to the Ukrainian Hall, Communist headquarters, and seized a quantity of Red literature and also raided the house of James Barker, secretary of the organization, where other literature was found. No arrests were made and one of the rioters, whose name is as yet unknown, is in hospital.

FOUR MARKS BROTHERS AT THEATRE IN HILARIOUS COMEDY

Speaking of face-lifting, if you want to get rid of those depressing blues just drop in at the Belle Theatre today or tomorrow and enjoy two hours of solid, hilarious laughter. If Groucho, Harpo, Zeppo and Chico Marx, an unbeatable quartette, fail to take your mind away from business troubles, labour rackets, the fall of the pound sterling, it's time that one of Belleville's four undertaking establishments was given a call. The whole wisecracking of Groucho doesn't appeal to a few people who are slightly mentally slow the antics of Harpo are guaranteed to stimulate thyroid. Music lovers, too, will appreciate the truly harping of the latter, such harping as cannot be heard every day of the unique piano playing of Chico, the one-fingered prodigy.

The plot of "Monkey Business" is totally different from the other two releases on the Marx Brothers. The scene opens on board ship, where the Marx Brothers are trying to get

TOM GILL

One morning in late winter found Ted with old Manuel, driving a herd of cattle to water on the Mexican side. Manuel, leisurely, lolled about on his thin pony, shouting at the straggling cattle, swearing in Spanish oaths as the clouds of choking dust drifted upward and skylighted them. At last he pointed before him.

"Down there it is, Senor Ted. Second that arroyo is the water-hole. Let us rest there now, and by evening we shall make the higher country where grass is better."

Already the cattle had caught the scent of water and lumbered down the long, dry slope, stopping only when they stood knee-deep in the shallow, muddy pond. The men watered their horses. Ted's mouth and throat were parched. His canteen was empty, but he viewed the yellow, stagnant water before him distastefully.

"Let's ride up the arroyo," he suggested. "We may find a spring at the head of it."

Then for twenty minutes they trotted up the narrow bed of the stream, but found no trickle of water. Manuel shook his head.

"It is no good, senor. One may not look for living water in this land until the rains come."

Suddenly he stopped and peered anxiously behind him.

"What is not a shot?" he asked.

Ted listened. Only the creak of saddle leather as the horse moved restlessly. He turned to speak, but at that moment suddenly two shots sounded from the water-hole. Without a word both mounted and their horses about and spurred at a dead run down the arroyo. Manuel was ahead by a length, and Ted saw him pull his thirty-eight from the holster and twirl the chamber. Ted's own automatic lay close against his side.

There where the arroyo widened into the waterhole, both men halted. Already they could see their cattle racing up the slope, driven by three Mexican vaqueros, yelling and shooting into the air. Down by the water-hole one steer lay kicking out his life. Nearly a half-mile distant five other vaqueros were driving another herd toward the water-hole. Ted's eyes blazed. The caution that Bob had urged so many times was forgotten. Drawing his automatic he fired after the vaqueros, and the bullet threw up the dust ahead of them. The men turned and came at a mad gallop straight for Ted.

"Don't shoot," he warned Manuel quickly. "They will not shoot. These are Morales's men."

Ted rode forward, spurring his horse directly in the path of the leading Mexican. "Who shot that steer?" he demanded.

"I, senor," the leader answered, then he handed insolently into Ted's face, "What will the big gringo do?"

Silently Ted put his automatic back in the holster. For a second he measured the distance them lunged forward and struck the man full on the jaw. The vaquero swerved, and as his horse plunged back, fell headlong.

Without another glance Ted turned his horse toward the approaching riders. Even from that distance he recognized Jilo, the huge figure at their head. A sudden wave of almost physical pleasure passed over the man at this prospect of coming to grips at last with the enemy. No one had ever dared use violence to any of Jilo's vaqueros there in Mexico, where Morales's might was law. And the thought came to Ted as he rode forward, that the man lying back there in the desert dust might be the one spark needed to set ablaze the long-smoldering enmity between those two. From that far-off day when Jilo first seized his hand and looked diabolically into his eyes—from that day both knew that sometime they must come to open conflict. They had known it, too, on that sunlit morning when Jilo rode out to find Ted and Adela returning across the desert. Everyone had tried to keep them apart—Don Bob, Morales, Adela herself. But something within the destinies of those two men willed it otherwise. And Ted, as he rode out to meet Jilo, found in his heart to be glad.

Jilo had reined his horse to a walk, and as Ted drew up beside him the Mexican raised his sombrero in greeting.

Ignoring the gesture, Ted poised angrily to his herd, scattered up the hillside beyond the water-hole, and on to where one of his steers lay dead.

"Who ordered your men to stampede those steers away from water and to shoot into them?" Ted demanded.

"I did." Leisurely the Mexican curled his leg about the saddle-horn and rolled a cigarette. He held out the bag and brown papers to Ted. "Will you join me?" he asked.

"Is that waterhole yours?"

"In a sense, senor. It is. At least no one else owns it, and Morales's cattle have used it for many years."

"They have used it because no one else dared. We choose also to use it."

"Senor, it may be you forget you are in Mexico. Here Paco Morales makes his own rights. If we allow every wandering herd to use the waterholes near my uncle's ranch, it would take many vaqueros to keep them from using too his grassland. Besides, we need this water. But, to be truthful, I did not know those cattle were Don Bob's, or I should not have molested them."

Ted listened silently. He could see that the big Mexican was making an effort to speak civilly—that for some reason he did not at this time seek open conflict.

"Let us put this thing on a clear basis," Ted answered. "Don Bob's herds are grazing on those lands. You have no right using his waterhole because it is public property neither for you nor mine. There is room here for both. We come seeking no quarrel, but if from now on I find anyone driving our cattle from water, I will shoot and order my riders to shoot. Is that clear?"

Jilo's face had darkened and the hatred flamed. Drawing his automatic he chose to smile.

"Senor, I leave words, senor, especially when used to me. Almost I am tempted to say that you should be no ill will between the sons of Don Bob and of Morales. The man you knocked from his saddle—it was a very pretty blow—he will be punished. I myself will make double payment for the steer he shot. Esta bien? Its a bargain, senor?"

There was something too friendly about him. Ted sensed an eagerness to get away—a suppressed air of anxiety about the place. Once more Jilo looked back at his own herd, where Morales's steers with the scent of water in the nostrils, were impatiently crowding nearer the waterhole. Even as they watched a few cattle plunged past the pigmies. Something vaguely familiar about them made Ted ride forward, and with a sudden start he recognized on the shoulder of each the brand of Don Bob.

Manuel caught sight of them at the same moment. Excitedly he called, "Caramba, these are of the herd that was stolen last spring!"

For a moment Jilo's black eyes were murderous, then he smiled. "Si, your memory is good, Senor Manuel. This morning my vaqueros came upon these cattle wandered. Tonight I intended to notify Don Bob that the stolen El Coyote had stolen are found again." He looked searchingly into Radcliffe's eyes, and it was only with an effort that Ted refrained from smiling his disbelief. Yet it was all so clear. Jilo's men had driven them away that Ted might believe El Coyote was at last raiding the Americans.

He looked at Jilo. "Don Bob will be happy to know his steers are safe. In the meantime, I am driving my herd back to that waterhole. We will probably be there an hour. After that your cattle are welcome."

Without a word he turned and rode down the slope. As he passed the fallen man, now seated in the sand, the Mexican scowled up at him, but made no move. Quietly Ted rounded up his cattle.

Jilo had not stirred. He sat his horse, breathing heavily, the American with eyes that glowered beneath his sombrero.

"Jilo," he muttered at last, "when will Don Paco give the word?"

CHAPTER XXII.

For the next month Ted rode the southern range with Don Bob's cowboys. They were busy days. Days that Don Bob, with careful foresight, had made so full that they gave Ted no chance either to think or to dream.

But as the weeks passed Bob seemed more preoccupied, more silent than before. He sat more often on the porch of the ranch-house, gunk in thought, gazing out over the desert.

So it was Ted found him one morning in early spring.

"I heard a rider coming. Thought it might be you." Radcliffe said.

Don Bob tipped a piece of paper in his hand. The gray eyes that looked out over the desert were narrowed to just a hairy breadth and the square jaw seemed a bit more grim.

"It's a message from the major," Bob waved the paper. "Letter, rather curious message, too, when you consider it carefully. There might seem to be a touch of subtle irony in it if one could suspect the major of being playful. Tell me what you make of it." And Don Bob tossed the note across the table and busied himself with a cigarette.

Ted read:

Important developments here will probably lead to the immediate capture of the bandit.

Tonight I, in my tent we will know his identity. I have asked Morales and Jilo to be there. I should like you present, and bring Radcliffe's also. This, of course is confidential.

L. R. Blount,
Maj., 5th Cavalry.

Slowly Ted laid the letter down. His eyes grew questioning as they looked over to Bob, and there stood a moment Bob threw back his head and laughed.

"It's never well to take our major too seriously, Ted, old fellow," he stated. "This isn't the first time the capture of El Coyote has been just around the corner!"

"But what does it mean?"

"I haven't the slightest notion. I was thinking about it when you came in. Blount does come across a new clue. He may have captured some of El Coyote's men, although I think not. It may be Morales has learned something, and that they're planning some sort of dramatics for the fallen curtain of the drama. Many things might happen. But there? He knows I am not friendly with Morales." Bob drummed with his fingers. "At any rate, come with me tonight." He smiled and stretched lazily in the spring sunshine. "Life can be so dull sometimes, Ted, at times and so terribly dull at others. We have to remember both the Major and Morales in my will. But their blundering way they've made this past year quite endurable," he added smiling.

Collarbone Broken In Motor Collision

Wednesday evening about eight o'clock, Alfred Adams, of 44 Victoria Avenue, Belleville, was driving north in Dundas Street Road and at the intersection of Hamilton Road and College Street, he is said, to have come into collision with a car driven by Mrs. Jessie Badgley, Station Post Office, Belleville. The Badgley car, it is understood, was in contact with a telephone pole. The only injured, as far as can be ascertained, was a little son of Mrs. Badgley, who sustained a broken collar bone. The child was taken to a physician's office where the injury was adjusted and was then taken home. Traffic Officer Taylor of the city police, was on the scene of the accident shortly after it happened and investigated the affair. The running board, right front fender and rear left tire were damaged on the Badgley car. One head light on the left front fender, axle and radiator were damaged on the Adams car. It is understood that the matter of damages was arranged between the parties concerned.

LABOR CHALLENGE

Premier Visits King in Reference to Election

PRICES REMAIN STATIONARY

Market Was Largely Attended and Prices Lower

Saturday's market presented a picture of beauty when arrayed in the many different products of the farm. The outside market was very largely attended by the citizens who took advantage of the ever lowering prices that prevailed. Fresh bread was sold today at 10c per cash while the fruit market was largely represented with fine apples that sold for $1.00 a bushel; peaches and pears other fall fruits were also in evidence.

The meat market, as heretofore, was also very well attended and the display of vegetables, grown this year helped lower the prices some. Fine, large parsnips sold for 10c per bunch, while carrots and beets retailed for 10c and fine lake cauliflowers sold from 5c to 10c each, according to the size. Potatoes of the very finest grade sold at 80c a bag, while fine large cabbages brought five cents. Plenty of onions, all varieties, were in evidence and sold for five cents according to their size.

At the inside market eggs were a little dearer today, when some of the vendors asked as high as 28c per dozen, although the prevailing price seemed to be 25c and 26c a dozen. Butter remained unchanged at from 27c to 28c per pound. Fine large chickens were offered at from 75c each to $1.00 per pair, according to their size. Of late the citizens have been taking advantage of the low prices that have prevailed on the local market and the result is that the market of Belleville is growing larger each Saturday.

The affair was a most successful and interesting function, with many surprise features for the keen enjoyment of the guests.

The hall was artistically decorated for the occasion, yellow and gold were used throughout, and hanging from the colorful streamers on each light was a tiny gold star, while a large illuminated star was the centre of the decorative assembled, Mrs. Boyd was escorted to the east, and amid greetings by matrons and patrons providing a guard of honour, Mrs. Wm. On behalf of the chapters represented, Mrs. Nugent presented Mrs. Boyd with a handsome walnut dinner wagon on which was placed a basket of dinner silverware and carrying set in the Argyle pattern. Mrs. Boyd made a gracious reply thanking the members for their wonderful gift.

Following the presentations there was a dance, with the Bureka orchestra supplying the music for same. Before the first dance, Mr. Eddie Gregg introduced the dance which demonstrated the dances of 1932 to the merriment of the guests. Many interesting events were added to the entertainment of the evening. There was the guessing contest, the mysterious Miss Eastern Star. She was finally acquitted by the lighting of Colborne and proved to be Mrs. Ethel Wright. The ladies' novelty tag dance was won by Mrs. Wolfrain of Colborne.

The events in the dancing programme which was one of the highlights of the evening, comprised what was the World's Champion Baby Carriage Walking contest, with four competitors, it was explained, all with small children in the near future, the particular line, Mayor George Reid for his mastery of city administrative affairs, Mrs. Gordon Stevenson, for his command of Eastern Star ritualistic work, Worthy Grand Sentinel of the Grand Chapter of Ontario, for knowing the most members of the Order and Mrs. George Gordon, Picton, for his expert knowledges of every railway stop, between Belleville and Toronto. Current Sport

By The Observer

"Spring Fed" Hallahan came to his own yesterday when he silenced the "A's" long range guns, although Hallahan had passed on no less than seven batters he had the luck of blinking Athletics down with three small singles. Mike, Pyzy and Haas were the only Athletics to get a hit from the offerings of Hallahan till the ninth inning and he were made the best of it).

On the other hand Rowe pitched viable ball for the "Tigers" but Wade, Walker, Cochrane and Goslin could not connect on the offerings for two hits apiece, while Fisher connected for a hit for the Cards. With Hallahan, Gelbert and Martin being the big stars of the game it looked like rejuvenation of the old Rochester, team of those days.

Although "Sammy Jim" Bottomley did not get a hit he was the big noise in the Cards' victory and into the boxes and counted on more than one occasion. As a matter of fact the "Red Birds" rose to heights to win the decision yesterday.

Two much credit cannot be given "Wild Bill" Hallahan. Some of the boys say he had a fine pitch all afternoon. Each batter was trying to get a hit but he was the master and that Umpire Dick Nallin sure earned his money. Hallahan's battle as there was the count of three and no one on base.

All is over now. The two teams entrained for Philadelphia last night and they will resume battle in Shibe Park on Monday afternoon at 1:30 p.m. E.S.T.

"Topper" Martin is the hero of the series to date. He has had a hand stealing bag but he is there in the silks of the "Cards" in the pinch and in the field games. The boy is full of confidence and displays the slowness of his rivals. He proved his worth in the field in the game on the receiving end. By smart base running he has had one and two extra bases to his credit. (Who had for his first work's series).

Both the junior and the senior football teams of the Belleville Collegiate are in Trenton this afternoon playing their scheduled games. Coach Shiels gave the boys a real rest and night and thinks that they are ready to go on. On the seniors he will use Quinlan, Gunning, Graves, Philp and Scott in the backfield. Ray Gunning will do the kicking and the same line-up as last week.

Next week the Major League bowling starts at the Recreation Alleys, Jos Legault is president and Jos Peters is the secretary. This league play their games on Thursday afternoon. While the senior ladies' league, the Dominion and Standard leagues are entered in the bowling leagues of the city for the winter league so that it looks like a busier year for the "pin boosters".

Gait "Terriers" entertain the Toronto St. Georges this afternoon in the first game of the season in senior O.R.A.A. finals. It is expected that Jimmy Ward of Meadowbrook will send his fast ball over the plate and the Terrier champions, as the Gait ball club is known as in the League do not seem to like Kress's slow sweeping curves. In the battery line-up Ward more than likely "Benzo" Pickering.

5,500 PAY ADMISSION TO TWEED'S ANNUAL EXHIBITION

Air Manoeuvres, Fine Racing and Excellent Exhibits Featured

DAY'S PROGRAM

Tweed community turned out over 5500 strong to attend the Fall Fair held in that progressive village on Friday afternoon. This is one of the largest turnouts that the Fair directorate has had in many years. In fact it is record for all time. The directorate had also provided an interesting entertainment which few fair boards would attempt and Tweed Fair has taken its place with the large community fairs of this year. The crowd came early and spent some considerable time viewing the several exhibits on the grounds before the afternoon horse racing started.

Air Manoeuvres

Two naval features were provided for the crowd, one being an air parade by the Air Training Detachment, Mr. W. E. Tummon, M.P., accompanied by Lieut. Hall with the Minister of National Defence at Ottawa and the second featured all the thrills of aerobatics without leaving the ground. Two pilots performed barrel loops, flying upside down, zooming an... tion flying. It was a thrill to something out-of-the-ordinary for a fall fair to offer and Tweed has been obtained by the directorate to give a show the first afternoon. In the evening, entertained the crowd with a stunt that was a thriller. Hughes folded the took his seat at the wheel of an automobile and with Carter Brown, the secretary of the fair, by his side drove twice around the track at 40 miles an hour and then never struck an obstacle and hand-led the car as well as if he had his sight. Mr. Brown stated he did not once tell the driver where to go and in the journey a car was passed on the track at thirty miles an hour. It was a great stunt and Mr. Johnson deserves a great hand when he came back to the judge's stand.

Few Exhibits

Naturally with the 4 marking the Fair were interested in the production of the home and farm. That is what a community fair is for, to allow people to see what the neighbor is doing. Of course what is interest for the man was the exhibits of cattle, horses, poultry, sheep and swine. There were 110 cattle on the grounds yesterday, nearly as many as was exhibited at Belleville Fair and nearly every breed was represented with the Holsteins predominating. Mr. Graham exhibited a large herd of Durhams, while Rush-Maynes also showed the same breed. Jerseys were plentiful but the Holsteins were in the ascendancy. Mr. John L. Newton showed eighteen fine head of Holsteins and they secured some of the awards. The swine and sheep exhibit this year was heavy. Mr. Curtiss, Martin and Son, and Carlton showing the greatest number and securing the majority of the awards. The poultry exhibit was not as heavy as in former years but the class shown was really good.

Horses.

In the horse exhibit the farmers enjoyed themselves watching the beautiful animals which were paraded. William McCoy showed a speaking team of carriage horses and secured all the awards in that class. Dennis Fleming of Stoco had the best roadster on the grounds easily winning the half-mile trot arranged for the event. Miles Benedict had the best heavy stallion on the grounds, while Simeon McCrea, president of the Tweed Agricultural Society, showed the best four horse team although one of his teams was beaten by Johnson of Trenton in the heavy draught class. The horse which was also won by Mr. McCrea. This ring was also made in the centrefield of the grounds and the horse racing was not interfered with while the crowd could enjoy at their leisure, the showing of the animals.

Exhibits

The attraction of many spectators was the main building where various exhibits were on display to advantage. While the structure is quite commodious it was filled by one of the best exhibits seen at a country fair. Many of the ladies made a careful scrutiny of the exhibits and numerous expressions of commendation of the showing were heard. Some eighty exhibitors were upon the secretary's books and the majority of these had articles displayed in several classes. It was an exhibit which was both creditable to the exhibitors and the management of the fair. The exhibits were arranged in a manner easily to be viewed.

In the dairy section some cheese was shown while several rolls of beautifully colored butter and crocks of butter were to be seen. Competition in this class was exceptionally keen. Many plates of apples, both table and cooking were exhibited.

Upwards of one hundred plates of apples were shown and they were evidence that orchards in Hallowell had bore some fine fruit. The display included Alexanders, Ben Davis, Baldwins, Canada Reds, Russets, St. Lawrence, Spies, Greenings, Snows, Wealthy, Duchess and Wolf River. The display was certainly tempting to the eye of the boys and who is not. There were also fine pears, plums and grapes.

Home Cooking

The home cooking exhibit, to say the least, was tempting. It consisted of home-made bread, nut bread, pies, tarts, biscuits, cookies, graham biscuits and pies of various kinds. In connection with this display were to be seen a few roast chickens. Salads were also shown and a large table was filled with preserved and canned goods, consisting of preserved strawberries, pears, peaches, apples, plums, etc. There was also a display of canned vegetables such as tomatoes and peas, also pickles.

The southern portion of the building was utilized for the display of ladies' work which certainly reflected great credit upon those who were exhibitors. It demonstrated to a nicety the handiwork of the ladies. The display consisted of living room, dining room and kitchen accessories, things for the bed room, ladies' and gents' wear and also miscellaneous articles. This part of the fair was an attraction to many of the fair sex.

Vegetables

Roots and vegetables were quite plentiful and the growth of some were such that drought had by no means affected them. A squash shown weighed between 50 and 60 pounds, while some pumpkins were exceptionally large. Fine specimens of potatoes were to be seen. An exhibit was to be overlooked was that of flowers, some of which in bouquets were artistically arranged. Cut and potted flowers were seen in profusion. Bowls of sweet peas, baskets of flowers were shown while there were floral arrangements for the dining and reception table. Some fine specimens of foliage, begonias, coleus and geraniums were to be seen. It was a showing that was admired by many spectators.

Children's Department

While this class was open to children of all schools, only two pupils from the Tweed Consolidated School made a showing and their display was a credit to them. A few scrapbook models showed the ingenuity of those who constructed them and some when released would add away for some feet. Bird houses and waste paper baskets made of wood were well constructed. Other handiwork was also in evidence.

Judges

Judges were: Miss M. Johnston, Mrs. A. Hayburn, Mrs. J. W. Kingston; Mrs. Drinkwater, Mrs. J. L. Flagler, Mrs. A. Blakely, and Mrs. T. S. McCoy.

Auditors—T. C. Graham and F. J. Hunter.

Racing Executive:

There were 22 horses entered in the three classes down for decision and some of the best in training was on hand. Six started in the first, probably the largest field that has been in the past in this class this year. Lou Enticken, owned by H. Diment of this city, continued on her winning streak when she took a second field into camp in the 2.20 class. The mare has been a consistent winner this year and Joe Vassem the team steer has been riding in the front row most of the season. Princess Audrey, came strong in the last three heats to win the free for all from Louis Bothe. The Falls horse won the first heat in easy fashion but Dick Scott behind Princess Audrey had her winged in the third heat and nipped the previous winner at the wire. TARZAN OF THE APES, No. 47. (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The rising sun found them still separated. A great wonderment rose in Jane's heart. Though she had been in such terrible danger, yet she was unharmed. She moved to the entrance and Tarzan's lithe form dropped lightly from a near-by tree, his face lighted with a smile.

Jane's heart beat faster. She could not understand it. They finished breakfast. The magnificent diamond locket hanging about Tarzan's neck was a source of much wonderment to Jane. She pointed to it and Tarzan removed it and handed it to her. Opening it, she beheld the likeness of Lord and Lady Greystoke.

She concluded this wild creature had simply found the locket in the cabin. But she could not account for the strange likeness between Lord Greystoke and this forest god. Tarzan placed the locket about her neck. Protesting—she would have removed it, but he held her hands tightly.

Motioning her to follow him, Tarzan walked toward the trees. Taking her in one strong arm, he swung to the branches above. The ardor of his first fierce passion had cooled. He knew why the ape had not killed Jane. But he must not be guided by the laws of beasts.

It was merely sunset when they came to the clearing. Tarzan parted the tall jungle grass. There stood the cabin. He turned to leave her. Then she threw her arms about his neck and kissed him, unashamed. "I love you," she murmured. "I shall wait for you —always," He was gone.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON

Sir Thomas Lipton will not race the sixth race for the America's Cup. Ill health and death have intervened and the world's greatest sportsman — the eighty year old skipper, has rested. Neither business nor winds and currents will any more concern him.

Sir Thomas Lipton's death removes a merchant prince who excelled in two spheres, business and sportsmanship. The age will not soon forget the octogenarian mariner who raced with his Shamrocks in the yachting championships.

How frail a hold on life he had of late was indicated by the fact that a slight cold brought on the pneumonia which however seemed to have past the crisis according to the doctors and yet a few hours later he passed away in his sleep. What the aged sportsman must have given up of comfort in order to participate at his great age in the nautical events on this side of the ocean, may be imagined. But he loved sport so much that inconvenience was no inconvenience.

The undaunted old man though defeated in the last race was touched by the presentation of a tribute from his friends who felt that the old man of the yacht should have recognition.

The world does not lose by the lives of such men as Lipton. The business man, the patriot and the sportsman were all merged in the unique personality of Sir Thomas Lipton — a personality which could not fail to inspire.

ARTIST MISSED

Sir William Orpen's death is deplored by the artistic section of the world and by the public as a whole for Orpen was an individual of great power in portraiture. He though he died at the comparatively early age of fifty-three, had seen life, caught the artistic vision of things and then set to work upon canvas and recorded for ages to come his impressions of life.

Orpen is said to have had a satiric bent. His fellow countryman, Bernard Shaw, also has the same. Both used their gifts fearlessly. The Toronto Globe regards fearlessly the weariness of the professional beauty quoting his words written a few months ago: "When I was a young man, the society women of England were the only beauties. But their day is over! They've killed their own beauty by their abuse of cosmetics of it." The Globe's comment follows: "His idea of real beauty was to be found among people in the fields and lanes, on the streets, behind the counter; in fact, anywhere but among the ranks of the professionals." Orpen is said quoted: "They don't paint their faces, they're smart and neat, they walk like girls, and there is life in their healthy faces."

The artist saw the soul or lack of soul in his subjects. He was not an artist for nothing. He counted in the last analysis soul as the essence of the human being.

Orpen's value is like that of all artists — a revelation of life. He had the Orpen attitude. He was individualistic as every great artist ought to be — he was sincere.

HYPNOTIC OPERATIONS

Hypnotism years ago was given credit for many powers. Then followed the rage of spiritualism and hypnotism was less in evidence. Once upon a time it had reached the stage where many an exhibition of persons of the state of hypnosis, was given. This familiarizing seemed to be the cause of the decline of interest. Besides it was stated by doctors that this was something about which care should be taken.

Now this week an operation has been performed says the Brooklyn Eagle, on a woman's jaw in Brooklyn for the extraction of a tooth and the removal of a piece of bone and the operation took place under a state of hypnosis. Mental suggestion which produced the sleep took the place of an anaesthetic.

If hypnotism can be used in surgery, a revolution will come in the science of surgery and medicine, and there will arise a new profession of hypnotists under strict medical authority for the practice of hypnotism could scarcely be allowed to become general, the world might experience something to startle it.

THE APPLE ABROAD

French people are going to use the Canadian apple for there are being installed machines for the sale of the fruit on the streets of the national capital.

Though they will by buying an apple at a time pay a larger price for the Canadian product than they will learn to be attracted to them for a little taste of a good thing will lead to greater consumption. These apple vending devices will be the best publicity that the Canadian apple can secure to bring it to the attention of the Gallic people.

If the Canadian authorities can by such means increase the sale abroad of Canadian fruit, it will prove an outlet for trade which will bring mutual advantages to Canadian and Frenchman.

LIFE'S CONFLICTS

(Contributed by a Sidelight Reader)

Life's conflicts start when we are young
When life has fairly well begun
And the only thing that we can do
Is eat and sleep and cry when blue.

As we grow up we get quite strong
And run and play the whole day long
And Mother spanks us when we're bad
And when we're awful she calls on Dad.

When Dad says: Bill come over here
We know right well the conflict's near
Then we learn in future to obey
Just what our Mothers have to say

We sometimes want things all our way
As we at school are out at play
But when some bigger boy steps in it
The conflict only lasts a minute.

And so we learn a lesson true
When at our play we must do
Is follow close the Golden Rule
When playing with the boys at school.

When grown-up boys have settled down
On this cold world no more to frown
They start a pleasant home for life
With a handsome, happy, loving wife.

Life looks so rosy, bright and gay
With cares and worries passed away —
No conflicts now to mar the joy
While passing hours they thus employ.

Then time goes on and work increases
The happy spirit somewhat ceases
The baby boots outside the door
Don't track in mud on my clean floor.

And don't forever come in late
You're fooling round while here I wait,
Till the dinner's spoiled and everything's
Why don't you come when you are told.

And don't forget to split the wood
And pile it in just where you should
Then when you sit down for a rest
She says, A little work would suit you best.

Of course you have a mother-in-law
Whose record is to use her jaw
To tell you what you ought to do
And every day it's something new.

It's John do this and John do that
And when you don't there is a spat
Each day she stayed the conflict grew,
The world looked black and John looked blue.

And then the farm, it has its share
Of conflicts that seem everywhere.
The ground's too wet or the ground's too dry
And the weeds, they never seem to die.
The crows they pull up all the corn,
The robins in the cherries every morn,
The spuds won't set and the hens lay astray.

There's a conflict for you every day.
The pig breaks out of his pen one day
And thinks to sneak himself away
But the farmer he was not so dense
That he could not see right through a fence.

And so the conflict then began
While the farmer looked, the pig he ran
The farmer thought to sneak up sly
And coax the pig back in the sty.
Just then the pig, he looked askance
And says, Woof, Now here's my chance
To run away down the lane
And never more come back again.
To be shut up within the sty
From now until it's time to die.
Then there's life's own conflicts too
Of what the neighbors say of you,
Sometimes it's false but just the same
They scatter slander on your name.
Whether 'tis false or whether true
It's their delight to torture you
And spread the gossip everywhere,
They know it hurts but they don't care.
To close this rhyme I'll only say
If while we've lived from day to day
We've done our best to make this life
Free from care and worry and strife.
And helped someone as we went along
To be upright, honest, brave and strong.
We can then say with all's said and done
Life's conflicts o'er, the victory won.

MONKEY BUSINESS has made thousands laugh, meaning Marx Brothers, Harpo the mute, Chico the pun lover, and Groucho to move it with his little or any finger? Ask me, maybe. Also Groucho the wisenheimer whose wisecracks explode with machine gun regularity; and Zeppo, who forms the normal contrast to the extravagances of the other funny Marxs. Monkey Business is funny business, fun, fast and furious, craziness keyed up to a crescendo pitch, ridiculous but clever and laugh compelling. Marx Brothers make one picture a year, which may or may not be on account of government restriction which refuses to cope with more than one such laugh riot in one year.

SPENDING AND SETTLING

Depression is invariably accompanied by an increase in the amount of savings bank deposits, due to the anxiety which takes possession of all individuals — including those who have little cause for worry. Even in the Old Country, according to no less an authority than Rt. Hon. Walter Runciman, former president of the board of trade, savings of wage earners have been piling up to a prodigious extent in recent times. Well over ten billion dollars, exclusive of life insurance, are at present deposited with the various financial institutions — post office savings banks, trade banks, national savings certificates, building societies, etc. — popular with the wage-earning classes. A nation which has such a huge totals to the credit of its humbler citizens is obviously a long way from being at the end of its resources. It would even suggest that these thrifty people should draw out their deposits and start dissipating it in a reckless manner in order to create an artificial wave of prosperity. Still less would one advocate such a extravagant policy for Canadian citizens. But there is undoubtedly much to be said in favor of the suggestion, which is finding favor in this Dominion and in the United States today, that spending on the part of those who are least affected by the depression. — Hamilton Spectator.

THE WHIST OF TRADE

The world appears to have forgotten the old simple days when at last all trade is exchange and barter. When we decline to use exchange and barter we cannot have trade. Our gold is useless to us, for we refuse to buy what we want on the only terms we can purchase. Gold is only useful to settle balances of trade, but as we have no trade there are no balances which can be settled in the hoarded metal. It is not Britain's free trade that is at fault, but the protection of the nations that refuse to deal with her. Should Britain adopt protection she will only make the difficulty of trading greater. Our only hope is to exchange their what. The only value of triumps is to take tricks.—Hamilton Spectator.

Founder of Cafeterias

(By W. C. Morrigde in the Mail and Empire)

Probably few persons in Toronto, or even on this continent are aware of the fact that the late Sir Thomas Lipton was the father of the modern cafeterias now so popular in all the large cities, nor that he won his knighthood as the result of establishing the first serve-self restaurant in the world.

Queen Alexandra conceived the idea of commemorating the second jubilee of Queen Victoria, by raising a fund to establish restaurants for the poor of London and other large cities in England and Scotland with cheap, wholesome meals. In furtherance of that object a fund was started however as the Alexandra Trust, but for some unknown reason, it fell fast and conditions were both scarce and meagre.

This was noted by Sir Thomas, then plain Thomas J. Lipton, the greatest caterer to the people of the world, who had stores in every city and town in Great Britain having a population of 20,000 and up, in which he catered exclusively to the masses.

He quietly made a contribution of £50,000 to the fund. The result was the establishment of a huge self serve cafeteria at the junction of Old Street and City Road in the Shoreditch district of London, where it was possible for the poor to secure a full course meal, consisting of meat and vegetables, bread, pie and either tea or coffee for twelve cents. That was the maximum charge, but substantial meals were served for less.

The establishment was formally opened by King Edward and Queen Alexandra, at the time Prince and Princess of Wales. Hundreds of society people were attracted to the opening, while the meals served. It proved a tremendous success, and other places of a similar character were opened in the poorer districts of the metropolis and found plenty of patrons.

Sir Thomas Lipton desired to conceal his benefaction and that his contribution should be regarded as an ordinary commercial venture, however, became public property, when in the following year, 1897, he was created a Knight Bachelor by Queen Victoria.

This Banker Laughs Last As He Lands 25lb. Lunge

E. V. (Gene) Illsey, manager of the Bank of Commerce in working hours, but a good golfer and a disciple of Izaak Walton when he cares of business are laid aside, is telling his many friends today how the big lunge was hooked. Gene with his friend, George Wallbridge, journeyed to Muscote Bay on Friday afternoon in the hope that a "lunge" would be found and they came home with the story of war. Trawling for bass in a rather rough sea, Mr. Illsey hooked a 25-pound beauty. Now in all that he could do to bring the big fellow into the boat, the catching of this fish hangs a tale, that will bear repeating. Mr. Illsey with a party of friends including another bank manager of the city, went north for a couple of days' fishing for bass. In the early part of the fishing, Mr. Illsey caught his share, but towards the end of the expedition it was impossible for him to hook one. Other members of the party would drop their line alongside that of Mr. Illsey's and soon would have a strike, but never a one came the way of this ardent fisherman. The party generally kidded the genial "Gene" but today the latter is on the other foot. Mr. Illsey is giving the laugh to the other bank manager for it is understood he was down to Muscote Bay the other day and spent all day without getting the semblance of a strike from a "lunge." Mr. Illsey, after showing his friends the beautiful fish and there is a possibility that some may have a steak for a fish dinner.

TWO OBJECTS IN LIFE OF SIR T. LIPTON

Amazing Story of Tea-Houses and of Business

A TRADESMAN

Contribution to Yachting Greatest Made By Man

London, Oct. 3—Sir Thomas Lipton died without attaining the great objective of his life, on which he had spent huge sums in fortune made primarily from tea—the winning of the America's Cup. Instead, he won the epithet, "The World's Best Loser," and the affectionate admiration of millions on both sides of the Atlantic.

Fifth and last attempt to wrest that elusive old mug," as he always called the trophy symbolizing yachting supremacy, was made in September of last year, when the Shamrock V was beaten by the Enterprise off Rhode Island.

Finds Consolation

Sir Thomas had pinned great hopes on his green-hulled racer, and her defeat was a blow to him. He found, however, great measure of consolation in a loving cup which was presented to him by admirers in the United States as a tribute to his sportsmanship, and in his election later to the British Royal Yacht Squadron.

Why Sir Thomas, who probably rendered greater services to British yachting than any other man, had to wait until he was 80 years old before being elected to Britain's premier yacht club puzzled countless people. Britain's social history provides the answer.

Lipton was a tradesman, proud of his rise from a 9 year old errand boy earning two shillings and sixpence weekly in Glasgow to a commercial magnate who had spread his slogan, "Drink Lipton's Tea", all over the world.

Drew Line at Trade

The unwritten Royal Yacht roll a tradesman among its membership. Both the publicity that Lipton's commercial business brought him and the temperament of the great merchant himself contended against him.

Moreover, in the latter years of Queen Victoria's reign, he was a member of what was known as the "set"—that is to say, a close friend of the man who shortly was to become King Edward VII.

Some objectors did not like the idea of the King sailing with "Tommy" Lipton on his yacht.

Election to the Squadron is by invitation only but, while the Squadron at any time within the past 30 years might have found every reason for admitting membership upon him, the action was not taken until 1901.

Once a member, Sir Thomas flew the White Ensign, reserved for vessels of the Royal Navy and for the Royal Yacht Squadron from his Shamrock V, and from his great steam yacht Erin.

Had Modest Passage

The last illness of the famous yachtsman caused cancellation of plans to visit America. His passage already had been booked.

Thomas Johnstone Lipton was born May 10, 1850. He became an errand-boy at the age of 9, and, eight years later, when he asked for an increase in salary he was told he was too ambitious. So he sailed steerage to America and soon returned home with money.

He established a small grocery store and quickly built up a flourishing business and up-to-date methods and extensive advertising. At the beginning he sometimes slept under his counter.

When he was 22 years old he opened a second shop, and after that new branches came thick and fast.

His charity and his love for his mother were published in a gift of 10,000 pounds which he made for poor mothers and children of Glasgow last January. In announcing the gift, he said it was in memory of his mother, "the guiding star of my life."

Pastime of Yachting

Apart from speeches made as chairman of the big tea and house hold provision business bearing his name, Sir Thomas Lipton's voice was rarely heard in public. So far as the world at large was aware, he never displayed the slightest disposition to engage in politics. His only way in looking after the great business which he had founded upon the smallest beginnings in a little Glasgow store at the age of 9, and his play was almost entirely confined to the pastime of yachting.

Talking once of his early Glasgow days, Sir Thomas said: "I allotly worked 20 hours a day and studied all the time how to please my customers. I used to sleep on the premises. . . . Some happy advertising on a small scale brought success, and I was soon able to get branches and put clever men in charge of men who had worked under me. With my theories and practice, and always buying for cash and selling for cash and trying to get direct relations with the actual producers, my prosperity has come."

Sir Thomas's later activities spread all over the world—tea gardens in Ceylon, jam factories, bakeries, tin, paper, printing and soap works.

Lived Near London

For many years Sir Thomas resided at Southgate, a pleasant suburb on the northern heights of London. Probably Sir Thomas had known and entertained more royal personages than almost any other man of his time. . . . Virtually every journey which the late Emperor Bigeria took during a her long residence in England was under the tender care of Sir Thomas Lipton. . . . The present Queen of Spain and four other Presidents were at one time guests on his yacht together for two months. His library at Southgate was filled with autographer photographs of members of nearly every royal house in Europe.

7 Branch Bank Managers Held

Detroit, Oct. 3—A round-up of seven branch bank managers, tellers and other employees of the American State Bank, which failed last March for several million dollars, has been begun here by the order of the prosecutor's office.

The first of the men to be arrested at Baden Hills will wait upon the arraignment of the actual thieves, it was announced. They are charged with conspiracy to commit larceny, and to be implicated in theft of $79,000 from that branch for use in stock speculation.

MORE RIOTING IN GLASGOW MOB DEFIANT

Hatchets, Hammers and Other Missiles Are Used

FIVE HOUR BATTLE

Many Injured and a Number of Arrests Were Made

Glasgow, Oct. 3— Glasgow was torn last night and this morning by wild, rioting mobs of disorderly during which demonstrators used hammers, hatchets and anything they could lay their hands on to fight merchants attempting to prevent looting of shops. The fighting raged for five hours.

An undetermined number of persons were injured, many of them requiring hospital treatment. Crowds of demonstrators, their heads bleed ing from police clubs, were brought into the police station.

Quiet was restored but groups of people remained in the streets and police patrols kept them moving. The rioters smashed shop windows in the main thoroughfares as well as in the less strongly guarded side streets.

The five hours of rioting was a sequel to a similar outburst Thursday night and Friday morning.

Panic Created

There was no mass meeting last night similar to the gathering on Glasgow Green on Thursday, but groups of rioters rushed from store to store, creating panic in the central section of the city.

The trouble started at 8.30 p.m. when counter police charged a crowd of about 100 who were creating a demonstration outside the high court in Jail square.

Almost simultaneously disturbances started at Cadzowgate, Glasgow Cross and other parts of the city.

Police raced to motor trucks from the central police office, and flung themselves into half a dozen different battles. Motorists were put out by driving policemen to the scene of action.

Police made 40 arrests, many of them being effected only after much difficulty. Some of the captives struggled so violently that it took five constables to carry them, horizontally and—one at a time, to the police station.

A ball of missiles from bosses in the disturbance areas added to the difficulties encountered by the police.

Twelve Arrested

A Labor member of Parliament and 11 others were in jail for participation in Thursday night's riots.

The Labor M.P. is John McGovern, who was hustled from the House of Commons after a commotion that lasted half an hour. He and 11 others are charged with "forming part of a disorderly crowd, threatening violence and constituting a breach of the peace."

While police were concentrated on the Glasgow Green, where the most serious disorders took place, merchants came running to report that looters were in their stores.

Mounted police galloped to the rescue of the merchants' shops and routed the looters, despite a bombardment from them of bricks, jam and eggs. After the trouble was over, broken doors and windows were boarded up, but the looters succeeded in getting liquor stuffs and wreckage from the fighting, for the looters also had used hammers to batter down liquor and butter against the police.

CHILD RAN IN PATH OF CAR

Lyle Herbert Sustained a Broken Leg and Face Was Bruised

A telephone call about four-thirty o'clock Friday afternoon, notified the city police of an accident at the corner of Bridge and Church Streets. Detective Sergeant Thusbach went at once to the scene of the accident and found that Mr. Manley Hiland, 130 West Moira Street, while driving west on Bridge Street, had accidently struck Lyle Herbert, an eight-year-old boy whose home is at 97 South Church Street. The little chap in company with Catherine Faulkner, a little girl of about his own age, was on his way home and in crossing the intersection was in the path of the car and was knocked to the pavement.

The boy was taken at once in Mr. Hiland's car to the home of Mrs. Faulkner where it was found that his left leg was broken and face bruised. The city ambulance was called and the little fellow was taken to the General Hospital in order to have an X-ray taken of the injured leg and Dr. Hubbard was advised of the accident and she hastened to the hospital to comfort her small son. Mr. Ward came to the city police station to report. Constable Isaard inspected the brakes of the Ward car and found them to be in good order.

WAGE CUT IS UNJUST SAYS PRES. GREEN

Denunciation of Cut As Poor Business Action

HOW TO BUY?

Vancouver, Oct. 3.—Denouncing the wage-reduction policy adopted by some industries as "unsound and unjust," President William Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, predicted here today that prosperity would be "just around the corner."

He addressed the Building Trades Department of the Federation, holding a pre-convention gathering preliminary to the fifty-first annual convention of the A. F. of L. next week.

Organized labor will fight wage reductions "to the last ditch and beyond," President Green declared. "I am rather apprehensive of what may happen if this wage-reduction policy of wage reduction continues," the labor President said. "Prosperity will never come back until wages are restored. Labor has come for the shorter work week in both public and private employ ment.

Mr. Green predicted unorganized workers would see their pay cut two or three more wage reductions."

"The United States will have frozen the buying-power of the 40,000,000 at work in the United States. They were buying less than they could use before the wage reductions, but now they have stopped almost entirely."

He declared that the wage-reductions announced by the United States Steel Corporation, and those of other pound of steel," was expressed by Mr. Green, because all use of steel were so bound up in other industries that a reduction in United States Steel Corporation had been organized even approximately as extensively as the building trades." Mr. Green continued, "I doubt if the wage cut could have been made."

"I hope, though, they all go down around you, I hope. I pray you will stand firm. Be good soldiers and refuse wage reductions."

"The time has come for salesmanship," he said, "when it pays the employers of the nation that union labor is more efficient—that it pays to employ union labor because it is more profitable."

The world situation as well as the situation in America was set by Mr. Green to be "worse than a year ago—more alarming. We are facing the direst year of unemployment."

With every prison overcrowded, we should have learned by now that punishment is no prevention. —Clarence Darrow.

THE GOOD OLD BATH TUB Fellow Citizens—

According to statistics there is a bathtub for every fifth person in Canada. I would have a good time making anybody in a boarding-house believe it, but it seems to be a fact, nevertheless.

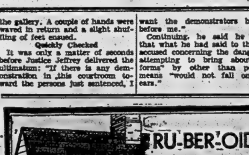
I know I have a bathtub, and I have had one for about the last four guys get along. I hope they all take a bath. My fellow who kitchen on Saturday night for Saturday night cleanliness is next to godliness, as the saying goes.

As I say I am the fifth fellow, who has a bathtub, and the other day I thought I'd start out and find the fourth fellow who haven't any. I thought they might be good company for my plumber friend of mine, of which I have several, I am glad to say.

I found the first fellow waiting on table in a lunch-counter. I was afraid I would, because I am kind of finicky about my cooking. I thought he was the head cook, but he was only a waiter, and didn't cook the soup himself, but he had charge of it.

The second fellow I ran out so to about. I think he has a bathtub, but didn't like to use it. That is, I think his parents had one. You can lead a horse to water but you cannot make him drink. You can lead a kid to water, but you cannot make him bathe.

The third fellow I met was at all, but a girl. She certainly did look pretty in the bathing suit that way. Her motto was save the surface and you save all. I never saw a nicer paint-job, outside the wagon-works. Oh, boy, the certainly look pretty in the bathing suit.



But I made a mistake on the fourth fellow. I picked a steamfitter. But he explained to me that he had a bathtub connected pipe-tools and, although he bathed in water every night, he bathed in grease and oil day.

All of which reminds me that an extra bathroom in your home is city nowadays, and it certainly is a comfort. It can be installed in a way that the price will never be felt. Gars Dobbs' easy payment plan can take care of all contemplated improvements for the home. Estimates cheerfully furnished on installation or a new kitchen outfit.

THE GAY BANDIT OF THE BORDER

by TOM GILL

But more than once during that long day they saw his friend scanned in puzzled contemplation. Later he was to look back and realize his admiration and sorrow the black hosts of apprehension that already of born the man unwelcome company.

Yet at dinner Don Bob seemed in higher spirits than for many days. The exultation of danger was upon him and the zest of life sang again in his veins. Boredom and half-contemptuous pity for vague lamenting emotion. He was the complex character to whom the pressure of danger is like wine. It made life, as he had said, "endurable." So over his coffee Don Bob listened a cowboy ballad and, rising at last, put an extra clip of cartridges in his pocket and examined the automatic that lay within his shoulder holster. Then he joined Ted Lowndes on with watchful eyes, ready for any vague impending danger.

"Let's go, old son," he said at last, looking out into the sunset and, drew in a deep breath of the warm desert air. "For moment his own eyes were wistful. "What is it," he asked slowly, "that keeps us from happiness when there is so much beauty in the world? If any God exists He probably despises men as the most ungrateful of creatures. Come."

Many days later, Ted was to remember those words.

They turned south just before entering Verdi and struck out on a winding road that led, after many turns and twistings, toward the nearer foothills of Mexico.

"The major has moved camp," Bob said, as they drove through the night. "We can drive within a few miles of it, and I've asked him to send horses to meet us there."

Once during that ride Ted turned and asked, "Bob, are you expecting something to go wrong?"

But the other only smiled and urged the low motor to greater speed. "What could go wrong on such a perfect evening?" he asked.

It was dark when they drove up at the road block and were challenged with two horses already saddled, and a half an hour more they arrived at the cavalry camp.

Everything was a picture of military precision. The major, all Verdi knew, prided himself upon orderliness. Nearly a hundred little tents had been pitched in neat rows at a spot where slanted lines told of a waterline. The wide sweep cleared of cactus and mesquite, a half-dozen mess tables, scoured and shining, stood at the farther end. Horses dozed in a wide corral and bestir a campfire soldiers lounged. As Don Bob approached his eyebrows rose in a little gesture of surprise, for in the glare of the firelight he could make out dimly a ring of armed cavalrymen riding patrol about the camp. He smiled across at Ted.

"I'm just wondering whether that patrol is to keep people in or keep people out." Then he spurred forward without waiting for a reply.

Toward the south end of the camp three large tents were pitched in a semi-circle. The major waited. The old soldier was in high spirits.

"Glad to see you, delighted to see you, boys; Morales and Alto are already here. Come in."

Don Bob hesitated. He slapped Don Bob with his pudgy hand.

"Big news, Bob, my boy! After tonight you will take back your reputation that you've lost! I'll capture the Coyote."

You haven't got him already, have you, major?" Bob asked.

"Just as good as got him. What with my wire wagon and Morales with his very night!" He turned and looked eagerly up.

"Oh, as to that," Bob answered, "I'll be willing to wager my life."

In the flickering lamplight Ted saw the quick glance that shot from within the tent. Alto, farther back at the table, was poring over a typewritten paper. Then at the entrance of the Americans, Morales came forward and shook Bob's hand heartily.

"A happy occasion, senor, no? Tonight the major assures us we will know who El Coyote is and once known"—he slipped a long finger across his neck—"there is no more El Coyote. And now you are asking yourself why the major invites you, remembering how you always defended this bandit!"

"Have I defended this bandit, or have I rather condemned a condition that necessitates one to be either a bandit or a slave?"

"Are you a slave, senor?" Ted felt Alto's glance of steel beneath the question, but Don Bob only laughed.

"Assuredly not, amigo. But perhaps I too am a bandit." And in the lamplight Ted saw Morales's teeth gleam with a smile.

"In any case, senor, I asked the major to invite you here because I am sure El Coyote is an American, and it is well to have here a leading American rancher—where we, being who this bandit is. And now perhaps the major will tell us his story."

Stewart waved them all to chairs, and the men gathered silently about the little wooden table—all except Alto, who still stood aloof, like some brooding statue.

"Shan't keep you people in suspense a minute longer," began the brisk little man of war. "The whole story boils down to this: Two things have been needed to persuade these people to talk—money and absolute privileges. Every one's afraid to open their lips—and with good reason. A week ago Morales, here, doubled the money leading to the capture of the Coyote. I've promised to protect anyone giving information if I have to detail a squadron of cavalry.

"Well, that sort of bait is having its effect. I've had nibbles and a week ago I had a real bite. I think I can tell you that tonight at this tent, and within half an hour, one of El Coyote's trusted lieutenants comes to tell us who El Coyote is and where he may be found."

"How do you know the man actually is a lieutenant of El Coyote?" Hickey asked.

"He says so, in full knowledge that he is putting himself in our hands, and that if his new is false he will languish unconfessedly in a Federal jail for some time. Anyone who brings us false leads is known man who might clear up the mystery and for years had lived on the borderland."

A soft breeze, hot and dry from the desert, swept through the tent, rippling the flap, causing the dark shadows of the soldiers without to waver. All eyes were now upon the major. A heavy ticking drowned on. Five minutes more.

Abruptly the flap was thrust back, the sound of a shot closely followed by another ripped the air with a sharp groan. Each man started to his feet. Loudly Blount called an order.

"Find out what that damned shooting's about." Purposefully he broken out on his face. "Ordinarily I'm a stickler for orders. Good, if anything goes wrong—"

Reaching for a canvas knapsack he buckled on his army automatic. Muttering with impatience he walked across the tent to the door. A loofall sounded on the ground, then a long drawn sigh across the tent wall. Quickly the major raised his head. In the moonlight stood Don Bob, rolling a cigarette. He nodded, and scratched a match on the tent pole.

"I just heard two shots, major," Bob smiled. "Both of them struck deeply. "Do you suppose it could mean something—perhaps get you your information?"

Before the major could answer a little knot of soldiers approached, bearing a Mexican between them.

FOUND DEAD IN HER ROOM

Former Trenton Teacher Lying on Bedroom Floor

Receiving no answer to repeated knocks, when he went to deliver the afternoon mail on Thursday afternoon, Mr. H. Brown entered the home of Miss Minerva White, Maryanne Street, Trenton, to find her lying dead on the bedroom floor, clothed in night attire. He summoned the police, who later went to the scene with Dr. Farley by whom his was pronounced extinct. Later Coroner Dr. Crowe, of Trenton, visited the scene and learning the facts declared an inquest not necessary.

The deceased and Mr. Brown were neighbors on Marmora Street and it has been his custom to bring the mail each afternoon. On Thursday he noticed no response and the major fell silent, gazing with a kind of tyrannical pity at the face which that lay on the table between them, awaiting the man. The secret was known man who might clear up the mystery and for years had lived on the borderland.

A soft breeze, hot and dry from the desert, swept through the tent, rippling the flap,—causing the dark shadows of the soldiers without to waver. All eyes were now upon the major. A heavy ticking drowned on. Five minutes more.

TWO SHIPS ON ROCKS IN FOG

One Vessel Frees Itself And Goes to Relief of Other

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 2.—Fear for the safety of seamen aboard the motorships Salvador and Patria, which grounded on a rock fog off the west coast of Mexico early today was dissipated by a radio message that the Salvador had freed itself and would go to the assistance of the other vessel.

The Mackay Radio reported that the Salvador was again afloat and no other assistance would be needed by either ship. The wireless, flashing ships, went on the rocks in shallow water in the vicinity of Bonitas Islands, 170 miles south of San Pedro. S.O.S. calls were received by several radio stations on the Pacific Coast.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 2.—Three S.O.S. calls were received by radio stations here and at Seattle early today from steamships supposed to be in distress off Mexico.

The liner President Grant reported it was 25 miles away from the Salvador and Patria, motorships, Bonitas, but was unable to approach closer to them because of shallow water.

The grounded ships were in a thick fog.

Two S.O.S. calls were received by the radio station Mackay Radio here from the motorships Salvador and Patria, which they were on the rocks in the vicinity of the Bonita Islands, 370 miles south.

The Port Townsend Coast Guard Radio Station reported at Seattle it had picked up a distress signal broadcast at 5 o'clock (P.S.T.), this morning by the steamship Point Sinclair, Jr., supposedly also ashore on the Mexican coast.

The Seattle Coast Guard Station said the call for help bearing the call letters KCOK, those of the Harry F. Sinclair, Jr., Pacific fleet oil tanker. Other stations that two fishing boats were ashore at the same place gave the Point Sinclair, Jr., call, Sinclair, Jr. might be requesting aid for the smaller craft, probably without radio.

MOST PEOPLE SEEK PEACE

Leader of Kingdom Move ment Speaks of Orient

Toronto, Oct. 2.—"If the military spirit is probably dominant in the army—as perhaps it is reasonable to expect in Japan or elsewhere—the great mass of the Japanese people as a whole are looking for peace," was the opinion of Dr. T. Kawaga, leader of the "King of God Movement in Japan," while briefly referring to the present Japanese-Chinese trouble, in the course of an address at a meeting of the United Church Missionary Congress here last night.

In a simple and human way, Dr. Kawaga took his audience not only across the Pacific to his native land, but through the devious ways of his own life, through Confucianism and Buddhism up to the Nazarene.

"The teachings of Confucius are, of course, wonderful. So, too, are those of Buddhism, but in neither was there any provision to be holy and pure," Dr. Kawaga said in retracting his conversion. "The 350,000 Christians in Japan don't know about the government nor do they know the names of its ministers, but they do know Jesus and an increasing respect for them has come to my country with the Christian missionaries."

The speaker lamented the fact that the power of world-wide democracy was restricting the missionary activities, forcing many churches to withdraw their front line missionaries.

Dr. Kawaga was introduced by Dr. J. H. Arnup, secretary of the Foreign Mission Band.

COMFORT for COLICKY BABIES

with Castoria's gentle regulation

"The best way to cure colic," says a famous doctor, "is to prevent it." And the best way to prevent it is to avoid gas in stomach and bowels by keeping the entire intestinal tract open, free from waste.

But there's one thing to remember here. A lazy baby's tender organs cannot stand harsh treatment. They must be gently urged.

This is just the thing Castoria comes to a mother's aid. Castoria, you know, is made especially for the delicate needs of babies and children. It is a pure vegetable preparation which is absolutely harmless. It contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics.

Children never fight Castoria. They like its taste and the relaxed comfort its gentle regulation brings.

For many years it has helped mothers through trying ordeals with colicky babies, with children suffering from digestive upsets, with constipation little silence. Keep it on hand for your children. You can always tell genuine Castoria by the name Chas. H. Fletcher.

INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION ON BIRD MIGRATION SOUGHT

Jack Miner Favors the Appointment of 15 Men

"Consideration, Justice and Prevention," is the subject of an appeal made today by Jack Miner, addressed to the "Dear People of Our North American Continent," in which he advocates the establishment of an international Migratory Bird Commission.

He suggests that such a commission be composed of 15 men, five from the southern states, five from the northern states of the United States, and five from Canada. He further believes that the first meeting place should be near the international boundary line, and that the first consideration should be the birds, not the hunters.

"Let us have a flashing review of the past fifteen years. The International Migratory Bird Treaty was giving any province or state an open season of two days each year, two months on ducks, geese, etc., season to be between September 1st and February 15th, with a bag limit of twenty-five ducks and ten geese per day for any individual. Then we called that a law but I would say, it certainly is not outlaw's open season and hoo-can-bag-limit. The sad fact of it is, these law makers were pleased and pleaded with by men who saw [illegible] situation, but these so-called law-makers go on and on with this wholesale slaughter system and today I have had reason to believe that our ducks have decreased fully 50 per cent., if not more, during the last twenty years.

"If these men framed and studiously held to such a lack of intelligence, they are to be pitied, but if it was pure ignorance, well, I guess even then they are to be pitied, though not to the same lowly part of what I want to say to we Yankees.

"Of all the international bird conventions I have attended in the United States, I have never yet heard mention of Canada having any say in it whatever. On the other hand I have time and again been twitted as to how our Canadians were shooting ducks and selling them, and time and again men have said to me as the case may become, "Mr. Miner, what is the use of us preserving the game when your Eskimos are killing them and feeding them to their dogs?" Then and often our Canadians have complained to me about Yankees being allowed to use automatic guns and punkin pits, etc., but readers, I give you my word, complaints from we Yankees to one Canadian, or vice versa, is like a eunuch to know there are faults on both sides.

"Now as to the Eskimos being such a menace to bird life, I believe he is our greatest assistance. First: Let me call your attention to the almost unbelievable way our swans get protection south of Eskimo land. Remember, they are a pretty white swans that winter along the southern Atlantic coast, as well as Eskimos by birth and by being given absolute protection from the hunter's gun, they have multiplied from perhaps half a dozen pair to many and, when migratory bird treaty went into effect, to perhaps fifty thousand or more now. This is absolute proof that the Eskimos in the far North with their bows and arrows are not keeping birds from increasing. Furthermore it is proof that drought, pollution and other menaces of the present day have not kept them from increasing, but the protection from the hunter's gun has allowed them to increase.

We all know that ducks and geese multiply faster than swans.

"Readers, you can rest assured that our Eskimo land contains at least a million square miles of breeding ground for our migratory birds, with a few scattered Eskimos dotted here and there trapping the enemies of elk, geese, swans and ducks and trading their furs to the fur dealer for their existence and what sane person with a heart can object to these men taking a few geese. Personally, I think the best bit of work I have done in the whole I have fattened and harnessed up with a gospel message and allowed to go over the top 10 Eskimo lads.

"From 1909 to 1917 I caught and tagged about 700 black and grey Hudson Bay ducks. These were local bred ducks that are here when our season opened September 1st; hence we Canadians get about two and one-half months' protection on them. In spite of this advantage over 85 per cent. of them that are reported killed met their waterloo in the United States.

"Remember this: Fully 90 per cent. of the first 4,000 geese I tagged were caught in April when they were on their way to the Eskimos to have first chance at them. And up to date 234 are reported killed in Canada; about 190 of this number came in from Eskimo land. And readers, you can bank your last dollar that those Arctic citizens have sent in the tags every bit as clearly according to the number gathered, as we citizens have to the south of them. I have 500 from the U.S.A.

"To us Yankees that are complaining, do these gathered facts say that the Eskimos are such a handicap to our migratory birds?

"In closing let me use the thought "Prevention." When this commission induces our Canadian and United States Federal Governments to reduce the open season for any one state or province to a month and a half, between the dates of September 15th and December 15th if allowed to, I will then go with this commission or committee and meet our Dominion Premier and his Cabinet and will gladly explain our mission and ask that our dear lady Miss Canada pass an order in-council at once, prohibiting any person or persons other than a permanent resident of our Hudson Bay Territory from taking a gun either by rail, water or air or allowed to hunt in any way in that virgin breeding ground that is now producing sport for all of North America."

VILLAGERS SEE MANY BEARS

Dry Season Has Made Food Scarce in the North

Bears appear numerous this year in the northern part of Hastings county. During this week Mr. Cyrus Toms of Highland Grove shot one in his orchard; Mr. Wm. Kidd of Madoc and Mr. Wm. Cornell of Hybla also bagged one each. Near Tamworth village two were seen in Mr. Kelaby's field and two in another field. The extremely dry season has made food scarce in the north, which is given as the reason for so many bears coming into the different communities in search of food.

Two Autoists Acquitted of Manslaughter at Peterboro

Peterboro, Oct. 3—A term of seven years in Portsmouth Penitentiary and ten lashes, to be inflicted at the rate of not more than three months' imprisonment, was the sentence imposed this week by Justice Wright at the Assizes here Friday night on John Wesley Clapper, 19, of Hastings, convicted of a serious offence on a five year old girl, he offence on a five year old girl, he was an abominable crime that not perhaps lavage would commit.

The jury in the case of Orville Ward and Harry Farrow, with manslaughter in connection with the death of Blair C. Bowman, motorcycle constable, brought in a verdict of "not guilty" Friday night after being out over three hours.

Brown, en route for Peterboro to bring back a prisoner, was passing a car driven by Ward which collided with another automobile four miles south of the city. The officer was killed and Farrow was injured.

In discharging Ward, Mr. Justice Wright remarked that he thought that he had contributed to the death of Blair C. Bowman by warning him. Ward was defended by J. C. McRuer, K.C., of Toronto.

Harry Fairey, a butcher of North Hastings, who charges the man's slaughter, was likewise acquitted by another jury. Fairey's automobile collided with a bicycle ridden by Norman Taylor on August 25, and Taylor was fatally injured.

SHUT OUT MIGHTY ATHLETICS TO EVEN SERIES AT ONE EACH

"Wild Bill" Hallahan Blanks A's With 3 Hits

MARTIN HERO

Steals Two Bases and Scores Both Runs For His Team

Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 3.—Led by a fleet young rookie outfielder, John ("Pepper") Martin, who almost single-handed shattered the spell of Big George Earnshaw's pitching mastery, the St. Louis Cardinals rode to triumph over the world champion Athletics Friday on the crest of a sensational shut-out performance by "Wild Bill" Hallahan.

Hallahan, for the second straight year, blanked the champions of the baseball universe, holding them to three singles, and winning by 3 to 0 in a sensational duel with Earnshaw, who tamed all but the ubiquitous and rabbit-footed Martin.

The triumph squared the World Series at one victory apiece as the warring forces wound up their opening skirmishes on the west, and headed for Philadelphia to resume on Monday, a battle that has suddenly became a toss-up again.

Martin, a hitting sensation from the outset, ran his total up to five hits in two days, scored both Cardinal runs as a result of each being running, and gave Hallahan the margin of victory that the gallant southpaw protected in a dramatic exciting finish that saw the Athletics slugged to the ninth inning with the bases full.

Although his change of pace baffled them, and silenced for the most part the big bats of Cochrane, Simmons and Foxx throughout the game Hallahan's wildness put him frequently in hot water. His final jam was in the ninth, and "Wild Bill" reeled off his courage to pull himself through a situation that threatened to knock him out of the game. He had turned back his foes in the fifth with the bases full and one out as Earnshaw hit into a double play.

Bases Loaded in Ninth

Foxx walked at the start of the ninth. Dykes also received a pass. Hallahan's seventh free ticket of the game, after Miller" filed to Haley. "Dib" Williams, young and over-anxious to come through in the pinch, struck out as he lunged for a bad ball and then Connie Mack sent Jim Moore up to hit for Earnshaw.

There was a wild yell as Moore also swung, and missed the third strike. The Cardinals and the big crowd thought the game was over. Catcher Jimmy Wilson had picked the ball up from the dirt and thrown to third base in a spirit of triumph, but the fans were kept alert by their sideline cavalcade. Eddie Collins and Moore raced to first base safely, to fill the bags.

Wilson had overlooked the formality of throwing his man out at first, since he had picked the pitch up from the dirt. For the next few moments all was chaos, but Eddie Collins saved the situation momentarily for the champions, and the umpires sent the Cardinals back to their positions. Max Bishop came to bat with opportunity beckoning him, but on his pop foul toward the field bones off the right field line Bottomley charged over, made a spectacular catch for the final out, and half tumbled over the fence into the arms of spectators.

Even the scorers were groggy under the effect of these lightning-like events. An error that was at first charged against Hallahan, for his low pitch, though it was also a third strike, later was recalled and the mishap charged against Wilson.

CAN SHE TAKE THE CANADIAN TITLE TWICE IN SUCCESSIONS

The Canadian Ladies' Open Golf Championship today gets under way at Toronto on Monday next and will see the greatest line-up of feminine stars ever entered in the event. But it is Maureen Orcutt of White Beeches, New Jersey, last year's champion who must be watched. It seems to be a habit with lady golfers to win this title twice in succession. Miss Collett won it in 1928 and repeated in '24. Miss Ada Mackenzie, the Canadian star, won it in 1922 and '23. Miss Orcutt is a comparatively new star in the golfing world. She has never won the U.S. title, although in 1927 she was a finalist. Last year she won the Canadian Open from a strong field, and this year gave a wonderful display in the U.S. Open at Buffalo. She will be opposed by the best lady golfers from the continent next Monday in Helen Hicks, Ada Mackenzie, Miss Dorothy Wilcox the British champion, and likely Glenna Collett Vare so that she will have to be at the top of her game. Miss Orcutt has been playing golf the lighter ball all summer and it may be that the change to the heavier will spoil her game. This change, by the way, will give Miss Mackenzie a decided advantage. It was the lighter ball that cost her a chance at the U.S. title. Miss Orcutt will meet Miss Kirkham of Montreal in the Canadian Ladies' Open Championship to-day in Toronto, this being the final round.

RIGHT PAWS WILL BATTLE

Little World Series to Be Resumed Today At St. Paul

Lexington Park, St. Paul, Oct. 3.—Two right paws were selected by managers of the St. Paul and Rochester clubs today to hurl their respective clubs to victory in the third game of the Little World Series here.

William "Slim" Harris, elongated Saint mainstay, was selected by Manager A. P. Leitheld to take the mound for the American Association champions. Bill Southworth, director of the destiny of the Rochester team, placed his faith in Ray Moss, former hurler for the St. Louis and Boston teams of the National League.

Both teams have grabbed off a victory in the all-important series from which will emerge the championship of the minor Leagues. The Saints took the first encounter Wednesday, 4 to 0, while the Internationals came back the following day to tie up the series at two all.

HORSE DRIVER FINED

Brantford, Oct. 3.—Drivers of horse vehicles, as well as those of automobiles, must stop at the scene of an accident, Louis White, Mount Pleasant, appeared before Magistrate Blake, charged with leaving the scene of an accident. White pleaded not guilty. The defense was that the horse ran away. He must pay a fine of $25 and costs.

STREET ALIBIS FOR CATCHER

Wilson Did Not Think Moore Hit at Bad Delivery

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 3.— Jimmy Wilson, the Cardinal backstop, threw to third base in the fatal ninth inning of the second World Series game because he didn't realize Jimmy Moore, pinch-hitting for Earnshaw, had swung at a bad 2 delivery for the third strike. That, at least, was the explanation today of Manager Gabby Street after a night of argument over one of the most unusual finishes in baseball.

Wilson when that pitch was on La way to the plate was centering his attention to one thing—the base runners," said Street. "He saw Foxx and Dykes had broken away from their bases and he was intent only on breaking up a possible double steal. Therefore, as I saw it, Wilson when he went down to pick that pitch off the ground did not see Moore strike at the ball. Jimmy apparently thought it was a ball and so threw to third to try to nail Foxx instead of resiting a throw to first automatically would retire Moore."

Whatever Wilson's reactions were in the situation, baseball men today agreed that the retirement of Max Bishop, the last batsman on Bottomley's fine catch, possibly saved the catcher from being a "goat." Hallahan was forced to pitch to the extra batsman after registering a strike-out for what should have been the third and last out of the game.

SPORT WRITERS QUESTION THE TACTICS USED

Connie Mack Brought to Task Allowing Earnshaw to Hit Twice

CARDS RUN WILD

A's Will Have to Speed Up Defense of Cards Will Take Them

(By Alan Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor)

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 3.—Not since Fred Merkle failed to touch second base nor since Gene Tunney took the count have the sports world found more to argue about than the strategy, or lack of it, in the second game of the World Series.

If the Athletics had come thru to beat Hallahan and the Cardinals, 4 to 3, in the ninth on the wrong side of Catcher Wilson threw to the wrong base on Jimmy Moore's strikeout, the St. Louis backstop would have been nominated for a place with Merkle among the goats of baseball history. But the Cards survived this brain-slip and the second-guessers today took none less a figure than Baseball Master Connie Mack to task for questionable tactics.

Earnshaw Pitchable Twice

Mack made the same mistake twice, many baseball men today declared, when he allowed George Earnshaw to bat for his turn at bat, instead of sending in a pinch-hitter, with the tying run on third base and others in the offing. Connie explained afterward he had confidence in Big Harold's hitting ability, especially against a left-handed pitcher, which were: First, that big George hit into a double play in the fifth with the bases full, and second, fanned in the seventh with men on first and third. The Cards were only 1-0 behind. To prove a long fly would have tied the score in the fifth, and as late as the seventh, with Hallahan in rare form, the looking many observers as though the better part of strategy was to nominate a batting replacement.

"What was Mack worried about?" asked a veteran manager. "He didn't have to save any of his pitchers. He'd get his ace days rest before the next game, anyway, and all he needed was one or two runs much more than they needed the distinction of having Earnshaw finish out his assignment. Without any runs it didn't make any difference how good Earnshaw was going. He was already one run behind. But that's the gamble, if Earnshaw had come through, Mack would have had the last laugh."

The Athletics, all hands agreed, will have to speed up their control of the Cardinal base-runners, especially "Pepper" Martin, if they are to overcome the National Leaguers from galloping away with the series. Right under the noses of the infant defensive club in the American League the Cards yesterday ran wild. Watkins as well as Martin made an extra base on an ordinary single, due to slipshod work in the outfield by Haas and Simmons. On top of that Cochrane's aim was far from its usual accuracy, whether or not a perfect throw would have nailed Martin on each occasion he stole a base.

NIGHT RACING IS CONDEMNED

Plans For Liberal Rally Discussed

Toronto, Oct. 3.—Plans for the forthcoming Provincial Liberal rally in London, Ont., October 30 were discussed today at a meeting here of Liberal members of the Legislature. W. E. N. Sinclair, K.C., who presided, said no other subject was brought up at the meeting. He denied the report, which was circulated yesterday, that Liberal members had announced their intention of supporting him against Mitchell F. You can PUSH too—with intelligent Advertising! —The Preparation and direction of which is our specialized business. We invite correspondence.

Have you time to read this about the DEPRESSION

WHEN THE TOP OF THE HILL is in sight

ARE YOU PUSHING—OR JUST sitting tight

WHILE thousands of Canadians are out of employment—and many businesses are at a standstill . . . and Governments are courageously planning to make work to relieve coming winter's distress—there is another—and brighter —side of the picture. The problem is being tackled —somebody is "doing something about it". Better times are nearer than just-round-the-corner—they are in sight

For every one person who is unemployed—there are scores who have jobs—pay envelopes—salaries—incomes—stipends—dividends. Saving deposits in Canada are greater by $40,000,000 than a year ago. Canadian Firms will in September pay out over $15,000,000 in Dividends. And even though many firms are not piling up the profits of 1928-9, thousands of factories are working. Stores are buying—railways are hauling—places of amusement are thronged—radios show from every house.

Somebody has money—somebody is spending.

The old 'bus of business is near the top of the long hill of Depression. It needs a strong, concerted push to the top. But who is to do the pushing? Certainly not the unemployed—they can't do it. It is for those who are in jobs—in positions—in office.

In almost every line of merchandise today's prices are lower—values greater—than at any time in the last 20 years. Today is the purchaser's opportunity—an opportunity to secure those things you need now—or will need in the near future. A New York Bank is reported as advising its 250,000 depositors to "reserve against emergencies—at least six months' salary, "and with the surplus" make careful purchases of things you want for permanent use, while prices remain low".

This Bank also says—

"In our opinion the millions of savings and thrift depositors in this country have it in their power to change the whole aspect of industrial and trade conditions."

We make no comment—we quote it only as an evidence of the Bank's courage to make such a proposal.

The fact is, if commodities are bought, someone must receive wages for making them. . . someone thus has money to spend—has money to buy things. When commodities are bought, someone must make them—someone must receive wages . . . (well, there we are, right in the circle again).

The two busy B's of Buying and Business must be twins!

Did you ever stop to figure out the wages you create when you buy a piece of upholstered furniture (for instance). Who cuts the lumber—who makes the glue—the springs—the fabrics—the moss—the fibre —the felt—the cotton and silk materials. Men and women! Who carts all these to the factory—who makes the motor trucks—the truck's tires—who supplies the gas—who serves out the lubricans. Who prints the catalogue—who photographs the chesterfield—who makes the paper—ink—and who binds it. Who sells the Furniture to the Retailer—types the order. Who makes the dress the typist's wages buy. Who sells the machine she uses—ribbons—and repairs. Who sorts the letter in the Post Office —delivers it—. Who sells the furniture to you—who delivers it. (We'll be mentioning motor car tires again, if we don't watch out!). Who makes the sales slip—pencil—and tags—the string—paper—crates. Who pays rent—employs window dressers and window cleaners.

It makes one dizzy to think of all the people and wages involved in the purchase of any commodity . . . artists and artizans—managers and mechanics—drivers and drovers—clerks and clergymen. Multiply by ten thousand transactions and the total PUSH is staggering in its force.

Surely those who are able—those who possess the money—those who have steady employment should, RIGHT NOW, get-out-of-the-bus, and PUSH!

So if you need any Commodity or Service—and possess the money to purchase it—buy NOW—and PUSH!

Railroads Agree Upon 4 Systems

New York, Oct. 2.—Executives of leading eastern United States railways yesterday announced their agreement on details of a new consolidation of the territory into four major systems.

The proposals will be submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission, which must approve mergers before it can become effective.

Rolling eight years of age against the Presidents of the Pennsylvania, New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio and Chesapeake & Ohio-Nickel Plate group smoothed out the consolidation details which have standing in the way of a final decision on the plan announced at the White House last December.

The agreement was made of these questions was not revealed in the public statement issued after the close of the meeting at the Pennsylvania Terminal, and it was said that a complete disclosure would not become public until the report was in the Commission's hands.

One fine residence excavated in the rocks at Prospect constituted at least forty rooms.

His Civil Record

During the last year he has achieved triumphs as a leader of armament which overshadowed even his exploits on the field of battle. When Germany was threatened with virtual bankruptcy in June he personally appealed to President Hoover to extend relief and backed up Chancellor Bruening's plea for cessation of emergency decrees which averted what seemed a certain disaster.

Even in age when most men are semi-invalid, his body seems as sturdy and mind as active and keen as piercing as when he was a young officer in the Prussian "Army of old gentleman," he still is a stickler for military discipline as a veteran of 70 years ago and his daily disposition, recalling the boy who at the age of 10 said, "I always want peace and quiet."

CLEAN UP OLD CLOCK'S FACE

Grime of Two Centuries Wiped Off Historic Timepiece

Montreal, Que., Oct. 3.—A multi witness of two centuries of life in Montreal and Canadian history and for a long time the only public timekeeper in the city of Montreal, the historic old clock that tempers rides the facade of the old Notre Dame Seminary, on Places d'Armes has been completely and mechanically restituted. Cleansed of the accumulated grime of two centuries the old clock, which was installed in 1701 and originally cost 800 francs, is again proudly ticking away the hours.

Redecoration of the historic clock forms part of the $80,000 improvements now being completed by the Gentlemen of St. Sulpice, owners of Notre Dame church, presbytery and seminary.

Until 1731 the clock was considered the official timepiece of the city. In that year it stopped functioning but was repaired in 1760. Olivier Masquoil, Superior of Grasset College and architect of the fabric of the parish, "Histoire de L'Eglise Notre-Dame-de Montreal," gives the following interesting details:

"In 1751 it was the only exterior clock in the city. The Scottish and English merchants were humiliated to be compelled to ask the time from the directors of the seminary. When Christ Church was built in 1814 the parishioners installed a clock but the timepiece, it is stated, never gave the correct hour and it finally was destroyed by fire in 1856. The Seminary clock has remained the last fifteen years."

Restoration of the ancient clock work is due to the interest and perseverance of Abbe Arthur J. Paiment. The bells which occupy a small niche at the top of the tower, 1914 the bells have been rejuvenated.

And so the bands which travelled forty leagues hour circle through the difficulties of the early French colonists, during the period of France in America, the progressive establishment of British supremacy, the fight for Confederation and successive administrations of latter times, will resume their march to the tune of flying minutes.

WIDOW ON WAY TO SEE PAIR

Mrs. Collings Not Sure of Identity of Men From Fro mPhoto

New York, N.Y., Oct. 3.—Before another day dawns, Mrs. Benjamin Collings will have a chance to say whether or not two men being held at Dayiona Beach, Fla., had anything to do with the murder of her husband.

With her lawyer William A. Kelly, her sister-in-law, Miss Helen Collings; Fred Gunder, Assistant District Attorney of Nassau County, Mrs. Collings left last night for Daytona Beach. She is due to arrive there late tonight. Before deciding to make the journey, Mrs. Collings studied photographs of the two men, Leslie D. Ritchie, 31, and his son, William, 19.

She said after looking at telephoned pictures she could not be sure, but that she doubted if the Ritchies had any part in the murder of her husband's cruiser the night of September 9th killed him and then abandoned it.

Suffolk County authorities wired Daytona Beach police to detain the father and son 24 hours more to give Mrs. Collings a chance to see them.

The Methodist Church at Currituck, N.C., has bought a new motor boat with which to make the rounds of the town every Sunday to limit the attendance to church free of charge. It is said that this system will increase church attendance.

UNDERWATER SCENES OF "THE SEA BAT" FASCINATING

Without the possibility at a doubt the ninth degree of thrills is reached in the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer marine melodrama, "The Sea Bat" which opens today at the Capitol Theatre for a two day engagement.

matinee daily.

Fights above the ocean, but principally underwater feature this original story by Dorothy Yost.

The novelty of the "menace" involved in the plot is one of the greatest charms. When two sponge divers, John Millan and Nils Asther, fight underwater their differences are made unimportant by the appearance of a monster ray bat, one of the two ton giant rays which infest tropical waters. More deadly than sharks, they engulf divers in their immense blanket wings.

Asther's death by one of these creatures starts the springs of a powerful plot revolving about Chad C. Bickford, an escaped convict in minister's clothing; Raquel Torres a Spanish girl of the sponge fisheries; George Marion, her sodden father; superintendent of the colonists; John Millan, villainous diver, and his mysterious companions. Gibson Gowland and Boris Karloff.

Bickford and Raquel lead in actual fights above the ocean, principally underwater. Their appearance is dynamic.

African Adventures

Today's programme at the Capitol will include the 9th episode of the "Adventures in Africa" series. This episode is entitled "Jungle Flames" and is as intriguing as it sounds.

DOROTHY MACKAILL AND CON RAD NAGEL IN DEEPLY HUMAN DRAMA

Blue Pearl Dressmaker Monday Night

"The Reckless Hour" which is announced as the feature attraction at the Belle, Monday and Tuesday, is a dynamic, versatile as he is dynamic.

Today's programme at the Capitol will include the 9th episode of the "Adventures in Africa" series. This episode is entitled "Jungle Flames" and is as intriguing as it sounds.

When they invaded the town on Tuesday to stage a demonstration and parade, the miners left two of their number dead, after a 40-minute battle with town police, aided by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Two more are in the Kingston Hospital, not expected to live and another is in a critical state in the hospital at Weyburn, sixty miles away. The questions are now premost in the minds of the people of this community as far as they await further developments—will the strikers revenge? And have their leaders departed?

Without leaders it is felt nothing will happen. The reputed leaders of the strike and of the demonstration on Tuesday have not been seen since the street battle. Sam Scarlett, Abbie Dalton, James Short and Dan Mosr cannot be found. If found they would be arrested and charged with inciting to riot or some similar offense.

Today leaders even were up for preliminary hearing in police court charged with rioting. Thirteen of them were committed for trial by D. A. Wynne-Jones, Justice of the Peace. One was discharged on the ground that there was not enough evidence. This man, Harry Miskowsky, was arrested after the riot as he was attempting to board a truck about to leave town. He was in company with a man who had been seen in the mob according to police evidence. Thirteen of the fourteen were captured during and after the fracas.

The other man, Mike Pulharuski, was picked up when the police made a search of the mining villages the next day. He was found in bed, and told the police he had been sick for two years. Suspicious, the police removed the bed clothing and found blood. Further examination disclosed a bullet wound. Despite the fact that neglect of the wound might have caused complications, the man was content to remain in bed rather than be arrested. He was treated and placed in custody.

An organ with a loonie keyboard and silver pipes was found not long ago at the site of the Roman city Aquincium, and is believed to date from the third century B.C.

ESTEVAN FOLK ARE FEARFUL

Apprehensive Lest Strikers Try to Avenge Deaths

Estevan, Sask., Oct. 3 — Despite all outward appearances of tranquility, there is an undercurrent of apprehension in the Saskatchewan coal-fields last night. Since Tuesday's tragic clash between strikers and police in this town, which adjoins the coal fields, there has been no outward occurrence. But among the townspeople of Estevan there is fear, and among the miners out in the hamlets of Bienfait and Taylorton, there is sullen resentment.

Will they invade the town on Tuesday to stage a demonstration and parade, the miners left two of their number dead, after a 40-minute battle with town police, aided by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Two more are in the Kingston Hospital, not expected to live and another is in a critical state in the hospital at Weyburn, sixty miles away. The questions are now premost in the minds of the people of this community as far as they await further developments—will the strikers revenge? And have their leaders departed?

Without leaders it is felt nothing will happen. The reputed leaders of the strike and of the demonstration on Tuesday have not been seen since the street battle. Sam Scarlett, Abbie Dalton, James Short and Dan Mosr cannot be found. If found they would be arrested and charged with inciting to riot or some similar offense.

Today leaders even were up for preliminary hearing in police court charged with rioting. Thirteen of them were committed for trial by D. A. Wynne-Jones, Justice of the Peace. One was discharged on the ground that there was not enough evidence. This man, Harry Miskowsky, was arrested after the riot as he was attempting to board a truck about to leave town. He was in company with a man who had been seen in the mob according to police evidence. Thirteen of the fourteen were captured during and after the fracas.

The other man, Mike Pulharuski, was picked up when the police made a search of the mining villages the next day. He was found in bed, and told the police he had been sick for two years. Suspicious, the police removed the bed clothing and found blood. Further examination disclosed a bullet wound. Despite the fact that neglect of the wound might have caused complications, the man was content to remain in bed rather than be arrested. He was treated and placed in custody.

Letters to the Editor

KELIEF OFFICER NEEDED

Belleville, Ont., Oct. 3rd, 1931

Editor The Ontario Intelligencer:

(Re Unemployment Situation in Belleville)

Dear Sir:

I might say I have attended the three meetings held recently and being a good listener I said little, but taking the notes of speeches of my views of the whole situation, and in particular I wish to state that I believe in criticism but it must be a constructive criticism, and, Mr. Editor, some of the criticism hurled at our mayor and city council has not been of a very constructive nature. I believe our city council has done and is doing its do all that lies in its power to provide all the labor it can for the laboring man and also in providing the money to pay for this labor. At one of the meetings one of the speakers suggested very emphatically that we give a six hour day. Very well, we will do that and, if this man will stand in his stead, I will be pleased to give him a nomination for the Mayor's chair for the year 1932. At the same meeting I noted some expressions such as "We must look after our rights and see to it that we get our rights" and right here, Mr. Editor, is a burning question as to what these men might consider their rights and to explain my point more fully, let me use this instance. I am registered at the city hall as unemployed. I consider myself as not getting my rights, but I do not disclose the fact that I have a very comfortable balance in the bank in my wife's name. If I get my rights I would be told to go home and stay home and any system that would permit me to go to work is wrong. A good deal might be said about the work which, according to my observations has contributed largely to the labor unrest in Belleville at the present time, and I would like to suggest that our city council appoint a relief officer, approved by the labor committee appointed. This man should be appointed from the ranks of labor and be a man who needs the work.

Mr. Editor, I believe our council is an intelligent body of men and I believe if they were to meet the labor committee and the whole matter discussed in a business-like way that a working man would be met by all of these issues could be settled satisfactorily to all concerned. I am a working man who is in full fair share of the work. With equal rights to each and every one and special favors to none.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor.

DEMANDS WAGE STANDARD BE MAINTAINED

Labor Demands That Industry Provide Jobs or Pay Penalty of Tax

President Green Makes Statement to Convention

One FAMILY

Problem of Unemployment Studied From Family Basis

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 5.—American Federation of Labor delegates convened today demanding that private industry furnish more jobs or pay the penalty of higher taxes.

The 51st annual gathering of the A.F.L. was opened by President William Green said, to present to the national problem methods both temporary and permanent, of relieving unemployment and depression.

Outlining his views of labor's attitude toward the unemployment situation, Mr. Green said:

"America are all one family, and we must approach the problem in that light. If we consider a family without enough jobs to support all its members, we should divide the work among all the members, and let each get a little. All should sacrifice, but all would live."

So capital must share the burdens of labor, he said, and also apportion the jobs available. Industry would benefited by the machine age which increased production per man hour, he said, by maintaining the American wage standard, allowing shorter working hours, and work assurance.

"We must help through keeping up wages and providing jobs, or it must be paid for in the future."

Labor Warns Against Dictatorship in Britain

Labor Warns Against Dictatorship in Britain

Scarborough, England, Oct. 5.—Canadian and Associate Press Cable—A warning that extreme socialists as "a jolly good fellow" was received by Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, new Parliamentary chief of the British Labor party, who visited the annual conference of the party here today.

Mr. Henderson, who came for a brief address at the opening of the conference, declared the party met at a time when none knew the date of the impending general election. "We can only follow the sound and safe policy," he said, "of having our lamps trimmed and ready to seize the first day when over the election proclamation is issued."

Most of the delegates sprang to their feet, cheering and singing to express their confidence in the Labor former foreign secretary who is now the chief Parliamentary opponents of Prime Minister MacDonald, his erstwhile leader.

Stanley Hurst, Chairman of the National Labor Executive, warned against dictatorship in the British Government, declaring parliamentary forces were aware that if they could assist Labor there would be no effective force in Parliament to oppose their purposes, "and a dictatorship would be the lowest form of Parliamentary democracy could be established."

He advocated public control of banking; one of the leading planks in Labor's election platform, declaring: "It is time for us to take up the challenge of the nation and to say definitely safeguarded through the effective control of the central banking system."

He referred to the imposition of protective tariffs "folly" and "sin."

JAP WARSHIPS AT SHANGHAI

More Craft on Way to Join Flotilla on the Yangste

Shanghai, Oct. 5 (AP)—Two Japanese destroyers arrived here today and two others were on their way to reinforce Japan's flotilla on the Yangtze River in the face of alleged anese officials' fears that serious trouble would break out between their nations in many river ports.

The Japanese warships from various Chinese cities developing since trouble started openly two weeks ago when Japanese consulates and southern Manchuria by Japanese troops, quick to little to do.

The Japanese legation here announced its consulate at Chenchiang, Honan Proying, had been closed and all its staff and other Japanese residents there had withdrawn to Hankow.

At Chengtu, Szechwan province, authorization was given to close the Japanese consulate and withdraw Japanese Nationals if advisable. The exodus from smaller Yangtze area cities continued, all Japanese women and children sailing tonight from Shasi, Ichang and Changsha. Only a few Japanese men and consular staffs remained at these cities.

The dispatch of additional Japanese warships to the Yangtze River region was said in private advices from Nanking to have generated pessimism bordering on panic.

Every Japanese was feared in the Chinese capital, such as that fifty Japanese warships were enroute to Chinese waters and that the Japanese itself would be bombarded. The only foundation for this, according to high Japanese official, was the announcement that the four additional destroyers were coming to China.

First Non-Stop Flight Across Ocean is Achieved

FISH TAIL LANDING

Plane Lands Minus Its Steering Gear and Gasoline

Wenatchee, Wash., Oct. 5.—First to fly an airplane across the Pacific Ocean, Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon, Jr., landed here today.

Leaving Japan after a long flight, to obtain more speed to make the dangerous hop, Pangborn and Herndon ended the northern stretches of the ocean in 41 hours, 13 minutes, covering about 4,485 miles.

Minus landing gear, which they dropped shortly after leaving Samushiro, Japan, early yesterday morning, the flyers appeared over Wenatchee at 5:13 p.m. (P.S.T.), circled a few minutes while sightseers gathered and made a public outbreak of fire and landed the plane on the local airport.

Wenatchee, Wash., Oct. 5.—Completing the first non-stop airplane flight across the Pacific Ocean, Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon, United States fliers, landed here today.

The plane landed on her "belly", tipped over on her nose and then settled back. She slid along slowly on the crest of dust. The plane came to rest on its left wing. Its propeller was smashed in the landing. Operators described it as a "fish tail" landing.

Dallas, Texas, Oct. 5.—Colonel W. E. Easterwood, Jr., Dallas aviation enthusiast, said today Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon, who successfully completed the flight from Japan to Wenatchee, Wash., could "cash in under either name" and that they would not be eligible for the $25,000 prize be offered for a Japan-to-Dallas flight.

"They called me from Tokyo asking me about my office, while I was attending the American Legion convention in Detroit," he said, "and I replied that Texas would pick its own aviators. We are not interested in flights for the advancement of aviation, but for profit. I will have to be the judge of the plane and of the aviators in such an attempt.

"I will wire the Dallas chamber of commerce."

They had one hundred gallons of gas left, Herndon said, but "I'm hungry for them to go to Salt Lake City.

"The reason we came back was because we like the name capital," Pangborn said. Wenatchee is a centre of the apple industry in Washington.

"My, you don't even look tired," Mrs. Pangborn said.

Their route brought them over Vancouver Island, Seattle, Spokane, circled Mount Rainier three times and then headed south shortly after 3 a.m. The crowd cheered when the plane came down on the runway.

From Samushiro Beach to Wenatchee, the fliers had been aloft 41 hours 13 minutes before they started, the distance is approximately 4,500 miles which falls considerably short of the 5,000 miles record set last July by Russell Boardman and John Polando in flying from New York to Istanbul, Turkey, 5,011 miles.

Pangborn and Herndon spanned the Pacific in about forty-one hours

Mother Weeps

Pangborn's mother was crying both men had left the plane. Herndon drew a cut over his left eye. Pangborn said the cut was caused by the propeller. Aviators here said the cut was wonderful landing. Herndon's first words were "give me a

Ancient Town Becomes Independent Borough

London, Oct. 5 (C.P.) — Prince Edward went to Canterbury today for the ceremonial handing over to the town's authorities of a corporation as an independent borough.

Barking is really a limb of greater London. It has almost doubled its population in the last ten years and in another five will probably approach 200,000.

Suburban London is notoriously heedless of its own civic life but the new borough's inaugural festivities have taken proper pride in its historic foundations.

Doubt Whether MacDonald Will Run Independent

London, Oct. 5.—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald today went to Buckingham Palace with Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George, Liberal leader, and returned immediately to London, bringing back with him Rt. Hon. Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who, lives not far from Lloyd George's country home.

Mr. Snowden returned to London the Prime Minister received a wire from Sir Clive Wigram, Principal Private Secretary to the King. Sir Clive and Mr. MacDonald talked for half an hour or more.

Another Cabinet meeting followed.

Certainty of Elections

The comings and goings strengthened the general belief that dissolution of Parliament and a general election, with the National Government in close association would be announced by the end of the week. The Liberal leaders met at the home of Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George, veteran leader of the Liberal Party, today and had a two-hour talk with Mr. Lloyd George. It was generally accepted the Prime Minister was making a last effort to secure the Liberal leader's agreement to an early general election.

Today's Conversations

There was no statement after the conversations. Mr. Lloyd George, who is still too ill to come to London and take an active part in developments, has been kept in close touch with the situation by his lieutenants but the Prime Minister today no doubt acquainted him with the trend of discussion behind the scenes.

Afternoon the Prime Minister came back to London for an afternoon conference with his colleagues.

The Labor Party gathered in conference at Scarborough, England, and elected as chairman Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, who succeeds Prime Minister MacDonald as parliamentary leader of the Laborites. Mr. Henderson, in opening remarks that in absence of a definite date for the election, urged members to follow the safe policy of being prepared.

He was forming a new organization to counteract the Prime Minister on any basis, the statement said.

It was understood Sir John would head a new party to be known as the "Liberal National Party" and would start active campaigning in a few days. In some

Certainty of Elections

The comings and goings strengthened the general belief that dissolution of Parliament and a general election, with the National Government in close association would be announced by the end of the week. The Liberal leaders met at the home of Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George, veteran leader of the Liberal Party, today and had a two-hour talk with Mr. Lloyd George. It was generally accepted the Prime Minister was making a last effort to secure the Liberal leader's agreement to an early general election.

There is no finer exercise than stacking during the winter months and the Arena Management are going to make every effort with the Scouts to get a full season's skating and hockey and hope to make a credit for the smaller children in the afternoons. So you can't beat a good gift than a ticket for a full season's skating at the new Arena. PIECE WORK PLUS SYSTEM

Progressive Schedules to Enact Maximum Production

Moscow, Oct. 5.—(UP)—The development of Josef V. Stalin's forced labor system of wages in Soviet Russia, carrying the piece-work idea to an even greater extreme than in capitalistic industry.

The "piece-work plus" system, which has been applied to the entire metallurgy branches but later will be introduced, proves to be more drastic than the official announcement indicated two weeks ago. It establishes a new type of industrial worker severely in sharp contrast to the former communistic ideals.

Combined with a ruinous bonus system, the "piece-work plus" system means a new burden on the already over-loaded financial resources. Moreover, because it would lead to a reduced purchasing value of the ruble, it is a direct disregard of the indirect "inflation." The government, however, has contended that increased productivity of labor will make up the difference.

The basic wage, upon which the new plan rests, have been increased 30 per cent. for the mass of workers. The increase was announced for the highest wage scales, for more highly skilled workers. At the same time, piece-rates will be paid automatically to the technical administrative employees of industry.

The graduated or progressive wage system for the mass, steel and metal workers were nicely calculated to bring about a steady reduction from every worker. Not only will they be paid according to quantity and quality, but payment increases as the quantity rises. Daily norms or quotas for every type of work will be established and these norms will be divided into three parts. The first third will be paid for at a certain rate; the second third at a higher rate and the last third will hot about 50 per cent. more than the first.

The cash incentive to workers will be much greater than in piece work in capitalistic countries. By bringing up the last third much later than weekly or monthly, the government hopes to keep industrial workers steady.

Asks That Hundred Men Go From Here

Belleville, it is expected, will participate in the labor reinforcements to be sent into the Trans-Canada highway construction area. Mayor Reid stated today that he had asked that one hundred men from Belleville be given work on the highway. He, of course, cannot say how many if-not all of the one hundred will be taken. It is believed that Kitchener, Belleville, Peterboro and Lindsay will each soon begin to move men to the camp.

76TH ANNUAL FAIR IS HELD ACROSS BAY

Roblin's Mills Exhibition Held Under Best of Conditions

LARGE CROWD

Good Quality of Exhibits and Lively Races Seen

On the shores of Roblin's Lake, seventy-six years ago, an exhibition was held where the early folk of the township of Ameliasburg showed their stock and produce. They felt that the time had arrived for the demonstration of the growth and stability of the community and so they had a fair. From those days of 1855 is a long cry—from the assemblage of the stock and the produce of then to now, from the efforts which the farmers and villagers of those days put into their work but it was just this event and this band of heroic men and women who started the first fair that were responsible for the series of exhibitions which have made Ameliasburg or Roblin's Mills famous. The village is tenacious of the old name for it treasures the memory that it is loyal to the days which are no more for it realizes that every community spirit must have a local institution and a fair.

There have been fairs galore here—any fair society will envy the village and township for that notable record—small ones, then greater and greater. Of course they have modified somewhat with the changes that have swept over the country, but in the main the ideals of their grandfathers animate the directors, the exhibitors and patrons of the fair today.

Ideal Weather

Roblin's Mills sticks to Saturday, and the first Saturday in October. It has had its run of fair weather according to past records and Saturday was one of the best of them. No one had a word to say against the weatherman for he was most benign. The recent rains has greened the country and the fair park surface was itself green award. The exhibitions opened with eclat at noon and before the afternoon had worn away a good crowd had come from all parts of the township and the country to see and enjoy themselves.

Horses were exhibited at the southwest corner of the 13 rounds and judges were busied there while in the east side were cattle, a worthy exhibition of these attracting considerable attention. On the northeast were the swine and the sheep, also a fine exhibition, and in the north the poultry may be mentioned the least of the features of the fair. The hens did great work and it is no wonder for the county of Prince Edward may be noted for its vegetables and its fruit but it is also known for its multitude of hens. The village is tenacious of fowl, which are often remarked upon by visitors to the county.

Main Building

The main building was thronged throughout the afternoon. Here one felt it was good to be present. The dyspeptic must have felt uneasy in this atmosphere of plenty, of rich odors from the fruit and the sight of the eye in the most delicious cakes and pies, preserves and all those other preparations which womankind has considered her forte in farm life. Then again the ladies' work section. The only feeling which could be aroused would be one of admiration and envy if envy were not quite ruled out of the fairs' list of virtues. Here the spectator felt that he saw the value of a fair—its ridiculous to emulation and pride in excelling.

The midway was itself quite an attraction while over along the oval where the horses were judged and the two speeding events were held good sized crowds were gathered.

Of course the fair showed some signs of depression—the tickets were not spent as freely on the concessions as usually. This phenomenon is noticeable at every fair this year.

Busy Official

President James S. Barber has a good list of years of fair going behind him. He is a hale and hearty veteran, and has a small record of thirty-one years in the office to his credit. He has had at his finger tips all the details of the not small secretary from 1871 to 1875, and again from 1878 to 1931. Mr. Roblin is accordingly an institution himself and knows well the fair.

No fair has more faithful directors than Roblin's all there. They were not sightseeing but were looking after the fair crowds and the exhibitors' welfare and the interests of their institution.

Cessaganga Band honoured the music for the afternoon and were two finished events in a splendid way.

The atmosphere pervading the fair seemed to recollect the old traditions of the fair and to attend to them. One of the competitions was for the best display of the village of Roblin's Mills, from March 1st, 1931 to date. The prize offered by Crown was granted to Jacob Cronk for his 81, third generation of Ameliasburg on which the oldest part of the village was built. Needless to say Mr. W. H. C. Roblin donated the prize.

The Racing Events

Owing to the unfortunate accident which occurred in the first heat of the 2.30 trot, the ardor of the speed was somewhat dampened.

There were only two speeding events upon the program and both were contested in three straight heats. A strong wind some time ago carried the canvas of the judges' stand and a truck was utilized to hold it down. Mr. Randall Oser was the starter.

Farmers' Race

There were four horses entered in this event and the result for first and second place in the three heats run was never in doubt. Woolsey Lee, owned by Mr. E. Terrill in each heat forged ahead at the start and was never overtaken. The result was as follows:

Woolsey Lee, E. Terrill 1 1 1
Sunbeam, H. Masters 2 2 2
Never Slip, G. Crosby 3 4 3
Bobby Boyd, A. Masters 4 3 4

2.30 Class

In the first heat of this race there were four starters but only two finished owing to a spill around the corner of the home stretch, resulting in two drivers being more or less injured. The result was first driven by Wm. Smith of this city, second by Ivan Bowerman, Picton, K. owned by Craig and Dingman, Bloomfield second in three heats, Peter H., driven by Stanley McMillan did not start owing to the accident sustained in the first heat after the collision occurred. The result of this event was as follows:

June S., Wm. Smith, Belleville 1 1 1
Corby K., Craig and Dingman, Bloomfield 2 3 2
Silver King, E. Morris, Trenton 3 2 3
Peter H., J. Vasseau, Belleville 0 0 0

Due to there being no watch amongst the officials the time was not officially kept hence is not recorded. The majority of the spectators on the ground were witnesses of the races which proved one of the drawing cards of the day's events.

Football Crowds Jeer at Capone

Chicago, Oct. 5—Forty thousand voices gave "Scarface Al" Capone the "Bronx cheer" in Northwestern University Dyche Stadium this afternoon.

The gang leader, accompanied by "Machine Gun Jack" McGurn and several other men, supposedly bodyguards, arrived and were hooted by the vast throng attending the Northwestern University of Nebraska football game. They left and departed at the end of the third period.

Capone and his party occupied seats in the fifth row and were the targets for an intermittent chorus of cheers, boos and hoots during the game. When he and his friends arose from their seats at the end of the third period the crowd became a mighty crescendo that swept over the whole huge stadium. "Hardly a person in the stands refrained from adding his voice to the uproar. The Capone party walked briskly and apparently somewhat abashed, to the nearest exit and hastened to depart.

$4,000 WORTH GOLD FOUND

Boys Uncover Raw Metal In Sandwich Woods

Windsor, Oct. 5.—Finding of two nuggets of gold, valued at $4,000 by four pupils of the Wyandotte street public school, Windsor, in the Tuesday bush, near Sandwich, is being investigated by the Provincial and Dominion police.

The boys are: Lyle Dolgart, 13 years old, Erin avenue; Gordon Thull, 13 years old, Erin avenue; Stanley Durham, 13 years old, Bridge avenue, and Clarence Morris, 13 years old, Bridge avenue.

The gold was found Wednesday, when the boys decided to go hiking rather than attend the annual field day of the public schools, but it was not reported to the police until today because the boys had sworn their parents to secrecy, believing they had "struck it rich."

Rag Pinkers From Tree

While the youngsters were exploring the bush, the Tuck boy came upon a rag in the fork of a maple tree. "It's a wise guy to mark a tree with a rag, Jay," Tuck commented. "Rabbit hole, nothing," said the Morris boy, as he kicked aside a hill of moss, bringing to light the two nuggets.

Quickly prying open the tins, the boys were delighted to find what looked like gold.

Maybe it was left there by pirates," Tuck said, visioning a further find. But, although they searched the bush, they failed to find another box.

The father of young Tuck, although sworn to secrecy, decided to report the find to the police, and the two nuggets were turned over to the Sandwich police station today.

Valued By Expert

The police called in a Windsor jeweler, an expert in metals, and he said the granulated contents of the boxes was valuable. He placed the value at $4,000 and $5,000.

Provincial officials expressed the opinion that the gold was similar in color and texture to that which came from Omer Hartobolle of Kirkland Lake. Hartobolle's find, which also had failed to answer when his name was mentioned, is the richest gold find was covered with a Toronto newspaper of a June date.

New Discovery Aids Anaemics

Rochester, N.Y., Oct. 5 — A new form of liver extract which relieves secondary anaemia in dogs has been developed at the University of Rochester School of Medicine.

Secondary anaemia is a common human affliction. Its cause differs radically from that of pernicious anaemia, but it is usually accompanied by the physical weakness or mental institude.

The new discovery does much toward settling a dispute whether liver feeding is useful in the treatment of anaemia. The new form of anaemia, as it is in the experimental dogs.

The extract was developed by Dr. G. R. Whipple, head of the Medical School; F. S. Robscheit-Robbins, and C. H. Hegsted.

This latest liver extract is a brown-colored powder. It is prepared as follows:

"Fresh hog liver finely ground into water containing sodium hydrate acid is heated to 80-85 degrees centigrade and filtered. The filtrate is evaporated to a thick syrup and precipitated with 95 per cent alcohol. The portion insoluble in the latter is dried and finely ground. This is called the secondary anaemia fraction. It weighs but 5 per cent. of the original whole liver, yet contains 63 to 75 per cent. of the potency of the whole liver.

The new extract is palatable.

Babykillers Are Reported Captured

New York, Oct. 5.—Two of the seven prisoners taken in a roundup of Vincent Coll's gang, were identified tonight as having taken part in the Remsen baby kidnap.

Police refused to give out their names, or the names of the witness of the killing, who made the identification.

Vincent Coll, sought by the police in connection with the shooting of five children on the Upper East Side last summer, and two more recent crimes, was arrested today in a raid by Bronx detectives.

He was taken to a police station uptown, where he was questioned regarding the killing of Joseph Mullen "one day morning," and a bomb explosion—that night in a garage, injuring the owner of a truckload of beer.

In the Hudson child shooting, in which Coll had been named by detectives, one little boy was shot to death and four others wounded.

Coll, flashily dressed, had eluded the police for weeks, sporting a moustache an dyeing his blond hair black.

Shortly after his detention, other officers rounded up "Tuffy" Adina and five others in the Bronx. The police cars contained a dozen or more prisoners, including two other types, and many rounds of ammunition, seized with the prisoners.

Canadian Girls Like Japs, Says Jap Prof.

Montreal, Que. —(C.P.) — French Canadian girls love small and dark-haired look a great deal like the charming 'dansnets' of his own beautiful Fuji, declared Prof. Isao Nakanishi, of the Imperial University of Kyushu, Japan, who passed through Montreal recently. They only need kimonos to make the resemblance more complete, he said.

Professor Togo, who is doing research work at Harvard, is accompanied on his tour by Mrs. Nakanisa and Nakanishi, the latter having also been appointed to the post of assistant to the Japanese military attache at Washington.

The small houses in villages, their closeness to the ground and the purple of the landscape also reminded the visitors of their homeland, they said.

Potato Growers Ask For Relief

Toronto, Oct. 3—Collapse of potato prices brought growers from commercial-producing sections of Ontario into the city hall here today, yesterday, at which a committee of council, with Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Provincial Minister of Agriculture, and Hon. Peter Heenan, W. B. Somerset, chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric, presided at the meeting, the first presented the gathering of potato growers from Ontario. A plea for a publicising campaign was suggested as a remedy.

SEEK ROMAN REMAINS OF 'TIBERIUS' PERIOD

Naples, Italy, Oct. 5.—(By The Canadian Press)—The Italian Government has granted funds for carrying out excavations on the Island of Capri under the direction of Professor Maiuri, Superintendent of Excavations in the Campania. It is hoped to reveal and display, as far as possible, the ancient topography of the island, as it was in the Roman era. For many decades there have been buildings which lie buried and have only been partially excavated so far as are to be laid bare, the roads of access to them are to be made more practicable, and a general work of embellishment undertaken so that the ruins may be presented in a setting worthy of their past glory.

In the days of the Emperor Tiberius there were twelve palaces in the island, named after twelve gods and goddesses.

TARZAN OF THE APES, No. 48. (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The little expedition searching for Jane pushed their way slowly through the tangled jungle. Lieutenant d'Arnot was in the lead, a hundred yards in advance, evidently six black warriors arose before him. He gave a warning shout, but before he could draw his revolver he was dragged into the jungle.

Alarmed, the sailors came running to the scene. A volley of arrows fell among them. They answered with their rifles, shooting blindly at their concealed enemies. After a terrific hand-to-hand fight, leaving many dead on both sides, the natives fled, leaving Lieutenant d'Arnot with them to their village.

Arriving there at dusk, a great throng rushed out to meet them. Then began for the French officer a most terrifying experience. A man can encounter—the reception of a white prisoner by a village of African cannibals. They fell upon him, beating him with merciless blows, tearing his clothes away.

d'Arnot was bound securely to a great post. The women fetched pots and water; others built a row of fires. He watched them, half fainting with pain, but not daring to die cry out. The dance of death commenced to circle around the doomed officer, moving nearer and nearer.

He saw the bestial faces, daubed with color, the shining, naked bodies, the cruel spears. A spear, then another, touched him. He felt the hot trickling blood . . . He set his teeth . . . he would show them how hearts how an officer and a gentleman died . . . Suddenly they halted . . . as though turned to stone.

A FAIR WITH A HISTORY

Seventy-six fall fairs have passed at Roblin's Mills. Saturday witnessed the latest of the series of successes of the three quarters of a century which has gone the way of all time.

The exhibition has seen vicissitudes, it has seen its day of flourishing fairs and its day of slim fairs but it goes on. Its purpose is to keep and serve this district, one of the best in all the Bay of Quinte section.

Where the forefathers of the present generation hewed out their homes in this beauty spot of the peninsular county of Prince Edward, their descendants are true to their faith in agriculture as the basis of prosperity and to the other tenet of their faith in the destiny of this part of the country.

Saturday's event shows why these fairs possess abundant vitality. It is the loyalty to the best traditions which do not mean that change shall be adopted, but that the principle behind shall not be changed. The faith in Ameliasburgh is shown in the contests for the schools and it is shown in the close ties which bind the people of this county.

Though some fall fairs have been failing out, this fair does not lag. It possesses a human interest, its exhibits are high class though in some instances not large. But the fair goes on and in twenty-four years more, that is in the year 1955, the society will mark the centennial of the first exhibition. Few fairs are assured of the continued existence which seems guaranteed to this exhibition, because the district is behind it.

ROMANCE OF ROAD BUILDING

There is something of a romance in the new activity which has opened up in the north through the undertaking of relief work in the construction of the Trans-Canada highway. Those who are actually in need of work are now, some of them, getting it and at the same time a measure is thrown in which will color their labors in this north country.

Friendships will spring up among these men and the traditions of these days in camp will go ringing down the coming years.

It is a welcome surprise to the people to learn that the transients in the jungle of Toronto are practically all physically fit, more so than men at work in safe jobs at home. That is a healthy sign.

Some men are going to find themselves in this work. They will be under supervision which will develop them, increase their resourcefulness and make them more fit to cope with adverse conditions when they arise again.

The men realize that they are doing a man's job and will have the satisfaction of knowing that they are giving value for the money expended upon them and the work they are performing.

Though the work will be hard, the human body will adapt itself to it.

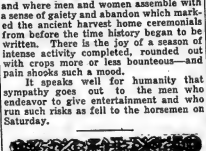
COMPENSATION

The loyalty of farmers to the spirit of agriculture was never more clearly demonstrated than on Saturday at Roblin's Mills at the annual exhibition with all the association of fine exhibits of former years while crops in some sections of the township were a large or a small annual. In addition some crops were so large that the demand for the produce was so light that much has to remain in the fields to be spoiled for want of a sufficient price to warrant harvesting. Both these conditions are discouraging to the producer but yet he cannot allow himself to be discouraged. He has faith that everything will work itself out well and that the pendulum will turn and agriculture be compensated in some measure.

SECOND IN GOLD

Canada's conquest of second place in the world's production of gold completes a prophecy or prediction of years' standing.

Though the question of the gold standard is harassing the brains of the people today who are really trying to understand this mystifying thing, gold production goes on apace. Out of the bowels of the earth in the Porcupine and Kirkland camps this yellow metal is being extracted which in previous ages gave birth to the conquest of new lands, set pirates and privateers buy upon the Spanish Main and in late months set Uncle Sam and the Frenchman hoarding up the sunny metal.



It seems a strange commentary that just about the time when the United States is hoarding up the greatest amount of gold ever assembled in one country, that that has lost its place as the second producer of the yellow metal.

PAIN'S JARRING NOTE

The track accident at Roblin's Mills fair when two horsemen were injured, the veteran Joe Vasseau of Belleville and Trenton and Stanley McMillan, of Trenton cast a shadow over the gaiety and the bustle of the exhibition. Where all had been pleasure the element of pain and suffering entered and all somehow felt the incident keenly.

Where everything is happiness, the entrance of pain or trouble seems a jarring note and the human makeup is quick to respond to the shock. A fair is a sort of harvest festival wherein the material results of the season's blessings are evident and where men and women assemble with a sense of gaiety and abandon which marked the ancient harvest home ceremonials from before the time history began to be written. There is the joy of a season of intense activity completed, rounded out with crops more or less bounteous—and pain shocks such a mood.

It speaks well for humanity that sympathy goes out to the men who endeavor to give entertainment and who run such risks as fell to the horsemen on Saturday.

A FLOWER SERMON
By Kathleen Leo

In the soft dusk before the night
The lilies gleam like flowers of light,
Reminding us that there may be
Some lovely thing in you for me.
And all the sweetness of the rose
The tender power of love foreshows,
Unselfish love that is content
With sympathy and yet is never spent,
Nor can its firmly-planted seed
Uprooted be by word or deed.
Dark pansies in a shady grot
Bid us have patience with our lot,
While marigolds tell us to bless
Our own small troubles with cheerfulness
Daisy and pink and pale sweet-pea
Alike enjoy humility;
Bright sunflowers in corners stand
Like golden angels hand in hand,
Calling on grateful hearts to raise
With them to heaven a psalm of praise
So if the flowers can preach or discern,
Grace from each flower we may learn.
—The Times, London

Mack Robertson's favorite story concerns a newspaper proprietor of a small town in the west who was working late one night with his assistant turning out the weekly edition by hand. A noise was heard outside the door opened and in slunk an escaped convict with his stripes advertising—only too plainly his status. "Be the love of God give me some clothes" said the convict. Some old clothes were forthcoming and the stripped ones disposed of. Departing the escaped convict was loud in his thanks, closing with a promise that when he got on his feet he would take out a life subscription to the paper. Some time went by and then the sheriff appeared asking if the convict had been seen. Yes, he had been seen. Which way did he go? That way, said the newspaper man, pointing south. Away went the sheriff hot on a cold trail. Said the assistant, "Why did you tell that sheriff the convict went south when he went north?" "Sh-sh," said the newspaperman, "I couldn't do away with a good subscriber like that, could I?" Mac's appreciation of this story is keener because of an incident which happened him recently. He sent a sample subscription to a paper on account of certain market news published in that paper. After he had received two papers publication of that particular market news was discontinued, and Mac wants to know if that is any way to treat an old subscriber.

ALL MORONS MAY BE WHISTLERS but all whistlers are not morons, notwithstanding the pronouncement of Professor Charles Gray Shaw of the New York University, author of "The Road To Culture." "There may be all sorts of tests for low mentality, but most of us shun them," he says. "A sure sign of the thing that psychologists are after, is found in the act of whistling." Oh Yeah! We have been informed on good authority that Einstein whistles, Edison goes to the movies and whistles when he feels like it. and Bernard Shaw is not above whistling occasionally if the spirit so moves him. Napoleon, it is said, whistled a tune on the eve of every big battle, presumably "We won't go home till morning" and even Shakespeare had something kind to say of the man with music in his soul. If these people are morons let's all join the whistlers.

"BIRTH OF A NATION", accompanied by a musical score, has been superseded by the modern version in which talk predominates. This first great spectacular feature film which made such a sensation on the silent screen, has left a pleasant memory in the minds of those who saw it and were thrilled at its music and historical events which made a nation. Birth of a Nation, modernized, will be awaited with interest, but it is safe to say that it will not give the thrills the original version did.

FOR KING

When a king buys a motor car he sometimes orders six of them at a time. At least that is true of the king of Yugoslavia. And there are so many special fittings and so many extra equipment that each car practically is "tailor made". The Packard Motor Co. just has completed six cars for King Alexander I. One of the new cars will have a large cabinet built into the rear of the front seat. A compartment of this cabinet will accommodate a big luncheon kit with a complete portable service. Another compartment will be built for the king's sword. One car will be used for hunting. This will contain complete hunting equipment, including racks for guns. Each car carries a special traffic light with red and green lenses, which, when lighted gives warning to traffic officers so that the right of way is given immediately. Gasoline tanks of 40 gallons capacity have been installed on these cars.—Wall Street Journal.

WHAT MAY HAPPEN

Consider what strange things may follow when this pronouncement gets around: "Mr. Hoover, especially the one who hitherto has said, 'Give me a man who sticks and I will do the work.'" And let the foreman catch some hapless wight emitting the tunes of "Sitting Pretty Comes Over the Mountains," "The Whistler and His Dog," "Home Sweet Home" or with no other instrument than his lips "Yankee Doodle Boy" and Benjamin Franklin say—with slightly altered meaning—"Alas, poor fellow, you have paid too dearly for your whistle."

Nor will any lassie say again in Burns's verse, "Oh, whistle and I'll come to you, my lad," after the dictum gets abroad. Not long ago Dr. Bain declared American men should have more individuality. Yet whistling is one of the few arts in which a mere man can give vent to his individuality — as witness how impossible it is to tell who is who by whistle the same tune with the same notes.

Has it ever occurred to the Professor of philosophy that men may whistle other people's airs, thus signifying their conceal a sense of inferiority, and frustration? Has it ever occurred to many occasions when men whistle when they address the fair sex they are having risen above their cares. Admittedly we are not certain about the kind of whistling which betrays nervous self-consciousness. But he may set that down to the whistle of Wilbye called "content", which "whistles a thought to anie muse's strain."

Yes, wherever there are men today who can whistle in the face of adversity, in the loneliest powder-post damp their lifelike tones. Let them even yodel if they want to!—C. S. Monitor.

BRITAIN'S UNITED FRONT

A new form of political united front has been created after Premier Ministre MacDonald just now, preparatory to going into a general election. The new front is to ask the voters to give the National Government a free hand for action. The argument will be, apparently, that the National Government has now completed the specific task for which it was called into being. But many pieces of additional work remain to be done within the next few months. To tell the electorate precisely what these are is at present impossible—besides being politically indiscreet. Every week may bring its particular problem. Not a few will pass without yielding more than a sufficient evil. The wise thing, therefore, appears to be to ask from which the National Government is expected to make upon the voters a to give a general grant of power, indefinite but yet broad enough to cover every possible contingency. Behind this imposing facade of a National Government without a party flavor it seems to be expected that Conservatives, and Liberals and a remnant of the Labor party can enounce themselves while waiting in the future to decide their ultimate destination. Such an electoral scheme, it must be confessed, has very much the lasting financial subscriptions to a "blind pool". —New York Times.

THE PRINCIPLE IS SOUND

At a public meeting which took steps to organize for the raising and dispensing of a relief fund in the city, Rev. E. O. Thompson made a incidental suggestion which is deserving o fattention at some opportune time. He said:

"I favor a 'community chest,' not for this year but future years, so that contributions may be received into and administered from one central fund. This plan is in use where all organizations get together for a great common need, at the present time".

The 'community chest' plan of financing welfare work generally, as distinct from emergency situations is growing in favor with Ontario cities. It seems evident that the relief funds which are being collected in the first place was the large number of campaigns and 'drives' put on, especially in the larger cities. Citizens, and especially business men were called upon so often on behalf of deserving philanthropies that they are in a poor how to respond, not knowing how close might be the next appeal. London organized the United Welfare Campaign, the projected goal to be on one single citizable organizations, of whose finances and work the central body had knowledge. Each organization submitted its needs, and the totals, as nearly as possible, met the objective. If the latter were not reached, the subscribers had to be called on accordingly. At the same time, subscribers had the privilege of allocating all or any part of their contributions to the favored charity, such as the Aged People's Home, Children's Aid or as the case might be.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

A number of the rioters and several police were injured and upwards of 100 arrest were made.

$100,000 Flood in
N. Y.'s Gold District

Peterboro, Oct. 5.—The City and County of Peterboro have completed arrangements for the handling of 75,000 to 100,000 people who it is expected will attend the International plowing match to be held Oct. 13-16.

An ideal location has been obtained for the match on five farms located four miles west of Peterboro on the main highway. The City Engineer's staff has mapped out the territory and allocated space for every purpose. This includes the selection of the soil for the different plowing matches, the location of tents for the large number of exhibits of farm machinery that have become an important feature of these contests, the administration and press tents, the parking of cars, and even a hospital tent in case the services of a medical doctor should be required.

Co-extensive are the exhibits. It is necessary that 10,000 gallons of water a day shall be available on the grounds. Pipes have been laid for more than a mile and a quarter to furnish the needed supply from a suitable source.

Prizes Included

The prize list this year will be the most attractive ever offered. It will include a number of new classes as well as numerous prizes for youthful competitors. The new events include four events in stubble-plowing. The first is open to any type of tractor except high-cut. This is open only to those who have never won a first or second prize in this class at an International plowing match. A similar event is open only to those who have never plowed at an international plowing match. A third new event is for two-furrow walking or riding plows. Another for not less than four-furrow tractor class open only to those who have never won a prize at an International plowing match.

The new events in the sod class include one for junior plowers, with a share of not less than eight inches, and with no wheels or shoe; one for a two-furrow walking or riding plow, with not less than 12 inches cuts; and a tractor event, open to those who have never won a prize at an International plowing match; and a special tractor class for Ferguson plows.

Additional Prizes

This year public interest is being taken in the competitions for the finest lawns and gardens. The sum of $600 is being offered in prizes for the best lawns, the holding of a special match, open only to the residents of Peterboro, the contest to be held on Tuesday, Oct. 13, and will include 13 events.

APPLE BLOSSOM TIME

Kingston, Oct. 5 (CP)—It may be October but it doesn't mean anything to the apple trees on Wolfe Island in the St. Lawrence River. They are all in blossom there and just to prove it Dr. William Spankie, M.P. for Frontenac-Addington came to Kingston with a branch studded with a spray of blossom in his button hole.

West Orange, N.J., Oct. 5.—Flickering steadily lower like the pulse of some time-worn dynamo, the vital current of Thomas A. Edison's life continued to grow weaker today.

2,500 STUDENTS JOIN IN PARADE

Open-air Demonstration Climax to Mission Crusade Meetings

Toronto, Oct. 3.—As the crowning event in a three-day convention of the Canadian Catholic Students' Mission Crusade, 2,500 students in local Catholic grade and high schools participated in a demonstration on the front campus of St. Michael's College yesterday afternoon.

A score of church dignitaries took part in the open-air service, Archbishop Mosteil and Father Lelia, national director for the propaganda of the faith, among them.

Meeting in the grounds of St. Joseph's Convent, the scholars marched up Queen's Park to St. Joseph Street and thence to the college grounds. All ages were included, from first-grade to college seniors. The grade school girls were all attired in white, while the co-eds from St. Joseph's wore academic gowns.

In all, 67 schools were represented, from Toronto and surrounding municipalities, with two bugle bands, from De La Salle and St. Mary's.

Entering St. Michael's College grounds, the younger children massed about the platform which had been erected for the occasion, with the older students collecting in the rear.

The brief service opened with an introduction by Fr. Bellile, superior of St. Michael's College. His Grace Archbishop McNeil read a letter to the congregated students.

Father Lelia, the speaker of the day, dwelt on the present need for attention to the purposes of the organization, particularly as to foreign missionary effort. He pictured the unfortunate position of the natives of un-Christian countries, who had no opportunity of learning of Christ except through the activities of such organizations as that which he was addressing.

On the platform there were, as well Bishop McDonald of Victoria, B.C., and Dr. Curran, head of the Halifax Seminary, welcoming the procession. The closing benediction was said by Archbishop McNeil, assisted by Father Thomson, director of the organization at St. Michael's.

MOTORCYCLE IS DESTROYED

Driver Extracted As Machine Burns Later Collision

Saturday afternoon about one-thirty o'clock a collision occurred between a car and a motorcycle at the intersection of Bridge and Church Streets, Bruce May, 219 Charles Street, riding his motorcycle, with Kenneth Munning, 130 McDonald Avenue, as behind, was going west on East Bridge Street. Wm. Simmons, 39 Station Street, in his car, was coming east on Bridge Street and in turning north into Church Street, his car and the motorcycle came into contact. The motorcycle was broken apart and commenced to burn. The fire department quickly appeared on the scene and with little trouble extinguished the blazing motor cycle. Young May had a narrow escape as the motorcycle caught fire. He was caught in the wreckage of the machine and was unable to extricate himself, Munnings who was also under the machine managed to get free and pulled Bruce out of the way of the fire. Bruce suffered a bad gash in the leg and his back was painfully bruised.

The car in turning off Bridge Street to enter upon Church street mailed for an eastbound car to pass and started across, evidently not seeing the motorcycle which was following the car.

The motorcycle was a total wreck.

The Simmons car was slightly damaged. Constable Lazard investigated.

No Ice, No Fog, Just Haze on North Route

Captain Mowat Brings 277,000 Bushels of Wheat to England

RADIO USEFUL

By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 5.—(CP)—Captain Mowat had an air of quiet satisfaction about him when he was encountered on the bridge of the steamer Parnworth today. The Parnworth arrived in London docks yesterday at the conclusion of a history-making voyage of 16 days from Churchill, Canada's newest seaport on the shores of Hudson's Bay. Bringing a cargo of 277,000 bushels of grain over the new Hudson's Bay northern route, which cuts one thousand miles off the journey from the prairies to Britain.

In the Captain's view it was a most matter-of-fact achievement to navigate from Churchill through the Hudson's straits. The spare-looking skipper could find very few remarks to make about the voyage simply because it had been like so many others he had made.

"Oh, there was no ice at all to bother anyone," he told the Canadian Press.

"Was there any fog?"

"Well, we will call it a haze, but it was nothing to worry over," the Captain replied. "In fact I was surprised to find how easy things were. Everything possible had been done for us in advance and the wireless gave us wonderful assistance. Without it we might have encountered some difficulties.

"Churchill is already well fitted with what ships like this need," Captain Mowat said. "The berthing is capital there already and I see no reason whatever why this port should not be an excellent business proposition. Of course this will be my only trip on this route in the present season.

Another steamer is now outward bound from Churchill with another cargo of grain, to an undisclosed destination.

A large company of people interested in the great Canadian enterprise made the journey to Victoria docks today to congratulate the skipper and express their good wishes to Canada.

MOTORS CRASH NEAR STIRLING

Mrs. Foster Suffers From Shock in Sunday Night Crash

A collision between two cars occurred Sunday evening about seven o'clock on the highway about two miles south of Stirling. The cars involved were those of Mr. Phoebe Wilson of Smithfield who was travelling south and Mr. William Foster of Delcro who was going north. The left front wheel on the Foster car was badly smashed and the car went into the ditch, but did not overturn. It was later towed to Bailey's garage at Stirling. The Wilson car was not so severely damaged and was able to proceed under its own power. Mrs. Foster, who was with her husband, suffered some from shock, other than this no one was injured. The matter of damages, it is understood, was amicably arranged between the two parties. Provincial Constable Prink investigated the accident.

When the Canadian dollar approximates par, of course, the funds will be transferred to the States.

Advertising Agency Opens In Toronto

Vickers & Benson Reg'd Expands Organization To The Queen City

In times like these, when fears for the future too frequently cause unnecessary retrenchments, it is a matter of interest to note that one of Montreal's most progressive advertising agencies, Vickers & Benson Reg'd., Keefer Building, have opened a Toronto office with the view of further servicing the interests of their clients in the Ontario Field.

Mr. A. H. MacLauchlan, who is well known to the advertising fraternity, has been appointed manager of the Toronto Office, which is situated in the Keford Building, 217 Bay Street.

It is a tribute to the aggressiveness of this organization that expansion should be undertaken at this time when the general feeling of timidity is retarding the return of prosperity. It proves however, that there is still confidence in Canada's ability to return to normal conditions.

An Agony from Sheer Weakness

Mrs. Spurgeon Dawson Brady believes she would not be here today if she had not taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (tonic)

"When my children were small," writes Mrs. Spurgeon Dawson, Wolverton, Ont., "I was so weak and run down I could not walk across the floor without fainting. Even the slightest exertion was too much. Days were spent in agony from sheer weakness, and nights were made fearful through sleepless hours.

"I seemed so ill nothing whatever would help me . . . Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were recommended, and after taking twelve boxes I found strength returning and my stomach able to handle food again. I had not known what a meal was for months."

"Found Strength Returning"

What would you give to be able to cast aside your weakness and substitute vigorous physical strength? That is exactly what many men and women have been enabled to do by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (tonic).

The iron and other elements in these pills increase the amount of haemoglobin or oxygen-carrying agent in the blood. The increased supply of oxygen kindles life in all your tissues just as a draft of fresh air kindles a fire. The result is a better appetite, a feeling of well-being, restful sleep, and ability to do your work happily.

Get a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Take them faithfully. Don't look for immediate results. Sometimes the beneficial results come almost at once —but not always. Give this tonic a fair trial and you will be rewarded—just as other Canadian men and women have been rewarded. 50 cents a package. 22

by

"He was shot just outside the line, sir," a corporal announced. "We heard two shots almost together, then somebody cursed in Spanish and this bird came running into us screaming. One shot got him. He's just about gone."

Mount looked closely at the man. He held the lamp nearer and a bitter curse rolled in his throat. "It's Antonio, by God! Pat him in that chair. Get some brandy." He raised a fullish hand and, "My God," he said helplessly. Roughly he shook the inert form.

"Who is El Coyote?"

The Mexican's staring eyes opened and turned in terror toward the light. A rasping cough rounded in his throat. Desperately the major said to Morales: "Ask him in Spanish. Quick. The man is dying."

The Spaniard's face glowed with a dark furr. He glared at the Mexican. "Quien es El Coyote?", he hissed. "Digame, pronto, quien es?"

Slowly the Mexican's head moved, his lips opened and his eyes roved to the glass and drained it. "By God," he cried savagely, and flung the glass to the ground. "No El Coyote gets him right out of my camp. Under my very eyes, surrounded by a squadron of cavalry." Brutally he laughed. "What will be fool enough to play traitor to El Coyote now?" Then slowly, very slowly, the major pulled himself erect. For the moment all hope had died.

"Gentlemen," he said dully, "I invited you upon an empty errand. My apologies."

He looked toward the dead Mexican, where the lamplight, as if in high merriment, flickered now across those eternally silenced lips.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Don Bob leaned across the table, his eyes, thoughtful and moody, fixed on the crumpled figure of the Mexican.

"A minute more," he said half aloud. "A minute more and we might have learned so much." Lightly he touched the major's shoulder, then he reached for his hat. "Come," he said to Sandilla, and abruptly left the tent.

Under cover of a sergeant they galloped out over the desert. As they reached the car Bob said, to Sandilla's surprise, "You drive," and climbed heavily in.

Mechanically Ted took the wheel while his mind raced back to the unexpected tragedy of that past hour. Once more he seemed to hear those two hurried, spiteful shots in the darkness, and saw the look of fear and horror that grew on the face of the Mexican. And for the first time it came to him how desperately a game was being played. Almost under his eyes.

"El Coyote must have surrounded the camp," Ted said at last. "The bandits must have seen us pass. And they were waiting for him outside the circle of cavalry."

Bob stirred uneasily. Ted felt the weight of the man's body against his own shoulder and saw Bob's head droop forward.

For a time they drove on through the night. Then, uneasy at the long silence, Ted asked, "Tired, Bob?"

No answer. The weight of the older man seemed heavier, and as again Ted looked down Bob's head swayed limply forward with a little sigh. Alarmed, on the brake Ted took the man's shoulders in his arms and raised him. The face was dead-white, but in a minute the grey eyes opened and the lips moved.

Very faintly Ted heard the words, "Punctured in the side. Take me to the ranch." Again the eyes flickered. "Sorry," he whispered and fainted.

For a brief moment in the silence of the starlit desert Ted sat very still while one by one past memories crowded in on him, until at last they had formed themselves into an inescapable pattern. With the suddenness of a lightning bolt the truth burst. El Coyote!

Curiously, as if he were looking upon a stranger, Ted gazed down at this man who sat so quietly beside him. He felt his own heart pounding and a dull throbbing in his brain. El Coyote! The man all the border was seeking, the killer with a price upon his head. This man so loved and hated, praised and condemned, sat helpless beside him, and suddenly Ted realized that bandit and killer, this man was the nearest friend he had in the world.

Very gently Ted started the car, then wrapped one huge arm about the limp figure. On that side the man's clothes were already wet with blood. Rapidly Ted sped through the night. Once he looked at his watch—a little after ten. There would be no one at the ranchhouse. The servants would be in their own quarters. Once the car struck a rut in the road, and the man groaned. Ted drove more cautiously, slowing down almost to a stop where the road was broken.

Once on the state highway, Ted shot the car at a mad pace down the road. Mile posts flashed by. The lights of Verdi loomed up to the west, and skirting the town, Ted tore on to the ranch. The lights were down, and driving up to the house he stopped and switched off the lights. Raising the stricken man in his arms, Ted ran up the steps, pausing once to listen, but conscious only of the beating of his own heart. The sandals had already gone.

Inside, with hasty, unaccustomed fingers, he cut away the coat and blood-stained shirt. The wound was no longer bleeding. The heart still beat, but very feebly. In desperation Ted looked about the room. A first-aid kit he remembered, was in the medicine chest, and in a short time he had sterilized the dark jagged wound and fashioned heavy bandages over it. He poured a little whisky between the man's lips, then waited, feeling horribly alone, terribly in need of aid.

As he stood there a faint flush came to Bob's cheeks and for an instant he opened his eyes, then closed them.

Stooping forward, Ted caught the words. "You can trust the cook. And tell Ann—Ann at Mendom's. But no doctor—remember, no doctor. You know why." Then again his face paled. Consciousness had left him.

Ted pulled a chair to the bedside. There was nothing to do but wait—and hope. Slowly the minutes of midnight ticked by, and the early hours of morning. Ever his eyes turned to the still form that breath by so slowly beneath the covers. More than once, like some physical chill it came over him how lonely alone was this man whose hand had been raised against the entrenched scheme of things. This man, he found himself thinking, had doomed himself to the lone fight. He could turn nowhere. He could rely on no one. This man who held the border in terror, this last outpost against the dominion of the strong, now lay helpless, suffering—perhaps done. And in all the borderland he could look where for aid.

Before dawn Bob's face was burning. Quickly the fever mounted and he tossed restlessly, throwing the light blanket from the bed. Waiting Ted tried to soothe him, an hour later he lay in delirium, his voice rambling in a low monotone. Once Ted laid his hand on the man's hot forehead, and Bob's eyes flashed open.

"Tell Ann," he repeated.

In desperation Ted cursed. Running to the servants' quarters, he tapped on the door of Bob's old cook. She came, grumbling and sleepy, to the entrance.

"Your master," he whispered, "is wounded. No one must know. I go for help. Stay with him. Keep him in bed. You understand?"

The old woman crossed herself. "Si."

In two minutes she was shuffling up the steps to Bob's room and had replaced the blanket thrown on the floor.

With a wrinkled hand she gently touched him. "Mother of God how hot he is! Get help quickly, senor. Help, for the love of God!"

But Ted was already gone.

Mendoza's was not its height. Even from far off the blaze of lights blurred the horizon, and as Ted drew up he heard a roar of applause from within and the tinkle of many glasses. Men's voices shouted a name he could not catch but as he stepped within all noise had stilled.

A sudden hush had fallen on the crowded tables stood pottos-like peccant hush. The waiters about in the smoke-filled room. All faces were turned toward the center of the patio where, in a ring of slowly changing lights, a girl was singing. Ted walked quickly to the nearest waiter.

"Where will I find Ann Reed?" The man nodded to the patio. "It is she who sings, senor."

Slowly Ted drew closer. Just outside the light he stopped and watched the face moved indolently in that circle of light, knowing her—as he be the master of all their moods, feeling the power of her wizardry. The young, fresh voice seemed to come effortlessly from her throat. A low rejoicing voice, in strange contrast with the veiled sadness of her eyes. She held those quiet, alienlike faces in a spell.

And when at last she stopped a tempest of bravos and applause shook the long, low room. She smiled and had turned toward the door when Ted reached her side.

"Senorita," he began.

The great black eyes looked up at him. "Yes?"

"I am Ted Radcliffe, the friend of Don Bob. It is important I talk with you now—at once."

Beneath the rouge her face went white, and with a little beckoning gesture he hurried down the hall.

On the stairs she turned toward him. "Tell me. He is hurt?"

"He is wounded. He wants you."

"Badly wounded?"

"Badly."

She choked back a sob. "Wait at the door. I won't change. I'll take some things along."

Within a minute she had returned, and in even less time they were in the car, leaving behind them a bitterly distracted Mendoza, who tore his black hair and called down curses on all undependable cantaneras.

Throughout that ride the girl sat quite still, her hands folded lightly in her lap, her face tense and drawn.

At Bob's door Ted raised his hand for silence. He looked in, and seeing no change in the white, drawn face among the pillows, motioned the girl to enter. "I'll be out here if you need me," he told her.

She nodded gratefully. "I want to be a little while with him alone."

The door closed silently.

MOST ANCIENT CHURCH OPEN

St. Paul's in Halifax Has Been Undergoing Renovation

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 5.—(By The Canadian Press)—St. Paul's, mother of the Church of England in Canada and the oldest Protestant edifice in the Dominion, was reopened last Sunday after eight weeks during which it had been undergoing repairs. The congregation returned to find the entire interior renovated. Floors that had been trod for 161 years were grained; tiled beams and concrete were there in place of the old structure; walls were redecorated in grey, woodwork in French Ivory, ceilings with a light grey colour and the chancel in a warm shade of buff. There was a new and more modern atmosphere under the weather-beaten cloak of pine and oak.

In the large congregation who assembled for service on Sunday were Lieutenant-Governor Frank Stanfield and Mrs. Stanfield, Brigadier Constantine, Officer Commanding Military District No. 6, and Mrs. Constantine.

The church was erected on the Parade in 1750, by His Majesty King George the Second, who, in the deed of endowment dated the fourth of January 1760, is called "the royal founder."

Material for the building, consisting of pine and oak, was brought from Boston, Mass., then a part of the British dominions, and the church was built at the expense of the Crown by grants from His Majesty for that purpose and also by money granted to His Majesty in this province for use of the government.

The pine and oak, when the outside covering was removed in recent years, was found to be in as good condition as when placed there nearly two centuries ago. The storms of winter during that long period had beaten upon it but had not affected it. The additions of later years had, however, shown signs of decay and required renewal which was done in 1926.

Within the walls of St. Paul's, the greatest civil and military heroes worshipped and some of them lie beneath the floor of the church precincts. Beneath the church are twenty vaults in which are interred Lieut.-Governor Lawrence, 1760; Captain Evans of the Charlestown, 1781; Baron Knipshausen, a general in the British service, 1796; Baron de Seitz, a Hessian officer, 1782; Lord Charles Greville Montagu, a son of the Duke of Manchester, Governor Parr, 1791; Sir John Wentworth, Chief Justice Finucane, 1805; Hon. Richard J. Uniacke 1830; Bishop Charles Inglis, 1816, and other distinguished persons.

A debt of $3, incurred by Napoleon Bonaparte at the time when he was a young artillery officer, is now considered paid.

CANNED MUSIC FOR HOOVER

No Brass Bands Greet President at World Series

(By The Associated Press)

New burning, but no brass band greets President Hoover when he enters Shibe Park for the World Series. "Canned music," from an Orthophonic machine over a loud speaker system is used.

The incident took the burning which customarily grages officials' bone this year. The presidential box marks the initial appearance of the new cloth.

George Simon, Philadelphia semi-pro ball player, in his ball suit unabashed the 1,153 persons who visit the bleacher gate until the $1 tickets went on sale at 1:00 o'clock. The ball club in which he belongs lost $1 apiece for the 1,153 and that Calhoun would stay at his post.

John Lester Martin, the pepper boy, held the spotlight again after his chatter in the second game.

Stealing third against George Earnshaw in the fifth inning, he crossed itself," he told interviewers on his sighting here.

He had to "just leave to play baseball." Maybe that's why he is so grateful for the pieces on the paths has the old-timers talk-for about the return of "baseball like I played it."

SAYS HOLD-UP WAS A HOAX

Man Reports Attack By Bandit—Faces Vagrancy Charge

Toronto, Oct. 5.—Breaking down after a number of questions had indicated that certain of his statements appeared inconsistent, Alex Donohue, 39, of no fixed address, was arrested by Scarboro police late Saturday night on a nominal charge of vagrancy following his confession that he hadn't been robbed as first reported, by an armed bandit at Kennedy Road and Danforth Road. He previously told police that he had been robbed of $42.

According to police, the man walked into Number 9 station earlier in the evening and reported that he had been held up while looking for a house to rent. He was taken to detective headquarters and Detective-Sergeants Frank Cross and Frank Bruce were assigned to the case to work with Sergeant Tom Draycott of Scarboro police.

The investigating party took him back to the alleged scene of the hold-up and he then told police, they state, that a man with a gun appeared in a ravine near there, down a hole in the ground.

He had told police the police that it was quite dark at the time of the hold-up but was able to lead them over to the ravine and showed them a small but made of boughs bent over.

Back at Scarboro police station he was asked how much money he had in his pocket and replied that he had $6. Sergeant Draycott declared. Sergeant Draycott asked him to take out his pocket and bring two five dollar bills, asked to look at it. Looking into the purse, Sergeant Draycott declared that he found more than $10. After further questioning he admitted that his story was a hoax.

NO BLAME IN HENRY GOV'T

Liberals Refuse to Blame Tories For Depression

Oshawa, Ont., Oct. 5 (CP).—Two prominent Liberals refused to criticise the Conservative Provincial government for the present depression at a meeting here Saturday W. J. Bindley, K.C., house leader of the party, and W. J. Moore, Liberal M.P., for the riding of Ontario, both declined to lay the blame on the other party for the present state of affairs.

The meeting was called to protest at the relief treatment given Oshawa by Federal and Provincial governments. It was held by a majority of those present to be inadequate but Mayor Marks announced that the city would receive a larger grant than it received recently approved. He was unable to say how large the grant would be.

Liberals Organize To Support MacDonald

London, Oct. 5—Premier Ramsay MacDonald is expected to announce the dissolution of Parliament Thursday or Wednesday and a general election to take place before the end of this month.

This was the understood over the week end is for the National Government to seek a nationwide vote of confidence and the election of its supporters to the House of Commons on a platform of broad powers to the Prime Minister to meet the present emergencies.

This "doctor's mandate," as Mr. MacDonald has said to have termed it, if approved, might shortly find Great Britain in the point of an impossibility of revenue and protective tariffs against imports.

With the formation of the Parliament almost reached, the general political situation remained still vague and obscure.

Beauvais, France, Oct. 5 (AP)—Armloads of flowers gathered from Normandy hillsides were carried by French aviators to the largest tomb in the fields at Allonne where the great dirigible R-101 crashed in flames a year ago last night.

The British ship carried to death almost 50 persons including the Air Minister, Lord Thomson.

A service was held in the field but the chief commemoration service will be held today at the Beauvais cathedral.

BRINGING UP FATHER, By George McManus

ADAMS WILL BE AT THIRD IN 3RD GAME

Spark Plug of Cards' Infield Ready For Play

GROVE AND GRIMES

Selected By Rival Managers as Hurlers For Duel Today

By Edward J. Neil, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 5.—Champions of the world, the Philadelphia Athletics arrayed themselves in their own stronghold at Shibe Park today to repel the attack of the St. Louis Cardinals in the fifth game of the World Series.

Without advantage after the first pair of skirmishes in St. Louis—victorious in the opening game, subdued in the second—the Athletics tore into the first three games on the eastern front determined to sweep the engagements here and prevent adjournment to the series to St. Louis again for final decision in a sixth, and if necessary seventh game.

Adams Back

Saved from the prospect the experts painted for them—defeat in four straight games—by the brilliant pitching of "Wild Bill" Hallahan, the young shooting and reckless base running of young Pepper Martin—the Cardinals summoned increased strength will return to third base as "Spark-plug" Adams, who missed his key hit with out of the opening series inability.

Every indication today was that a capacity crowd of 32,500, among their number the champions' lucky mascot of the Athletics, President Hoover, was assured to see the pitchers battle that was a bold over from the 1930 World Series, in which the A's won their second straight world championship. In five games, two of them world series contests in 1929 and 1930, the chief executive has never seen the Athletics beaten.

Grove Starts

Robert Moses Grove, the lanky lefty, who warded off twelve Cardinal base hits in the opening game to beat the giant rookie, Paul Derringer, 4 to 3, was the public choice in the face of Connie Mack's proverbial reticence to name his starting Grimes, veteran spitballer, in a game that might well mark the turning point in the series.

Grove bested Grimes last Fall, although the Cardinal veteran held out only five hits, and despite a tender finger on his pitching hand that was eager to battle the pugnacious spitballer again for the honor that would give the victors both a psychological and numerical edge in the series. If Grimes is selected to hold Grove for the healing rest of another day George Watkins, beaten by Hallahan and the sensational Pepper Martin too, in the second contest, was favored to tangle with Grimes. George, too, holds a .500 series victory over the Cardinal right-hander. Rube Walberg, southpaw, was Mack's third pitching choice.

"They're Tough"

It seemed today as though the Cardinals, spurred around the bases by single-handed offensive of Martin, the fleet centerfielder, who is hitting over .700 and playing inspired baseball, has the best chance of any National League club in five years to overcome the domination of the American League champions.

"They're very tough," said the 68 year old Mack, "but I don't believe so tougher than I expected. I wouldn't be surprised if we lose and go to St. Louis again and to a seventh game if we are to win out."

Echoing Mack's forebodings, baseball supporters of the Athletics were willing to wager on the ability of Martin's team-mates, shaken out of their lethargy by Martin and the youngster's remarkable play, coming to life to play the kind of ball that pumped the field in the National League season so thoroughly as to the Athletics' concern the opposition in the American circuit. If only a large part of that should happen, the A's would be desperately put to beat off the Red Bird charge in such a short span as the five remaining games of the series.

If Grimes did not get the call from Bill Terry, who has confidently adopted Connie Mack's strategy of starting his best left handing pitchers, the second choice seemed to be lanky Sylvester Johnson, right-handed relief pitcher, who has done so well for two years throughout the season. Paul Derringer, the huge rookie right hander, who was in after two superb innings in the first game, was not considered a possibility, as the local surgeons lanced a small abscess in his pitching finger.

The blase attitude of the Philadelphia faithful after the Athletics' opening contest has been dissipated by the stubborn Cardinal opposition in the second game—one of the most thrilling and spectacular contest in World Series history.

Seamers Best

Scalpers sold what few tickets they could gather for $15 apiece the day and avidly sought others from anyone willing to part with a paper dollar receipt for an original $5.50 investment... Hundreds waited over night in line for a $1.00 reserved days at 9 a.m. (E.S.T.) for the sale of "rush" seats in the bleachers. The head man in that line was the proud possessor of an athletic shoe that wagered $1.20 against $200 with a rival club. And it could buy two first class ticket lusted. He had been there since last Tuesday night. He brighten the batting eyes of Koch cleaters as Al Simmons, Jimmy Foxx, Mickey Cochrane, Jimmy Dykes, Mule Haas, Dib Williams, and the rest of Connie Mack's ball team through a stiff two-hour batting and fielding drill yesterday in preparation for the sanctity of the city. Almost as soon as Oab-Burst Grove and the Cardinals unpacked shortly before noon after their night ride from St. Louis, he raced them out on to the ball field for the same sort of practice.

Unkind observers suggested that some sort of mental drill might be worth while, too, for the physical calisthenics. Pointing that over the head pitch of Williams, they have been far more than the normal number of line drive hopes.

The probable lineups:

Adams, 3rd;	Haas, 3rd;
Bottomley, 1st;	Hafey, 1.f.;

MANY FIGHTS ARE STAGED

Topnotchers in Respective Classes Go Into Action This Week

New York, N.Y., Oct. 5.—Out of the far west this week comes another of those 10-round fistic battles that always turned on the 147-pound crown of the lightweight division, with San Francisco Negro.

Tod Morgan, Townsend of Vancouver, home town of that other hard punching welterweight, Jimmy McLarnin, will make his first ring appearance and will be made in Madison Square Garden next night against the slugging Pole, Eddie San. This is the first of a number of bouts on the semi-final to the heavyweight struggle between Big Schyrs of Dayton, O., and Jimmy Braddock of Jersey City.

Thompson himself will swing into action during the week, meeting Tom Heeney, N.Z., Pitt., Pa., in a 10-round bout with Phil Scott, Fulpino, at Oakland, Calif., Wednesday night. Another fair welterm feature will pit kid Francis, Italian featherweight, against Chalky Varner of Zakersfield, at San Francisco tomorrow.

Among the heavier boys, Charley Retzlaff, Duluth heavyweight, will meet Ernest Rocco, Kliever City, Pa., at Duluth tomorrow night and Jackie Fields of Los Angeles, former welterweight champion, will match mitts with Kling Tod, Milwaukee, at Detroit Thursday.

JELLICOE IMPROVES

London, Oct. (C.P. Cable) — A bulletin issued from Ventnor, the home of Admiral of the Fleet Lord Jellicoe, last night stated that his strength is well maintained and the pneumonia is subsiding. There is evidence of intestinal catarrh, however, which is delaying his progress. Lord Jellicoe was taken ill shortly after his return from Canada two weeks ago.

Current Sport

By The Observer

Coach Ehlers is making it tough for the rest of the teams in both the senior and junior intermediate groups. His senior and junior squads have emerged from the Tuesday game and what a fine shellacking they gave the western school. The seniors won by a score of 31 to 0 and the juniors were not to be outdone but eventually won by a 13 to 0 count. It looks like a good season for the junior and senior teams and the coach will have lots of time to prepare the boys for the playoffs, when he doesn't have to worry about winning the league title. Coach Ehlers has had wonderful success with his rugby and hockey teams and the boys enjoy playing under him. He knows the game and can impart his knowledge to the players.

Oh, oh, did you see what the St. George's did to the Queen's Park cricket club on Saturday in the Scotch town. It was a week end game and the score for the third game on Wednesday will be a big one. It was a real stirring along with the Scotch and Irish players and it looks like Willie Kress against Earl Cook, the Streetsville pensmaster and Leafs are after Yarnall and Cook of St. George's. That's what makes rugby why they don't go after a real ball in the game. Bradden's caliber for Gait. He is a ball player in every sense of the word. Probably the "Tiny Town" boys get a piece of their change back on Saturday.

The World Series will be resumed in Philadelphia today with both teams even with one win victory each. The Cards are on their home grounds for the second and this crazy old baseball game is the one that breaks be missed last year and the A's did not seem to be hitting with their usual pace but like a fever will start to slap the apple in their own back yard. It was a fine game to witness most today about Paul Derringer. He had an opportunity for a shoom on his nose but Gabby Street stated he will be used again in the series. The Cards will likely win one game in Philadelphia and will be back home to finish the contests.

It won't be long now before the Leafs will be in their winter grinds hoof. The Arena will open some time about the middle of November and from then till April the boys will have a place to go. We hear that the junior and senior teams will be moved up a place and no changes. Already discussed in league circles by which groups the teams will play in and it is rumored that the Leafs handed out last winter. The management of the O.H.A. would like the O.H.A. to grow and have a Toronto team with Belleville, Oshawa and Kingston to fill the holes left by the Leafs graveyard. Belleville is a good hockey centre in the eastern part of Ontario. The annual meeting will be held in November and then we shall see and hear a few more.

The rugby season is on in full swing and the forward passes were thrown to right and left.

It will not be that the amount of wet stats that we see and hear has been killing the pitcher and the catcher has been removed for one inning in favor of Hapgish. The Winged Wheelers will play at Ottawa on Saturday, completing eight games with them being for a touchdown. Certainly the pass is a threat and will open up the game and the play is an awful deal if it does not go right. Bobby Fenton and his Balmy Beachites are city champions defeating Argo in a tight game. Argos, however, will be in when the championships are being handed out.

REDWINGS TWO GAMES IN LEAD

Defeated St. Paul on Sunday By 2-1 Score

St. Paul, Oct. 5.—Rochester, International League champions, took a commanding lead in the Little World Series by defeating St. Paul, 2 to 1, yesterday. The Redwings hold an advantage of three games to one.

George Puccinelli's home run in the ninth inning with one out and the score tied at one-all, proved the margin of victory.

St. Paul scored first in the fifth inning and Rochester tied it up in the sixth.

Outslugging the American Association champions, Rochester won Saturday's game, 6 to 5.

HOUSTONS WIN LEAGUE TITLE

Defeated Cannifton in Third Game By 13-0 Score

The Houston Lumber Company softball team is monarch of all they survey in the Belleville District softball League, they winning the third and final game from Cannifton on Saturday in the latter village. The score: Houston first encounter and at the close of hostilities the Houston team were declared winners, the score being 13 to 0. The game was cleanly fought and the best of sportsmanship prevailed. The umpiring of White and Aylesworth was the best that has been seen in the league this year and both the home and visitor teams and the coach will have lots of time to prepare the boys for the playoffs, when he doesn't have to worry about winning the league title. Coach Ehlers has had wonderful success with his rugby and hockey teams and the boys enjoy playing under him. He knows the game and can impart his knowledge to the players.

Wellington May Have Covered Rink

Wellington, Oct. 5.—It begins to look as though a covered Hockey Rink for Wellington might be realized in the not too distant future. That dream has been in the minds of many of Wellington's citizens for many years, but never for a long time. It is almost assured now that this will see the actual beginning of the rink—possibly just the wall will be erected this year and stand ready for the addition of the roof another year.

It is understood that a number of business men and public spirited citizens are out to get behind the idea and see that it becomes a reality. The Rotary Club of Wellington cannot have a covered rink instead of once or a new open one every season.

FAN STRUCK BY BASEBALL

Foul Ball May Cost Chicago Cubs Some Money

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 5.—A foul ball from the bat of Paul Waner, Pittsburgh Pirate outfielder, may cost the Chicago Cubs some money.

Miss Elizabeth Marie Bruce of Chicago, has filed the praecipe of a suit for $50,000 against the club, charging that a foul ball by Waner last April 21 struck her and cost her the sight of an eye.

Eight Are Charged With Embezzlement

Toronto, Oct. 5 (CP)—Charged with embezzlement of funds of the American State Bank of Detroit, Bolthwick, Ontario, former teller of the institution, was arrested here this morning and consented to extradition and was taken back to Michigan today.

Eight officials of the bank, which closed its doors, are charged with embezzlement of a total of $452,000. Borthwick, it is alleged, falsified his books to cover up the thefts.

Borthwick had been in Toronto for two months prior to his arrest, police said.

First Sunday in Highway Camp

Maitawa, Oct. 5.—Yesterday was the first Sunday in Camp Klock for the 200 unemployed single men of the Don Valley jungle. Once again these former unemployed got a Sunday day in their old idleness. It was certainly a day'of rest. They have finished their work for the week ahead, a broiling sun, they have flung themselves down in the tall sweet grass, glad of a brief respite from their unaccustomed activities. They have won a great battle over an enemy that has fought in such gatherings, discontentment. Every man is happy.

THIEVES ROB CHURCH

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 5 (CP)—Forcing the door of Park road Baptist church office here yesterday, thieves opened a filing cabinet drawer and stole $200. A knife has been used to force the door. Police expressed the opinion the thieves had hidden in the church until after the service was over.

MAN AND WIFE RAISE BIDS

Crowds Pack Police Court For Auction of Unclaimed Goods

Toronto, Oct. 5. — Eyes sparkled with a lust for a bargain as a "bunch of junk" was called from an interesting looking box. Automatically bidding started at 25 cents and began a rapid rise—until the auctioneer discovered the shoes were all odd. He informed his buying public that the shoes were odd. A chorus of "oh's" and "that's different" looks "were followed by a dead silence and then a din of laughter.

It was the annual police sale of goods at the city hall Saturday afternoon. Men's police court and the hall outside were packed with bargain hunters from far and wide. Doing their stuff like the "real thing", Inspector of Detectives Alex Murray and Chief Inspector George Guthrie were the auctioneers.

The two inspectors did their duty nobly. The amount of enthusiasm they could work up over a length of lead pipe, or a carton of steel wool was remarkable. In the end, when spector Guthrie got 35 cents for a pair of fake tennis shoes and a copper cable, a merit mark was given on immediate consideration.

The articles that appeared, on the block most frequently were go-carts and boys' express wagons. In one instance when a go-cart appeared, a man and his wife in a corner of the court began to raise each other's bids. It was somewhat embarrassing and neither knew the other was bidding. Well, they talked it over.

The best bargain during the whole afternoon was almost brand new club bag—valued by someone at $35. Jack Hambleton of the Canadian Press, who was the successful bidder, got the sole purpose of getting a club bag, said he would go as high as fifteen dollars. No one argued with him at $6, and Mr. Hambleton found his own bid 25 cents just to make sure. Various eyes were turned his way as he bandied over the $6.25 and took the bag.

Motor cars, tires, ladies' coats, shoes, skid chains, bunches of them; a couple of hundred pounds of copper coated steel wire, a lawn mower that brought $1.25, a fine suite buyer per and two inner tubes sold for 60 cents, a coat shovel for 40 cents, a clematis gun for $3.80, four pairs of ladies' shoes brought $1.75. Hundreds of other things brought—and where from 10 cents to seven dollars.

$88 MORE WORKLESS LEAVE

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 5 (CP)—When two hundred men, registered the first Toronto contingent of unemployed for work on the trans-Canada highway, left here last night, a total of going to Guthrie; 50 to Two Rivers, and others to Calvin and Blasets, all points close to North Bay.

Science Doesn't Try To Make Life Easier Insists Prof. Einstein

Berlin, Oct. 5 — A desire to increase the understanding, and not a wish to supply the world with comforts, is the motive force of science, Professor Albert Einstein declared in a charity address, on the theme: "The Lure of Scientific Research." The noted physicist, father of the relativity, said, "Anyone who thinks science is trying to make human life easier or more pleasant is utterly mistaken. While science is of service in assisting us to adjust ourselves to life, the researcher himself is impelled by the urge to know the surface. Observational experience is the basis of research, but speculative thought is requisite."

Einstein declared that "the path to real advance lies not in the direction of technical improvements, but in the clarification of our conception of the aims of human existence."

TWO ROBBERS ARE THWARTED

Forced By Oshawa Chemist To Drop Loot and Flee

Oshawa, Oct. 5. — An attempted robbery late Saturday evening failed when two men entered Smith's drug store at 134 Simcoe street south, and carried out the cash register, but fled when it fell to the chine on the sidewalk and depart in the latter case.

The proprietor of the drug store, S. E. Smith, had retired to the rear of the store and when they fled in their car, failed to chase them for several blocks, shouting at the top of his voice "stop thief".

Summoned by Mr. Crozier, a tailor who has his shop a short distance down the street from the drug store, the police made a thorough search of the city but no trace of the car was discovered. Only a meagre description of the men was given the police while the car is described as a large light-colored sedan, equipped with tail lights and no person was able to obtain the license number.

According to Helen Carroll and Evelyn Crowle, two little girls who were in the drug store at the time, two tall men dressed in light overcoats, entered the store, the latter to make up a prescription. When the chemist turned to the back of the shop to mix the drugs, both men leaped over the counter and reached for the door.

Both girls commenced to scream and yell for Smith, who gave chase. At the side of the drug store on Simcoe street, a car was parked with two men in the front seat. In attempting to toss the cash register into the car the robbers dropped the machine on the curb, spilling the contents far and wide.

Both robbers, with Smith clawing their heels, leaped into the rear seat and were whisked away.

Only a small amount of change was lost out of the register, although was badly damaged.

Canada Retains Gold Standard

Ottawa, Oct. 5.—With the forthright declaration that Canada's adherence to the gold standard remains as firm as ever, premier Bennett yesterday publicly denied widespread rumors that the Dominion's cessation of gold payments was imminent.

Emerging from a cabinet meeting at which, it is believed, the financial situation was under discussion, the Prime Minister specifically reiterated the statements which he made a fortnight ago when England abandoned the gold standard. At that time he asserted that Canada would keep to the traditional basis.

"Canada is sound," he declared, "and has not altered the position taken when the announcement was made that England had gone off from the gold standard, nor do we contemplate so doing.

"We have appealed, and not in vain, to Canadians to conserve our gold supply to meeting whatever strain may be placed upon our reserves, and I know of no foreign commitments which are payable in gold and will be honored accordingly."

DOLLAR AT 87

New York, Oct. 5.—(CP)— The Canadian dollar opened fairly steady on local foreign exchanges today. Traders quoted the Dominion unit at 87 cents, off 1-32 of a cent of 15 per cent.

Three dollar closed Saturday at 87 to 87 1-2 after maintaining a firm tone throughout the abbreviated trading session.

Lipton Will Lie With His Family

London, Oct. 5—In accordance with his frequently expressed wish, Sir Thomas Lipton, who died Friday, will be buried beside members of his family in Glasgow.

Tuesday the body will start northby train. Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon. Simultaneously with the funeral in Glasgow there will be services in Saint Columba Church, London.

There was considerable speculation regarding the size of the estate left by the yachtsman and merchant. The belief was expressed that it would be comparatively small because of the immense sums he spent in charity and in his repeated attempts to recapture for Great Britain the American's Cup, symbol of world yachting supremacy.

The report that years ago he had set up a large sum to be used for the construction of more yachts with which to take the "elusive old mug" was revived.

'SUNNY BRAE' FIRE

Hastings, Oct. 5.—Loss by fire is estimated at $6,000 and which is partly covered by insurance was today sustained by Charles Clyde of Sunny Brae, a summer resort three miles north of here. Besides burning the barn, the fire consumed the season's crop, a milking machine and other equipment. The house in which the family were sitting in the hour when they first noticed the fire shortly before noon. The fire was not under control for some time.

PREFERENCE IS WIPED OUT STATES KING

Startling Increase in Tariff Rate is Noted

KING CRITICAL

Ottawa, Oct. 5 (CP)—Declaring that the result is "a startling increase in the tariff rate against goods from Great Britain", and that the British preference has been practically "wiped out" on products of a class or kind made in Canada, Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, opposition leader, has issued a statement criticizing two recent decrees of the government. The first fixes the rate of exchange in computing the values for duty on goods imported from Great Britain at $4.86 2-3 to the pound.

The second applies a special or surtax duty to British imports of similar or kind made in Canada purchased at less than $4.86 2-3 to the pound.

These changes by order-in-council asserts Mr. King, "represent a great or variation in Canadian fiscal policy than has ever been adopted by any Canadian government with the consent of parliament."

GHOST WOMAN COOK'S VOICE

Ventriloquist Fools Enter Camp of Highway Workers

North Bay, Ont., Oct. 5 (CP)—Fresh from months of idleness and faced with the prospect of a hard winter of work on the trans-Canada highway project, men in the Rankin camp at Klock near here have been entertained during the past few days with reports of the presence of a woman of surpassing beauty near the camp.

Known only as Mabel, "the gorgeous ghost woman", her haunt was said to be a little wooded glen beside a brook which purled near the cook and mess tents. Mickey McKay, mess cook, first brought word of her. Violet eyes she had, he said, her hair was wild and tangled.

Curious eyes scanned the woods but never a glimpse of her did they see. Several times she was heard in conversation with McKay outside the mess tent at meal time, but they never succeeded in seeing her.

Two reporters who spent a night at the camp and heard all about Mabel had a late breakfast next morning served by Mickey. They learned he was a former English concert hall artist and that he had a repertoire of tricks. They learned something else, too. The assistant cook was a ventriloquist.

"You can throw your voice all over and imitate a lot of other noises and voices?" asked the newspapermen. "Yeah", said Mickey.

"A fellow with a sense of humor can have a lot of fun that way," said one of the scribes.

"I do," said Mickey.

First Ship From Hudson's Bay Port

London, Oct. 5. — The steamer Farnworth last night wrote maritime history as she slid slowly into her berth at Victoria Dock loaded deeply with Canadian grain. Other vessels, thousands of them, had carried similar cargoes, but the Farnworth had loaded at Churchill, Man., Canada's newest seaport. She had made a record voyage. She had been thought to be "frozen north." She had safely negotiated the Hudson straits and the Atlantic. She had brought the grain-growing areas of the Prairies 1,000 miles closer to the British market.

It is found that copperized paper wrappers for pears in shipment will prevent the development of "gray mold" or "nest decay."

MILK BOTTLES PAPERS CLUE

District Attorney Finds These Tell of Recent Camp

Huntington, N.Y., Oct. 5—Milk bottles, old newspapers and bits of rope gave District Attorney Blue new hope today in his search for the slayers of Benjamin F. Collings.

Felix Di Martini, private detective retained by Blue, examined the camp site where the bottle and other articles were found yesterday and declared the place had been used as a camp about three weeks ago.

He said the rope corresponded in size to one used in tying up Collings before he was thrown into the pound the night of September 9.

William A. Kelly, counsel for Mrs. Collings, criticized Blue yesterday for withholding information and causing Mrs. Collings to make a fruitless and needless trip to Daytona Beach, Fla. Mrs. Collings went there to try to identify a father and son detained by Florida police. She exonerated both men.

Kelley said that if Blue had given them full information about the Florida suspects, the trip to Daytona Beach would have been avoided.

$50,000 FIRE AT TIMMINS

Timmins, Ont., Oct. 5 (CP)—Fire which destroyed the Rudolph and Chesney Lumber Mill on the outskirts of the city over the week-end caused loss estimated at $50,000. The mill, situated on the side of the Mettagami River, was razed. A bucket brigade prevented the blaze from spreading to adjoining buildings.

Motor Cruiser Hits Submerged Log

Toronto, Oct. 5 (CP)—When their cruiser struck a submerged log, four Toronto men had a narrow escape from drowning Saturday night. The men, A. A. Lamport, Geoffrey Turner, Thomas E. Rogers and John Northway, Jr., rowed nearly three miles to Fort Credit in a leaky rowboat, the cruiser sinking shortly after they had left it.

The cruiser was valued at nearly $40,000. After the men left it, the big boat drifted further out into the lake and sank and its location has has not yet been determined.

FLIERS LAND

Skagway, Alaska, Oct. 5 (AP) — Don Moyle and Cecil A. Allen, California aviators, landed here yesterday after they had failed to find a field at Juneau on which they could bring down their plane.

NINE DEATHS ON WEEK END

Traing, Motor, Street Cars, Fire Take Toll

Toronto, Oct. 5.—(By The Canadian Press)—Trains, automobiles and street cars took their toll over the week-end in Ontario and helped to swell the violent death list to nine.

Three died as a result of automobile accidents; trains killed two; one was hit by a street car; one was fatally injured in a fall from a bicycle; one was burned to death and one was fatally scalded.

Irene Collier, 17, Mitchell, Ont., was killed Saturday when a car in which she was riding collided with a truck on the highway near Kenniciott.

Rachel Smith, 78, Toronto, died in hospital last night as a result of injuries sustained when she was hit by an automobile a week ago.

Chesler Walters, 20, Thorndale farmer's son, died in hospital yesterday following a collision between two cars last Thursday.

Malcolm Morris, 45, Lornesville Junction, Ont., was killed apparently by a train; his body was found on the tracks near Guelph Saturday.

The body of an unknown man was found on the railway track near Sudbury last night. He was also a train victim, apparently.

Mrs. Agnes Walden, 66, Windsor, died last night when she was hit by a street car in Windsor.

W. R. Mackenzie, 55, Orchard Park, died today following a fall from his bicycle yesterday.

Donald Alexander, 2, Peterboro, was fatally scalded when he fell into a tub of hot water.

Mrs. Stephen Autin 62, Amherstburg, died Saturday of burns sustained when gasoline ignited as she was putting it on her stove.

Churchgoer Lectured As He Loses Case

Lindsay, Oct. 5 (CP)—A Lindsay churchgoer was lectured for his stubbornness in police court Saturday. William King, the churchgoer, had laid a complaint against a car owner who, he claimed, had blocked the sidewalk with his vehicle. The car was getting gasoline from a garage pump and was parked on the sidewalk when King came along. The case was dismissed and Magistrate Jordan advised the complainant to take the other side of the road in future.

TRUCK TURNS INTO DITCH

Driver of Motorcar is Questioned By Police

Cecil Hesslip, who has been living in Michigan for some time, was en route to his former home in Odessa, Ont., travelling with a truck loaded with household goods and while on the highway about three-thirty o'clock Saturday afternoon, shirt dis tance east of Deseronto, his truck was hit by a car passing in the same direction, with the result that his truck was turned over into the ditch and considerable damage done to the household goods. The accident, it is said, was caused by Abe Meister of Newark, N.J., endeavoring to pass the Hesslip truck which was being followed by two cars. In doing so the Meister car is said to have struck the front part of the truck with its rear fender, causing it to capsize. Fortunately no one was injured. Provincial Constable Frink was very promptly on the scene of the accident. Meister was arrested and brought to Belleville. Later a bond, satisfactory to the authorities, was arranged and Meister was allowed to go pending investigation.

GOLD STRIKE STARTS TOWN

PORT ST. JAMES, B.C.—A modest settlement of gold seekers is springing up at Rainbow Creek, the scene of British Columbia's latest gold strike and objective of a new rush into the Cariboo country.

Those who now are at the creek are either building cabins or constructing sluices and other devices used in placer mining. There is now the semblance of a small village where a few weeks ago there was little more than a wilderness of pine trees and gravel.

How is the gold panning out? It is still pretty early to answer that question, but an encouraging sign is that most of those who have gone into Rainbow Creek this season have remained there. They are apparently determined to be in the region a fair-test.

The pay consists of gold which is fairly coarse and black sand which assays have shown to contain values in the fine gold, platinum and iridium, but the actual marketability of the last is still uncertain.

The most popular method of operating without machinery consists of setting up several lengths of sluice-box each length averaging about 12 to 18 inches in width and 10 to 12 feet in length, and having diverted a sufficient stream of water from the creek by means of ditches or flumes, the water is run through the boxes and the gravel shoveled in to be washed. The sluice boxes are paved with riffles, which are designed to catch the gold and heavy black sand, the remainder of the material, being carried away with the water.

A good man picking and shoveling can probably wash six cubic yards of gravel daily. This is, of course, affected by many conditions, even such as mosquitoes being sometimes an important factor, as there is no more definite deterrent to satisfactory work in the Rainbow Creek country than this pest.

Taking as production an ounce of gold at sixteen dollars and assuming it to be produced from six yards of gravel, this would give a return of about $2.65 per yard. As anyone familiar with placer mining knows, this is unusually rich and it is not expected that such values are likely to be encountered over the whole deposit.

It is generally considered that properly situated ground can be worked by hydraulic methods as cheaply at eight cents a cubic yard, and ground which averages thirty to forty cents a yard is considered exceptionally rich. So until the high values are proved to remain consistent throughout the gravels on Rainbow Creek cannot be considered a Bonanza.

Morris Mostolagh Has Real Idea

Brantford, Ont., Oct. 3.—Morris Mostolagh appeared in police court yesterday and denied that he made beer. He also denied selling liquor. But he admitted he charge ten cents for beer in his shop and his tributed free to customers a drink made of hops, malt and yeast. He was charged with keeping liquor for sale and with making home brew without a permit. He was sentenced Monday although Magistrate Hale is not sure of what offense he will convict him.

OCEAN MONSTER PROVIDES THRILLS IN "THE SEA BAT," AT THE CAPITOL

"The Sea Bat," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new marine melodrama which opened at the Capitol Theatre, Saturday, should rank high with that large group of people who like their drama mixed with novelty and interesting material.

Wesley Ruggles, the director, has produced a picture which is a personification of those words, with excitement added. Those who thought there was no new situation or "menace" in melodrama are in for a surprise over this original story by Dorothy Yost.

Sea bats, those giant rays weighing two tons or more, which infest tropic waters, are the monsters who supply the excitement of this tale. When one of them foils Nils Matheson in his heavy wings, crushing him to death, it starts a way of suspense in which the tangled affairs of Charles Bickford, Raoul Torres and John Millian form a dramatic entwining.

Cast Does Excellent Work

Bickford, the coal mine hero of "Dynamite" and the Irish sailor of "Anna Christie," is magnificent as an escaped prisoner from the penal colony of "Devil's Island," hiding in the garments of a minister. Miss Torres is a Spanish girl who has become affected by the native superstition, because of the death of her lover, Authur. Millian, Gibson Gowland and Boris Karloff are three villainous sponge-divers who threaten her at times when she says she will marry the first man to sail the sea bat. Edmund Breese in a very acceptable sea captain, while George Marion does a fine characterization as the sodden Spanish father of Raquel.

The dialogue and continuity of the production show smooth, finished craftsmanship. Credit for this goes to Bess Meredyth and John Howard Lawson.

This picture is unique because of its numerous under-water shots. The fight between Alther and the sea bat underwater is magnificent as is the work of Charles Bickford in a fight with John Millian in a rocking forbeast, far out at sea.

"Jungle Planet," an episode of adventures in Africa is included in the programme which ends tonight.

"MOTHERS MILLIONS" COMES TO THE CAPITOL

Not until you see "Mother's Millions," which is playing at the Capitol Theatre, Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily, will you be able to know the real trials and tribulations of the rich. If you, in this time of seeming depression, feel that money is more important to you than your health, more important than the normal happiness to which we have a right to look forward, slip into a seat in the theatre and see the story of Elmer and Tom Breen, children of the richest woman in the world.

To read the newspapers, you would think that all of the sons of the wealthy tore around in motor cars, went to speakeasies, played golf all day, and gambled all night. They don't say so much about the little daughters of the rich, unless they get into a jam, but the prevailing opinion about them is that all they have to do is sit on a money bag and count. Edgar Charteris comes along who is acceptable to the head of the house and thinks he'll be just the man for Elmer. Howard Kent Barnes in this story, "Mother's Millions" has written a double story of a home of the richest woman in the world. He gives you the real low-down on why rich girls want to run away with the chauffeur and why the sons of millionaires are so easy for the chorus girls and blackmailers.

It is worth seeing, and incidentally, you will learn the extreme pickaxe of witnessing one of the most remarkable performances of this year's screen successes, that of May Robson in a part which fits her like a glove. The big cast which James Flood assembled to interpret the story in talking pictures includes James Hall, Lawrence Gray, Frances Dean, who recently appeared in "Dracula" and who plays an important role in "Seed," Edmund Breese, Lillian Harmer, Elinor Fyn, Leon Winslow and William L. Thorne.

Comedy and interest will make up an all round excellent program.

2 HORSEMEN ARE INJURED

Joe Vasseau is Cut About Head and S. McMillan's Back Injured

Stanley McMillan of Trenton suffered cuts and bruises about his left face and hip and Joseph Vasseau of Belleville sustained an ugly gash on the forehead when they collided, the sewing of the wound with five stitches, in a spill at the end of the race track at Roblin's Mills fair on Saturday afternoon. The two men were driving, Vasseau had Peter H. and McMillan was driving Dan Rose owned by Ernest Morris of Frankford, when in making the turn to come into the home stretch in the first heat of the 2.30 class, the accident occurred, both horses going down and the men being pitched over the stopping ambulance. Vasseau extricated himself out of the entanglement with blood pouring from his cut above his left eye, but McMillan lay helpless and had to be assisted out, and it was then seen that he was badly injured as he appeared to have cut the left limbs and a cot was brought from the home of Ed. Roblin and placed in it, at the entrance to the grounds and the driver placed upon it. Cabs were sent for throughout the grounds for a doctor and for a nurse. Finally Dr. Van Luven of Consecon was reached and he was on hand shortly. The injured man had also been carried to Mr. Blabee's. A cursory examination showed that the injuries were severe and the Belleville ambulance was summoned. In the meantime the doctor gave his attention to the injured man and also ordered him to the home of Vasseau's head.

Dr. Van Luven drove to the hospital where the injuries of the man were attended and Dr. Noble was given the case on Sunday evening. Today Dr. Noble stated that the man had suffered a great deal. He did not believe that the hip was fractured.

McMillan's hip was injured in a fall, accident some time ago.

Morris, the owner of Silver King, has been in the money several third heats. Vasseau's Peter was drawn.

McMillan was close behind Vasseau and it is thought Silver King touched the wheel of the Vasseau sulky, causing the upset.

BRITISH VOTERS GO TO POLLS OCTOBER 27

Premier Given Free Hand to Draft Platform Upon Which National Gov't. Goes Before Electorate

Long Inspected Elections Decided Upon at Last

SIMON AGREES

Lloyd George Group Not Reconciled to Election

London, Oct. 6.—Clouds of uncertainty were rolled away today with the official announcement from Buckingham Palace that the general election would be held on October 27, when the British people will vote on issues of "national importance."

The national government will appeal to the people as a unit. Prime Minister MacDonald at last having won his struggle to keep Conservatives and the National Government Liberals together under his leadership. He also has the assistance of twenty-two Liberal members of Parliament under Sir John Simon, who have pledged their support to the Prime Minister in any course he follows.

On the other side of the battle front are the Laborites, minus some of their old leaders, and the portion of the Liberal party headed by Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George. The Liberal party, decimated by successive general elections, is today split more widely than ever before. The Lloyd George group remains aligned with the old guard of labor in opposition to the present government.

Complexity Fades

With the situation remains complex. The National Government's platform will be outlined in a manifesto to be issued by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald. This was expected today but it is more likely now that it will be issued tomorrow or perhaps on Thursday. The House is expected to prorogue tomorrow and afterwards dissolve. A speech from the throne will outline the reasons for a general election at this critical juncture.

Mr. MacDonald has found the general election necessary at last. But the campaign will be short and snappy. There would be little delay the people go to the polls. In 1929, when the Conservative government was defeated and the second Labor government came into power, polling also came only three weeks after dissolution, but that battle had been long expected and the campaign was under way a considerable time before dissolution.

National Platform

What, exactly, will be the national government's platform? Just what will the tariff plank be in it? It has been understood since the political crisis arose the government would appear on a platform of general national reconstruction in which tariffs would be but a part. Until the manifesto is issued, there remains uncertainty as to how far the Prime Minister is prepared to go with the Conservative demand for tariffs, a demand that of late has been put in the background for the sake of unity in the cabinet.

And how will the national government's different elements solve the problem of co-operation in the constituencies? Agreement must be reached, if the national government majorities are not to be defeated by themselves while labor fights as a unit.

Labor is taking it for granted that protective tariffs will play an im-

In the case now proceeding before the court Charles A. Payne, K.C., and Harry Arnold are acting for the defendant, Moore, Wills and George S. Gibbard, K.C., is appearing for Lydiatt. It is expected the case will not take more than a week's time as practically all the plaintiff's evidence is now before the court.

Snowden to Accept Peerage

London, Oct. 6. (C P Cable).—The Canadian Press learned this afternoon that Rt. Hon. Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer, has decided to accept a peerage.

Reports that the frail but at out-hearted Chancellor would be elevated to the peerage have been a current a number of times but it has always been added that Mr. Snowden, himself, would not accept the honor.

Mr. Snowden has announced he will not seek re-election in the coming general election. Elevation to the peerage, however, would enable him to render continued valuable help to the National Government, from the Upper House, if it is so desired.

MACDONALD TO RUN FOR OLD SEAT SEAHAM

Neither Liberals Nor Conservatives to Put In Candidate

GIVE FREE HAND

Thomas Has No Doubt People Will Back National Gov't

London, Oct. 6.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald has decided to seek re-election in the coming general elections in his old seat of Seaham, Durham, the Canadian Press learned on definite authority this afternoon.

Prime Minister MacDonald was repudiated by the Labor executive of Seaham some time ago and when he visited the constituency last Friday the Labor executive did not change its decision, although since then two independent branches in the Labor party in the constituency have pledged him their support.

1929 War

In the 1929 general elections Mr. MacDonald had an overwhelming majority, the vote being MacDonald (Labor, Ind.) 39,221; Pearce-Whitingstall, Cons., 6,851; Haslam, Liberal, 5,966; Politt, Communist, 1,431.

Conservative and Liberal leaders have indicated they will probably not nominate candidates in the Seaham constituency which would mean Mr. MacDonald is free to again run as a Labor candidate, as he has said he will do. Possibly, however, he would be opposed by a Labor candidate selected by the local executive, but this is unlikely under present action.

Besides campaigning in that district, Mr. MacDonald intends to make a number of speeches at Derby in support of Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, who will be the only colleague of the old Labor Cabinet campaigning alongside him, Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson being ill.

Mr. MacDonald is also expected to campaign on behalf of his son Malcolm, who will be standing for the National Ministry and probably for one of the Scottish seats.

Thomas Certain

London, Oct. 6.—(Canadian Press Cable)—"I was never more confident of anything in my life than of the result this election will produce," declared Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary of State for the Dominions, when seen by the Canadian Press this afternoon.

"At the same time," Mr. Thomas continued, "frankly I am somewhat afraid of the impression which may be held in certain foreign places and perhaps to some extent in certain far parts of the Empire, as to the exact position prevailing here. That is one reason I favored an early election.

Country Behind Gov't

"I am convinced the overwhelming mass of the British people is behind the National Government."

Wenatchee, Wash., Oct. 6 — Out of the horrors of their historic nonstop flight across the Pacific came affluence, Emile and Roy Lodge for Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon, Jr., Wenatchee and the State of Washington a great vent to heretofore unheard-of pains to show two aviators with comfort. Townspeople forgot about the depression and raised a purse of $500 to provide the fliers spending money.

Pangborn and Herndon were with out a cent when they landed here yesterday after their 4,500 miles flight 4,877 mile flight from Samushiro Beach, Japan. Before the first cheers had died away representatives of the Japanese newspaper Asahi handed them an order for $25,000—prize money which long had been pledged by that periodical for the first non-stop airplane flight between Japan and the United States.

But the $25,000 didn't provide any immediate spending money and the collection was taken up to take care of that situation.

This morning the fliers were allowed to sleep late, but were called upon to go to a neighboring town for a luncheon and a community banquet.

Behind all the felicity, however, there was the indelible memory of what might have happened had they not outflown the storm that beset them.

Stealing chickens from three farmers during the past three weeks in order to supply food for six small children, was the reason given by Andrew Golden to the Belleville police court authorities, when he appeared before them on the charge, record, accompanied by his father, Mr. Constantine, this Tuesday morning. Golden, who is about 34 years old, lives with his wife and children in Tyendinaga Township near the village of Roslin, and claims to have had no work for months.

When the complaints were received by the Provincial Police of the numerous chicken thefts, Sergeant Sloan was assigned to the case and his investigations resulted in clues being directed towards Golden. Today after considerable questioning Golden admitted the charges and a statement was given by him to the police. Golden was then charged and arrested. Later in the morning he appeared before Magistrate Mikel and was granted his liberty to depart when sureties upon satisfactory bail being furnished by his father.

PLANE CATAPULTED FROM LINER CRASHES IN BAY

Left Liner Bremen 800 Miles At Sea to Set New Record

EXPLOSION HEARD

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 6 (C.P.) — A plane launched to the air "from New York," bound for New York from the trans-Atlantic liner Bremen, crashed in the harbor here early this morning, according to William Faulkner, harbormaster on Bur Island, who organized a search party and proceeded in the direction from which the shouts came but could find no trace of plane or fliers.

The Saffina pilot boat which catapulted from the Bremen yesterday morning, about 800 miles at sea, in an effort to break existing records for trans-Atlantic mails at the New York. Pilot Fitz Simon published on for the United States metropolis after refueling at Sydney, N. S., Mr. Faulkner said.

Heard Crash.

About 3.30 this morning Lighkeeper Faulkner heard a crash on Thrumcap Island. The crash was followed by an explosion. Shouts echoed across the bay for some time as he endeavoured to get a boat off. It was low water in the muddy bay and it was impossible to get a boat over the mud flats for more than half an hour after 3.30, with sentiments of men he had aroused with. Hants County, he got a boat off and proceeded in the direction from which shouts were still coming. They could not see the plane. Then all was quiet. Nothing more was heard and although they roamed around in the bay until daylight they found no trace of their plane nor fliers. Other boats are out on the bay now but there is no trace of the plane had been found.

The President wants to put into effect in every possible agency of the federal government to aid business. The action of the bankers in real estate financing has been one of the subjects discussed in his previous conferences with party leaders.

All Ways to Washington

Unlike Stephen Leacock's magic-ing President Herbert Hoover has no seven league boots. Last night and today leaders in the House of Representatives and Senate were speeding to Washington by train and government airplane to meet with Mr. Hoover at 9.30 tonight.

Washington unsuccessfully confront ed on last afternoon last June with the President's declaration of a year's moratorium on inter-governmental debts is filled with rumor.

The facts are these: For the past few days experts from the treasury political leaders adept in finance have been visiting Mr. Hoover. The economic position of the United States has been definitely upon the road of improvement.

Whether the President has in mind is a carefully guarded secret Speculation is as follows:

That he intends to consider bringing some more men into not the power to make without consent of congress or certainly in which he desires the board of the Federal Reserve.

This move is said in some quarters to be entirely domestic. Some arrangement of creditor support of banks is suggested.

Again emphasis continually laid by those close to the administration upon linking disarmament and debts suggests an international deal which would include some form of international concurrence.

Any decision related to reality is the theory the President considers the situation the same as to warrant a definite move in the direction of relief. Such a move is predicted in government such as has just been lately instituted in Great Britain.

Marauders Open Coal Office on Waterfront

The city police received a call about six-thirty o'clock this Tuesday morning from the head office of The Schuster Co., South Front Street, stating that during the night the office had been entered. Constable Hoard, who went at once to investigate, found that undoubtedly marauders had been in the place but that they had pushed nothing of value, as far as they were concerned, to carry away.

Difficulty in obtaining entrance to the office was anticipated and two irons had been taken from a nearby box car to use in forcing the window. This, however, was not necessary as the window was not locked. The safe, too, gave the intruders no trouble as it was unlocked, being closed only to keep out the dust of the "break in" and the cash with which they could have enriched themselves, they scorned to take, comprising, as it did, only a few coppers in the till. The affair will be further investigated by the police.

Anti-Short Selling Rules Turn Trend in New York

New York, N.Y., Oct. 6— The stock market came out of the doldrums in a rush today, as short sale buying and short covering was inspired by the anti-short selling rules efforts to deal with the powers of depression.

Premiums took rushed up about 2 to 16 points. They slipped back a little from the high moments, but as trading quieted down somewhat after midday, but the advance was quickly resumed.

Price averages at 1 p.m. indicated an average rise of more than 5 points. Radio Pic Railroad shot up 15 points, some of the regular quarterly dividend of $3.50. Public traders rushed more than 10. Miscellaneous issues rising about 5 to 8 points, including U. S. Steel, American Telephone, American Can, North American Tobacco "B", Southern Pacific, New York Central, Eastman and others.

New York Action Follows European Market Action

New York, N.Y., Oct. 6— The New York Stock Exchange today took drastic measures designed specifically to curtail short selling and to prevent demoralization. The new conduct informed members that no short sale would hereafter be permitted with each selling order whether it is long or short, and whether it is a short sale.

While official comment from the exchange is lacking, it is understood that no short sales are to be permitted that will depress the price of the stock. That is, if the last sale was an order to sell 200 shares of Westinghouse short, no further short sales may at the time the order is received at 940 a share, he may execute the order only if he can do it without depressing the price below that quotation.

This further action of the exchange is designed to complete restrictions against short selling which were put into effect last week, and widespread agitation in this country for control of professional trading.

COULD NOT TURN IN BED

Held by Unseen Hands

LOCKED JOINTS THAT KRUSCHEN RELEASED

Unseen hands held this woman in her bed. They held her limbs and her joints, so that she was scarcely able to move. "I was like a statue in the cold fetid—and their grip became tighter every day.

She had almost despaired of ever loosening their hold—when she made what she describes as "a wonderful discovery." She found Kruschen. Here's how! I lacked her own words:

"I have suffered terribly for a very long time with rheumatoid arthritis. The pain I've suffered I cannot explain to you; I recommenced taking Kruschen six months ago, following directions, and I am thankful to say in less than a week I was able to get a night's rest and sleep. That was something I had not had for a very long time. My joints seemed completely locked and I could not move. Now I am glad to say I'm able to sleep well, turn with ease, and get about fine, and my joints seem to be quite different. It was one day when I was reading the paper I learned about Kruschen that I decided to try it. (And how glad I am now that I did!)

I consider Kruschen is a very wonderful discovery."—Mrs. E. A.

The system of the rheumatic subject is a producer of that dangerous body poison known as uric acid, which is composed of knife-edged crystals. It is bred in accumulated waste matter which the organs of elimination have failed to expel. Kruschen is a powerful solvent of these flint-hard crystals. It swiftly dulls their sharp edges, then flushes them out of the system. Your pains cease; swellings subside; knotted joints become loose.

And still, Kruschen eliminates the root cause of the evil. Taken regularly, it keeps your liver and kidneys in perfect tune, so that these eliminating organs free your inside from all poisonbreeding waste products.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 45c. and 75c. per bottle.

not even think his form of proposal strange; she, too, just took it for granted that they would marry. Her answer was as direct as his question, "Heaf eeek, before you go on your vacation."

The grip on Jane's arm tightened so that it bruised her flesh. He drew her toward him so that she could feel his heart pounding against her pounding heart. When he spoke his voice was shaken with joy. "It isn't maidenly to be in such a rush," he teased.

"You needn't feel so flattered," she teased back in a voice as husky as his own, "I'm just overwhelmingly tired of working."

She didn't think it necessary to confess that she never had to go to work at all in the first place.

AXE ATTACK ALLEGED

North Bay, Oct. 6.—Domiline Schiavone, appearing before Magistrate Wood on a charge of causing actual bodily harm, was remanded until Thursday. It is alleged that on Sept. 23 Schiavone struck Joseph Marino on the head with an axe. For a couple of days it was feared that Marino would not live, Schiavone eluded arrest until yesterday when he was apprehended by Sergeant McGrail, Constables Pilgrim and Fox.

LAW DECLARED VAGUE

St. Thomas, Oct. 6.—That the Ontario Legislature should make the law of trespass clear at the time of day when lights are necessary on all vehicles travelling on public highways, for the edification of courts, was the opinion expressed by Magistrate F. F. Maxwell when Thomas Parish, a South Yarmouth farmer, was fined and acquitted on a charge of violating the Ontario Highway Act in driving a team of horses and a wagon without a light on King's Highway No. 4, early on the evening of Oct. 2. A Detroit car crashed into the wagon.

"What do you mean you can't take a position?" Why on earth, then, did you answer my ad for a stenographer? Don't you know that I'm busy to waste time this way?" John Lee thundered on the girl who had just graciously given him her life history in answer to his curt questions.

"I'm really sorry; I'd no idea you'd take it this way. I don't have to have a position and, as I've never before had to go 'jobhunting,' it isn't easy for me to approach strange men and ask them to 'let me work for you there.'" Jane Bates was obviously embarrassed, but she had controlled her apology. "I'd met you once, several years ago, at Cornish Summer Week; so when I saw your advertisement in the paper, I thought I might gather courage from the fact that weren't an utter stranger and be able to get experience in selling myself on employer."

Now it was John's turn to be embarrassed. No man, even though he will act like a demon to his stenographer without a qualm, can be joyless being found wanting as a gentleman by a girl who may possibly be his bridge partner next week—especially if the girl is attractive and John had just observed during her explanation that she was rather beautiful. Even if she hadn't had a perfect, straight nose (a skin to be envied) and a figure a Woodbury advertisement, and an irresistible mouth, she would have been lovely because of her smooth summin hair and wide brown eyes. Furthermore, she had that subtle distinction which made it clear even to a man that she'd never been dark suit she was wearing probably cost nearly as much as he planned to pay his employee for a month.

He smiled abruptly. "Can you ever forgive my temper? Business is so rotten it keeps me pretty well keyed up. I'll make up for it, though, by taking you out to lunch; meet a lawyer friend of mine who needs a receptionist in his office. It doesn't pay much, but if you really need a place it will be a good fill-in."

As they rode up in the elevator, Jane heard nothing her escort told her; she was too busy reflecting upon the fact that he was even more attractive than she had remembered. His wavy hair was no black and his eyes were as blue as she had recalled, but the last four years had emphasized the struggle of his mouth and chin, sacrificing the boyishness of his face for an increased handsomeness. Jane was sincerely sorry that she couldn't help him.

The following week she went to work for Mr. Lee. Naturally, she had to go down once to thank John for the position. Naturally, he had to run up to discover how she was getting along. Naturally, in their attack upon the trash, they failed among the means of giving the public on the part of the Canadian Christian Crusade is doing, atheism and anything that is against the faith of mankind."

No U. of T. Campaign

Rev. John G. Inkster, D.D., presided at the meeting, and commend ed its work of the Crusade, saying that the positive side of the work —the teaching of the Gospel and defence of the Bible—was advancing. He assured the audience that there was no campaign or influence at the University of Toronto which aimed to destroy the faith of the student, and spoke of the efforts made to see that a student is protected with some Christian Church while in the city.

Rev. M. Newenko, who works among the foreign citizens, made an appeal for evangelical effort to provide Christian teaching among the Ukrainians, Poles and other nationalities.

Atheism, as it is met with in so listic nutting camps and outlying districts was discussed by Rev. F. A. Nunnan. Preachers to men there who would tell any one that they had no use for the Bible, the speaker declared that even the avowed atheists knew where to turn in times of stress and sickness, and that the power of the Gospel was continually proved in working among them. That 11,800,000 copies of the Bible had been published this year was a proof of the demand, and was instanced as a note of optimism in the work being done in advancing Christian teaching.

VERACITY OF SCRIPTURES

Atheism Doomed If Word Of God Given People

Toronto, Oct. 6.—How we may prove the veracity of the Scriptures was the subject of the addresses of Rev. Charles Neils of New Zealand, who addressed the evening session of third annual meeting of the Canadian Christian Crusade last night in Knox Church.

"Whatever the agnostics and the skeptics may say," the speaker declared, "they are faced with failure in their attack upon the truth. By facilitating the means of giving the truth on to the people as the Canadian Christian Crusade is doing, atheism and anything that is against the faith of mankind."

U. E. Gillen Retires from Rail Terminal Office

Began as Trainmaster at Belleville 30 Years Ago

47 YEARS' SERVICE

Toronto, Oct. 6—With almost half a century of achievements in railways in Canada and the United States, including the construction of the Toronto Union Station and viaduct, completed, Ulmus Edwin Gillen, General Manager of the Toronto Terminals Railway Company, last evening conveyed to the members of his staff at the offices in the Union Station the official information that he would retire on Oct. 15.

Station Construction

The construction of the new Union Station and the viaduct in which the city is revealed to represent a uniform standard of excellence, which will stand comparison anywhere. The expenditure on Union Station and Viaduct has been in excess of $25,000,000. The duties of the General Manager of the Toronto Terminal Railways Company include the management of the Union Station and all the activities there. It was Mr. Gillen who made the arrangements for the opening of the Union Station by the Prince of Wales.

Mr. Gillen last night confirmed the rumor that he was retiring.

"After 47 years, my thoughts have naturally turned to relaxation. While I may be away on occasional trips, I am going to make my home in the Lake of the Woods district," he declared.

To His friends, "U. E." is a man of kindly humor and of rare old-fashioned courtesy. Although the construction of the station and viaduct was his greatest achievement, he will be widely remembered for his work in wartime.

Railway Men Sing War

October 1917, was a critical period in the Great War. The Canadian Railway Association for National Defence was formed, with all the railways participating. The object was to secure greater cooperation not only between the railways themselves, but between the railways and the public. Mr. Gillen was made Chairman of the Administrative Committee. He is favorably remembered, for the excellent transportation service provided in Canada under the most trying circumstances. Railways at that time were taxed to their utmost for food, ammunition, supplies and soldiers, destined overseas, and at the same time the enormous civil passenger traffic per service for the people in Canada and the United States. In July, 1918, the Canadian Railway Board of Adjustment was formed for the purpose of avoiding strikes and settling labor disputes on the railways during the war. It was still in existence. It was highly successful.

Born In Missouri

Mr. Gillen was born at Brooklyn, Mo., Feb. 27, 1867, and began his railway career with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul as a clerk in Canton, South Dakota, in 1884. His connection with the Grand Trunk Railway began in 1901 as Trainmaster at Belleville. From that time he passed rapidly through various stages of the service until he became Vice-President in Charge of Operation and Maintenance. It was in June, 1919, he was appointed General Manager of the Toronto Terminals Railway Company. He has also served as Chairman or as a member of a number of the most important transportation and economic organization established in Canada since the war and has always succeeded in obtaining a majority or unanimous report.

Thornton Hints at Possible Rail Merger

Victoria, Oct. 6.—"If the best brains of the country are mobilized to examine Canada's railway problems, there is no doubt that a satisfactory solution to the difficulties now being faced will be reached," is the opinion of one interviewed, Sir Henry Thornton stated here. The Canadian National Railways president made this statement in his proposal for the appointment of a royal commission to investigate railroad operations in Canada and to frame a constructive policy.

"It is impossible for me to say just what policy might be evolved by the commission," he said, when it was suggested that the findings of the royal commission might favor consolidation of the Canadian rail systems.

Canada's problems particularly those affecting transportation, were linked in some respects, Sir Henry fronting the United States, he continued.

"Consolidations are taking place over there in a country of 120,000,000 people whose interests are almost as those of Canada and of this fact we must take cognizance."

SAYS LIQUOR IS SMUGGLED

Drayton Declares Gov't Identification Mark Forged

Toronto, Oct. 6.—An intimation that counterfeit Government seals were being smuggled into Canada from the United States, in addition to quantities of grain alcohol, was made by Sir Henry Drayton, Chairman of the Ontario Liquor Control Board, on his return from Buffalo, N.Y., that speedboats operating out of Lake Erie ports on the American side were engaged in bringing five-gallon cans of contraband alcohol to the province.

"The Provincial Police have reported seizures of alcohol from time to time," said Sir Henry, "but these seizures have in some instances been of considerable quantities—fifty tins or more—and at other times have been of smaller amounts. The police are of the opinion that the source of this alcohol is the United States."

Two years ago, continued Sir Henry, "illegal alcohol in small quantities moved into Ontario from the United States, and formed a steady movement; however, this has stopped, and since that time shipments of alcohol have commenced moving east in the Ontario from Minnesota." He stated that the police have been unable, as yet, to definitely prove the source of the alcohol, but are strongly of the opinion that it comes from the United States. The alcohol is produced by a well-equipped refinery, and bears no evidence of illicit production," said Sir Henry. "I do not think that counterfeiting Government seals are being supplied by any one in the country," he said. "While counterfeits have been found in the past, in the past, prosecutions have taken place, and no counterfeit seals are being found at the present time."

Sir Henry produced a circular published in the United States which quoted prices for labels, seals and corks, and which was headed by this statement: "We shall be pleased to quote on any new item if you will submit complete original sample, as we have facilities to duplicate same, regardless of its make-up."

Sir Henry stated that forged seals and labels made in the United States are extremely well done, and are difficult to detect.

Sight of Rich Food Ends Hunger Strike

Port Colborne, Oct. 6.—For 13 days Steven Hornik, who is described as a religious fanatic, has been refusing to eat. God will not let me," he told a physician who was called in. The doctor gave up.

He notified Chief Constable Fred Davies. The chief took Hornik to a restaurant, and ordered a double-sized meal. Putting the wan-looking hillbilly on the other side of the table, the chief began excavating the appetizing mountain of food and boiling it with smothered sounds of joy. He finished one half and was digging into the second, when Hornik gave in. He ate the other half. He says the hunger strike is off.

TARZAN OF THE APES, No. 49. (Metropolitan Newspaap er Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Tarzan of the Apes needed no interpreter to translate the story of those distant shots. With incredible rapidity he was swinging through the trees straight toward the savages' village. While men, of his own race, might even now be suffering the agonies of torture. On he sped.

Presently he caught the reflection of a distant blaze Ah—He was not quite too late! The death blow had not been struck. From the nearest tree Tarzan coiled his rope. Then there arose suddenly above the tendun cries of the darting dervishes, the awful challenge of the superman.

The rope sped with singing whir above the blacks' heads. A huge fellow lunged backward struggling and shrieking, his body moved toward the trees, then straight into the air, disappearing into the foliage. The blacks, knowing who fright, raced madly for the village gate. D'Arnot was left alone!

Now from the trees came a crash and the black came screaming to earth again, to be quietly white he had fallen. Immediately after came a white body, slighting erect. D'Arnot saw a clean-limbed young giant emerge and come quickly to him . . . Some new creature of torture, doubtless.

Without a word Tarzan of the Apes cut the bonds that held the Frenchman. Weak from suffering and loss of blood, he would have fallen but for the strong arm that caught him. He felt himself lifted from the ground. There was a sensation as of flying. Then he lost consciousness.

CONTRASTS

Contrast seems to be the order everywhere just now with upsets in the labor market and one end of the world brushing the other. Gandhi appears in London in quaint dress to the westerner and drinks goat's milk, while the occidental world moves on, in its own way.

Gandhi went to Canterbury cathedral on Sunday and there with head bowed the Indian mystic worshipped. How strange to him must have seemed the ceremonial wherein the west worships God. More natural of course must have seemed his own way of approach to the Deity in adoration, praise, and prayer.

Here two forms of religion met and behind the exterior forms and in humanity they catch a glimpse of the eternal verities which guide life.

East is East and West is West. Will the twain meet on common ground in this age or in some future age? Though the differences in mind, religious worship and in politics, in customs and in language are very great, many hope that the two states of mind will some day come to understand one another.

LAUGHTER AND HOOTS DID IT

One of the healthiest signs of vitality among the people of the United States was demonstrated on Saturday when a Chicago crowd booed a terrible gangster chief and his henchmen at a college rugby game. Many may not think that the collegian represents all that there is in life, and he has some weak points but he does represent law and order.

It must have been a shock to the king of gangland who loves most of all the admiration of the crowd even if it is mingled nicely and spicely with horrors.

But to be booed and laughed at, what gangster could stand that!

Fear of laughter and ridicule are the weap ponts in the armor of most men and even of the gang crowd.

The chorus of hoots at the "heroes" of the underworld drove the fearful man who travels with a body guard even to a ball game, from the stand at the end of the third period.

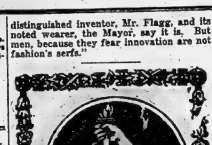
Forty thousand throats and millions of hoos from that student body were too much for the gang chief. It took the students to bring his fellow to a reasonable sense of himself. How he must have suffered as he walked away, beaten by laughter, hoots and catcalls!

ONE WAY OF WORK

Down the east coast of the United States nature is favorable to the man who is out of work to a small degree at least in providing him with entertainment and a chance livelihood in fishing in the waters of the Atlantic. Inspector Calude Sanlon in charge of the fish and game division of the State conservation Department of New York, reported the other day that unusually large catches of fish are helping the unemployed to solve their difficulties.

"In all my life, I never saw so many men fishing as there are these days," the inspector said. "I spoke to lots of them on a tour I made early this week in and about the waters of the Sound and its tributaries and I find that many of them are men out of work who utilize their enforced idleness getting fresh fish for their families."

And nature favors the unemployed. The blue fish and mackerel, the inspector found, are practically pushing one another out of the water in the Sound. He attributed the runs of fish to the anti-pollution campaign under the law of 1930, he said. The fish have had a chance to spawn in greater numbers and are so numerous now that they are caught with little effort.



Nature and human laws regarding fishing have made the fish plentiful in the Sound.

HEADGEAR

The hat trend stirs a New York Times writer to contrast men and women as to head dress.

"Women have always contended that men are greater slaves to fashion than they are. Look about the men's shops in shirts and turned-down Panamas after the Prince of Wales appeared in that outfit. They cite the fuss about men's summer clothing; how each season the air is filled with protests against coats and collars, and how each season coats and collars form the yoke of the male.

There is to be said in rebuttal that men are slower to adopt a monstrosity or a freak of fashion than women are. Tilted over faces which carry no illusion of Eugenie's profile of the ladies of the Second Empire are jammed the new debris Feathers of every fowl that flies or goes clucking in the barnyard rise from the earmuffs of ladies whose faces were not made for such adornment. It will not be so with the James Montgomery Flagg-James Joseph Walker visored beret. Men will approach this confection warily. It may be as satisfactory for driving, for the beach and for the tennis-court as its distinguished inventor, Mr. Flagg, and its noted wearer, the Mayor, say it is. But men, because they fear innovation are not fashion's serfs."

"NOW BIN THE SUMMER"

Now let the lean hens
Into the fields
To fatten on what they can glean
Of the yields
Of the wheat that is sacked;
Of the corn that is shocked;
Now open the hives,
Let the honey be crocked.
Now rob the orchards
Of pippins and prunes;
Let the last purple Concords
Be gathered in noons
That mock at the sun
With a promise of frost.
Now bin the Summer
Before it is lost.

—Ethel Romig Fuller.

THE AMERIAN EAGLE SCREAMS but mere noise does not make good money or good men, and the Canadian dollar without the eagle is entitled to a whole lot of respect as United States business men who were quick to discount it are finding out. When the British Government made the big hoardings of Uncle Sam look like thirty cents many American business men were quick to demand a substantial discount on the Canadian dollar. Canadians quickly stopped dealing with their neighbors across the border, naturally. Now many United States business houses are sending out S.O.S. calls on account of sinking business with the nation's best customer, and declaring that "The Canadian Dollar Looks Good to Them" for 100 cents. You can't fool a Yankee trader.

WALL STREET may say the Canadian dollar is only worth ninety cents, or thereabouts, but that don't make it so. Just adds variation to the game of exchange which is a kind of pinochle and crap game devised for the making of easy money by folks who are well versed in this dollar game of heads they win, tails you lose.

AS A NATIVE DRINK, so it is, someone has said, or something to that effect. so the billion pound cup of breakfast coffee consumed in the United States in six months may throw some insight on the national character if one could read the nation's fortune in the coffee cup. That coffee drinking is increasing in the United States is evident from the fact that imports for the first six months of 1931 totalled 972,662,000, fifteen per cent larger than last year and 28 per cent above the average for the 1926-30 period. For a long time known as a nation of coffee drinkers our neighbors seem to be drinking harder than ever of the cup that cheers and opens the day with sunshine, the Java cocktail, held by some to be the cause of the yellowish tint characteristic of many of the citizens of these or those United States.

Charged with being afflicted with an affection which might be named aurascleriosis, because that isn't the name, but what's in a name, and all that stuff, or somefin, as Andy would say, a prominent member of the Rotary Club was presented with a loud speaker, or rather loud hearer, Monday as a mark of recognition of his favorite slogan of "Louder," which has rasped the throats of weak-voiced members with announcements to make. The loud-earer was chastefully engraved with appropriate texts and the presentation was accompanied by appropriate speechifying by those concerned.

WHEN WEATHER IS MADE TO ORDER

Looking ahead to inventions that seem fantastic until they are in everyday use has been the prerogative of the novelist. Business men are not for wasting time imagining conditions of sales resistance in 1950, but are trying to plan for the next "big change."

One man's guess is as good as another's. Mr. W. B. Spooner, Jr., writing in Advertising and Selling, advises consideration of "air conditioning." If ten years from next July the only hot and humid spot in town are the streets, business of all kinds will be greatly affected.

Automobile manufacturers and gasoline stations may see a falling sales curve. Why leave a cool, comfortable house for a drive in the heat? More books and magazines may be sold in Summer. Electric fans will be unsalable. Soft drinks will not be in demand. The consumption of salad ingredients will drop. Heavier meals will be eaten at home and in cool restaurants. Window-shopping will be as out of date as a quilting bee. The invigorating air in the stores will lure women to leisurely strolls inside.

While the "air conditioners" are perfecting their machinery the prudent business man will estimate what an even temperature and ideal humidity are going to do for his product.—New York Times.

CANADA'S NEGLECT OF MARKETS IN CHINA

Possibilities of trade with China are discussed by Mr. Bruce A. Macdonald, Assistant Trade Commissioner in Shanghai, in the Commercial Intelligence Journal. China's total imports in 1930 were valued at 1,310 million taels. or 622 million gold dollars, as compared to 1,366 million taels, or 810 million gold dollars in 1,288 million gold dollars in 1,008 million gold in silver values, but a decrease of 208 million, or roughly 25 per cent. in terms of gold dollars.

This compares with Canada's total imports, which registered a decline of 290 million gold dollars in the same period, or a decrease from 1,268 millins gold dollars to 1,008 million gold dollars in 1930. The imports of China's 450,000,000 people were only 62 per cent. of the import trade. Secondly, imports of

There are three striking features of China's import trade. Firstly, twenty-five commodities alone account for 58 per cent. of China's Impotr trade. Secondly, imports of food and clothing each constitute about 25 per cent. of all imports and, thirdly, one-half of the 85 per cent. of China's import trade is in produce for which Canada cannot compete. Canada has a possible opportunity to compete for over seven per cent. of China's import trade, a good opportunity for another 13 per cent. and an excellent opportunity for an additional nine per cent. In gold dollars the value of the "possible" trade is roughly about 50 million, that in which the trade possibilities are "good" approximately 80 million gold dollars. and that in which Canada's position is "excellent"—or in other words as strong or stronger than any competitor—approximately 55 million gold dollars. The actual position in which the Dominion in 1930 sold to China six million gold dollars' worth of commodities, or one per cent. of her total imports, is in striking contrast to the above possibilities.—Mail & Empire, Toronto.

BUSSES BEWARE

While the Bennett Government is preparing the way for the Railway Commission to investigate the railway problem in Canada, news comes from France which may portend more than the deliberations of economists. In brief, France thinks she has solved the question of rail versus road competition by fixing new-style busses to rails.

The New York Times of Sept. 27 gives details of the experimental run of the new device. A motorcoach, using an ordinary automobile engine, carrying ten passengers, made the fastest run in continental European railway history. The Deauville-Trouville journey of 127½ miles was finished in 124 minutes. An average speed of 75 miles per hour was maintained, with occasional stretches for short periods of 87 miles per hour for demonstration purposes.

The French State Railways will immediately construct many similar coaches for use at once on provincial lines.

The rail-bus of French design uses ordinary pneumatic tires with special flanges. The coach body is modelled after the aeroplane rather than the automobile in order to reduce wind resistance. French railwaymen believe the invention means the dawn of a new era of revived prosperity.—Toronto Globe.

I was just thinking something of the very kind, I dont know whats going to become of your buttons and things while Im away, ma said, and pop said, I dont know what makes you wimmin think you're the only one can make a button go through its paces. Dont you know the best tailers in the world are men? he said.

Well if they are youre a long ways from being one of them, ma said.

Give me that button, Ill show you, pop said, and ma said, Ive got it sewed on already.

Wich she had, and pop said, Then give me that rip Benny was tawking about.

Good, that will be a reel test for you, ma said. And I ran and got my other pants and ma gave pop the sewing baskit and pop started to take a needle with thred on the end of it, ma saying, My goodness you wouldent sew a brown rip with white thred? would you?

Why not, why shouldent I put a little cheerful contrast in the drab life of a poor rip? pop said. However, for conventions sake Ill thred a brown needle, I mean needle a brown thred, he said.

Wich he started to do, and ma kepp on looking at him with one eye and reeding the paper with the other, and pop kepp missing the eye and after about 5 minnits he said, How can I brown a thred needle with that doubting eye boring right through me.

And he quick took 3 safety pins out of the sewing baskit and pinned up the rip on the outside.

Giving ma about 10 times more plezzure than if he had did it rite.

5 CHURCHMEN ARE HONORED

Toronto, Oct. 6.—Five outstanding figures in the Church of England were honored by Wycliffe College last night at the annual convocation when honorary degrees of Doctor of Divinity were conferred on Right Rev. Derwyn, Bishop of Niagara; Rev. W. T. Hallam, Bishop-elect of the Diocese of Athabasca; Venerable J. W. J. Andrew, Archdeacon of Eighty Venerable N. I. Perry, Archdeacon of Welland; and Very Rev. A. C. A. Hall, Dean of Holy Trinity Cathedral, Shanghai, China.

The convocation address delivered at Wycliffe College was headed by Rev. R. B. McElheran, Principal of the college; J. Shirley Denison, K. C., Chairman of the Council; Sir William Mulock, Chancellor of the University of Toronto; and Rev. C. K. Masters, who conducted the proceedings.

26 Graduates In Diocese

One by one, following the opening exercise, the candidates for honorary degrees were presented by their sponsors. Introducing the Bishop of Niagara, Rev. Canon Cody stated that he was "a worthy member of the Episcopal bench, a true father in God to his clergy and to the people of his diocese." Canon Cody also made mention of the fact that 26 graduates of Wycliffe College are now laboring in the Diocese of Niagara under his jurisdiction.

The recent three appointments to the Upper House have raised the number of Wycliffe graduates to become bishops to a total of 16, declared Rev. Canon Cody, commending the Bishop-elect of the Diocese of Saskatchewan to Principal McElheran. Dr. Dyson Hague also acted as sponsor for the Archdeacon of Welland. The Archdeacon of Eighty was sponsored by Right Rev. W. G. White, D.D., Bishop of Honan, China, who averred that no more important work was done by the clergy than that rendered in lonely country parishes.

Congratulates College

Presenting the Dean of Holy Trinity Cathedral, Shanghai, who is a son-in-law of the late Principal Cosmeas, his Lordship the Bishop of Toronto congratulated Wycliffe on the addition to the Episcopale bench of graduates of the college and members of its staff. "It is evidence, in my mind, of the confidence of the Church in this college," the Bishop of Niagara declared. "I am sure that all of you here at Wycliffe will offer the most sincere and earnest prayers to God for the outpouring of His spirit on these new bishops."

After the degrees had been conferred by Principal McElheran, each of the new Doctors of Divinity spoke briefly. The Bishop-elect of Saskatchewan spoke of the drought and consequent distress now existent in the eastern part of that province, and said: "There is being received in the trek to the north to Meadow Lake the same sight as was seen thirty years ago, the prairie schooner has come back into existence."

The address was given by Rev. Leonard A. Dixon, O.B.E., Chaplain of the S.C.A. at the University of Toronto.

1300 Attend Firemen's Ball for Sake of Sweet Charity

All Classes and Ranks Mingle in Yearly Event

MAYOR'S WORDS

Till four o'clock in the morning. They danced the whole night thru.

The fire regrets adequately describes the enjoyment of those who attended the second annual firemen's Ball held on Monday night in the Armouries. Young and old, rich and poor, mingled together in one happy throng in a programme that took considerable preparation by the Firemen. It was estimated that over 1300 were in the Armouries during the evening and the majority stayed until the National Anthem was heartily sung some time in the early hours of Tuesday morning. The fine gathering the Firemen's Association will have a surplus with which to purchase Christmas cheer for those who are unfortunate or having a struggle to make both ends meet during this period of depression. The total surplus will not be known for some time until a final check is made.

The decorations in the Armouries and detail men under Chief Department is deserving of commendation for the splendid evening that was provided. Each and everyone has worked faithfully for the last week, while on Monday the whole day was devoted to arranging the Armouries, in order that the fire brigade would be able to attend to their calling. The equipment from the halls were moved down to the Armouries and detail men started ready to move at the first fire call. A telephone was placed in the Armouries and a siren set up so that would inform the men detailed for various duties, should anything early part of the evening was devoted to culture, while the younger set had their innings in the latter part, when they danced to the Comedorse. a musical organization of merit and under the direction of Albert Adams.

Opened By Mayor

Mayor George-A. Reid opened the evening with a short address, praising the Fire Department for the support they had given the charity organizations in the city and the skill with which they had filtered and lent a helping hand. He thanked the citizens for the wonderful support they had given the ball of last year and this, and he was sure that the money would be put to a good use.

Alderman Harry J. Hill, chairman of fire in the city council, also spoke a few words thanking the citizens for their attendance and patronage and hoped they would enjoy themselves to the fullest.

There were 178 tables of euchre in play during the night and excellent arrangements had been made to keep the play moving. It was a brilliant sight standing in the gallery of the Armouries watching the hands as they lifted and fell over the card tables. As soon as the euchre was finished the committee cleared the floor and the prizes had been distributed, the Commodores went into action and far into the night jollity reigned. Practically every merchant in town the evening's enjoyment and the contributed at least one prize to Firemen are grateful to each and every one for the help given. Every dance was a prize dance but the two balloon dances were the high spots of the evening.

Miss Jessie Tilley of 57 Alexander Street, won the Chesterfield suite, which was drawn by His Worship Mayor Reid as were the tickets for the other twenty-five door prizes. His worship also assisted in awarding the euchre prizes. The prizes were all well worth winning and keen competition was held in many of them, especially the balloon dances. After the drawing for the euchre prizes the assembly moved to detachments in the upper rooms of the Armouries, where a delightful buffet lunch was served. THE GAY BANDIT OF THE BORDER

All through that dawn and sunrise and the hours of early morning Ted kept vigil outside the door, occasionally pacing the length of the hall harassed with fear. A dozen times he decided to bring Dr. Price, but always he held back, remembering the warning words of that stricken man beyond the door. What mistrust could Bob have of the bluff, plain-spoken doctor? Yet he had been so insistent, "No doctor," he had said, "no doctor."

By the quiet Ted knew that no one had quieted. The man was pitifully weak and in distress. The girl still crouched by the bed. She seemed strangely out of place in that lowcut spangled dress. Her black eyes were without hope.

"He hasn't known me," she whispered up at him. "Not once."

Ted looked once more into the man's agonized face and made his decision.

"I'm going to bring Dr. Price."

"But—"

"I know. It puts Bob at his mercy. But if we don't get help, he'll die."

Then after a moment he added slowly, "And Price won't tell."

"How can you be sure?"

Ted's big hands clenched. He looked down at the pale, unconscious figure beneath the bed clothes. This man was his friend, and now he lay there helpless and dying. "I won't let him tell," Radcliffe answered quietly.

For the first time that day a sense of security came to the girl. She looked at the square, firm jaw and again the solace of his protection brought her head to his big, determined man before her was an ally.

Price was already up. Ted found the red-faced doctor cheerful in cigar and sipping a steaming cup of coffee.

"Just got back from the Mexican quarter," he grumbled. "If they'd only have their babies at some while man's hour—" Then he stopped as he saw Ted's tense, anxious look in Radcliffe's eyes.

"It's about Bob," Ted told him. "Bring whatever you need for a gun wound and come with me."

Hastily Price filled his satchel and followed the man to the car. "What's happened?"

"Bob was shot in the side. He has lost a lot of blood. He's delirious now."

"When was he shot?"

"Last night before midnight."

"What in hell did you wait till now for?"

Ted was silent. As they sped down the street Price pulled his hat low over his forehead.

"Just how did it happen?"

Ted's hands were fixed on the winding road ahead. "I did it accidentally. A gendarme at Price for the silence that followed. After a time the doctor asked, "Who is with Bob now?"

"A girl from over in Mendoza's. She knows a little about nursing."

Again silence. They drove up before the house.

Inside, Ann met them. She had changed her costume for a simple linen dress, and beyond a close glance and a nod, Price gave no sign of her presence.

For a long time he looked down on the bed. At last he called for warm water, and with Ted's help changed the bandages. Through it all Bob lay in a state of half-consciousness. Once he darkened the room, then again sat in troubled silence watching the pale face. To Ted and the girl he spoke no word until they were on the porch outside.

"Well?" Ted forced himself to ask.

"Quien sabe? He may make it or he may not. But he's lost too much blood."

"Give him some of mine."

"I may this evening. If there is no change for the worse, transfusion, in the meantime, keep him quiet, perfectly quiet."

Price turned to go, and at the bottom of the steps Ted stopped him.

"Dr. Price, I can't tell you why I'm asking it, but not a single soul must know of this. No one in the world but you. That is Bob's wish. I've got to count on you."

Before the doctor could answer an army car drove up to the gate and, walking forward, they found the major stepping dust from his uniform.

"Haven't a minute to stop," he called, "but I was just a little worried. This morning the sergeant found blood on the saddle Bob rode after that Mexican was shot. Some of his men turned over and Ted. He forced himself to smile. "I remember Bob let him his hand on a clump of mesquite as we rode along. I noticed then he was handkerchief around it when we got to the car."

Blood laughed. "I'm getting to be an old woman. But with men getting picked off right around your own tent. Oh, you haven't heard. Price, have you?" And the major, eager as always to be the bearer of news told the doctor of the past night's encounter.

Ted watched Price's eyes tighten with suspicion, then harden into certainty. Once he glanced quickly up at Radcliffe.

"And so," Blount concluded, "nobody yet knows who the killer is."

With his foot Price traced an intricate pattern in the sand. "I wonder," he said at last, "I wonder some of us don't know who he is."

The major looked up eagerly, then decided it was one of Price's jokes. He laughed. "Don't want guesses, doctor. I want facts. If you're going to town, Price, I'll give you a lift."

But the doctor had suddenly changed his mind. "Thanks," he said. "Ted and I have a few important things to say to each other within the next half-hour."

Turning on his heel, he made his way back to the house.

CHAPTER XXIV.

On the porch Dr. Price slaid into a quiet and viewed for a time on his cigar while Ted sat silently at the top step looking across the sands. Dimly he knew the thoughts that were passing through the doctor's mind. He knew too where those thoughts at last must lead. There was no stopping that. He had taken a chance—and lost, the least he could do now was to insure the silence of this man. Tensely he sat and waited. At last he felt the doctor's eyes upon him. Ted looked up. Price's face was worn, the eyes troubled with this new, unwelcome knowledge. At last he spoke.

"I've half expected this. More than half. And yet it doesn't make the truth any sweeter." His voice came in a slow undertone, as if unwilling that frame the words. "So the trail of El Coyote leads here! Another of life's little comedies. Yesterday the unknown terror of the border. Today a helpless, wounded man."

"Not helpless, Dr. Price."

Price looked quickly up. Some new quality in Radcliffe's voice reached him. He understood. "Meaning he has you, Ted. Yes. I take that back about his being helpless. And yet, suppose someone talks—suppose I talk? The doctor's words came as a direct challenge.

Ted's mouth was a straight line. "That man inside," he answered grimly, "is my friend. He was my father's friend, and when the whole world was pulled from beneath my feet he gave me a hand. He stood between me and—and—not sure what. He was the only friend I had in life. He still is." For a second Ted's voice trembled. "Until the time has come when I can pay back a little of this friendship, I've one thing. I can see him through now, and I can see that nobody learns from you or from anyone else who El Coyote is."

"Radcliffe," the doctor drawled, "just the least bit like a threat, that."

"It isn't meant to be if you're the man I think you are. When I decided to bring you out I had to decide that no matter what you learned I'd have to talk. And I told myself that unless I had your promise during the first half hour, by force. If I had to, until Bob gets on his feet I'll keep you until he is safe, one way or another. There aren't many things I won't do to keep him safe."

For a long minute the doctor looked into the man's eyes. There was no mistaking the message. At last he rose and laid his hand on Ted's shoulder. "It was a lucky day for him when you came along, boy. Without you he'd be done already. As for me, you needn't lose a wink. That man inside is my friend, too. So, in the meantime, we'd better both tell the world Bob's out on the range until he gets better, or—"

Silence. A long uncertain silence followed the words. Ted's heavy hand seemed lifted from the man's heart. The leaves of the eucalyptus trees rustled and the hot desert wind played in upon them. From the open door came the sound of a child's soothing voice.

Price looked up. "Who's safe, I suppose?"

Bob told me to get her before he passed out."

The doctor nodded and rose. His understanding eyes were for the moment fogged with the strangeness of it all. He shook his head.

"How little we know anymore—even ourselves. Sometimes we've known Bob. I've hunted with him, ridden with him. He carried a reminiscent, wistful smile. "Once in a country but he even helped me bring a baby into the world, and I thought I knew that quiet man but I only know the side of him, and probably the least important side. Of late nights there's been a drink or a great martyr in other times or lands. He had the courage gift of sacrifice—and it's brought him to this." He turned down the steps. "I'll run over and get a few things and come out tonight. If things get worse—"

And then again that half-smile came to the man's face. "Funny," he said, then added, "You'll never be interested to know that in the eyes of the law you and I are both criminals now." He shrugged his great shoulders. "Well, what the law thinks won't drive me to moralizing. In fifty years I've learned enough to blast half the republics in Verdi."

"It's a very wicked world, Ted. When you reach my age you'll realize it. In the meantime keep Bob quiet."

General Election in G. Britain Decided on

MacDonald to Issue Manifesto Calling for "Doctor's Mandate"

VOTE OCT. 28th

Immediate General Elections Will be Held

London, Oct. 6 (AP)—Great Britain will vote Oct. 28 on a national election on issues of outstanding importance, it was announced today at Buckingham Palace.

It will be the first general election since May 30, 1929, when Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin's Conservative Government was swept out of power and the Labor Party returned to the helm for the first time in five years. Since then the representation in parliament was radically reduced but it has held the balance of power throughout the period.

The announcement came after Premier MacDonald had conferred with the King. He was understood to have acquainted the King with the decision of the Cabinet and advised him to dissolve parliament at once. Proroguing parliament and calling a dissolution Thursday with the reading of a speech from the throne which will outline the need for an election.

The new parliament will be called into session early in November, it was said, and will probably sit for six weeks up to the Christmas recess. The election campaign is expected to be the most bitter of all three parties girding for an epochal struggle.

Mr. MacDonald, wearing morning clothes and a derby hat, motored almost unnoticed through the early morning haze to his conference with the king.

He spent about thirty minutes in His Majesty's private apartments and came back to Downing street. A small crowd gathered outside the place to watch the changing of the guard waved a greeting as he reached the door in acknowledgment.

London, Oct. 6—The British Cabinet decided unanimously Monday night to call an immediate general election, it was officially authoritatively following a late session.

No formal official statement was given out in the case of the meeting, which lasted two hours, but it was learned that the election campaign will be fought by the National Government on the basis of a manifesto to be issued by Premier Ramsay MacDonald.

The unanimity of the decision was taken to indicate that Sir Herbert Samuel and other Liberals, also, whose attitude during the last few days has been doubtful, have thrown in their lot with the Prime Minister and will give him their wholehearted support.

The Cabinet's decision followed a meeting Monday morning of a group of 22 Liberal members of Parliament, headed by Sir John Simon, had pledged their unqualified support to the Prime Minister.

Mr. MacDonald also visited Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George, veteran Liberal leader, at his country home at Churt where the two statesmen conferred with him at some length.

Will Ask for New Mandate

It was understood that the Prime Minister's manifesto will ask for a free hand to deal with the British situation. It is expected to be "the doctor's mandate" which he already has declared to be necessary.

Nothing was known last night about what attitude he will adopt regarding a tariff, but it is being considered certain that it would be left entirely to the sectional forming the national cabinet could adhere.

Parliament will be prorogued Wednesday, prior to evening it prorogued and it is expected to be dissolved Thursday, in which case the election would be held November 28.

The official announcement on these matters will not be made, however, until Mr. MacDonald has conferred with the King, which he will do today.

The Cabinet's decision came as a general surprise to everybody, especially since lobby reports during the evening emphasized an expectation that the Cabinet would be disrupted following the Prime Minister's visit to Lloyd George.

The veteran Liberal leader, it is said, warned Mr. MacDonald that it would be a grave mistake to call an election, describing such a step as "a perilous adventure," and assuring him that if an appeal to the country were decided upon he would advise the Liberal party members in the Administration, opposed to the Government.

How well founded this gossip may have been could not be learned last night.

Emergency Legislation Concluded

Returning to London from Churt, Mr. MacDonald picked up Chancellor of the Exchequer Rt. Hon. Philip Snowden, who lives near Mr. Lloyd George's home. Shortly after they reached their offices Sir Clive Wigram, principal private secretary to the King, called on the Premier and they conferred for half an hour.

The House of Commons yesterday completed Mr. Snowden's program for balancing the budget.

The finance bill passed through all stages in the House of Lords and received royal assent. This bill embodies the economy bill, which was given its second reading yesterday, concluded the emergency legislation and cleared the decks for the general election battle.

Criticism Forces Curtius to Surrender His Office

This Makes Total Voluntary Cut of 20 Per Cent

Berlin, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—Foreign Minister Julius Curtius today submitted his resignation to Chancellor Bruening.

Herr Curtius succeeded the late Gustave Stresemann, his political father, as foreign minister in the cabinet of Herman Mueller in October of 1929. When that ministry resigned in March, 1930, he was again selected to guide Germany's foreign affairs. He was Chancellor for a brief period in 1927.

He has been subjected recently to criticism over the abandonment of the Austro-German customs pact and its subsequent disapproval by the World Court. National Socialists and Nationalists particularly have agitated against his policy of approachment with France.

New Zealand Governor Gen'l Asks for Salary Reduction

Rapprochament With France Brings Him Into Disfavor

2 YEARS MINISTER

Wellington, New Zealand, Oct. 6 (U.P. Cable via Reuters).—"I feel I should manifestly appeal to others" to display a "full measure of self sacrifice according to their means during the present emergency, unless I do the same myself," said Lord Bledisloe, Governor-General of New Zealand, in requesting the government to make a further reduction of 10 per cent in his salary and allowances today.

This makes a total voluntary reduction in the Governor-General's salary and allowances, of twenty percent.

Prime Minister G. W. Forbes paid warm tribute to Lord Bledisloe's "generous action."

SHOW-DOWN IN CAPONE CASE

Gang Lord Talks to Press On Eve of His Trial

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 6.—Alphonse Capone's challenge to the federal Government to try to convict him as an income tax evader reached the show-down stage today, with the gang chief expressing confidence of acquittal if, as he put it, he is given a "fair trial."

"And by that I mean that jurors receive the evidence with open minds and reserve their judgment of my guilt or innocence until the final arrest," the gang lord said on the eve of his trial in which the prosecution alleges he failed to pay $215,087 on a six year income of $1,038,654.

Capone said he pleaded guilty to the income tax charge two months ago because of the expense of a trial and because it was the opinion of his counsel that he might be "it is to "not guilty" when it became certain Judge James H. Wilkerson would not accept it on any agreement between the prosecution and defense for a short sentence in consideration for his admission of guilt.

Should the jury in this present trial convict him on all counts of the indictment he will be liable to a maximum sentence of 32 years and a fine of $80,000.

Federal Building, Chicago, Ill., Oct. 6.—Judge Wilkerson, the swarthy, smiling ruler of Chicago's gangs went on trial in United States District Court today in an opening session that was as theatrical as it was significant.

Charged with evading taxes on an alleged six year income of $1,038,-654, the burly gang chieftain was brought before Judge James H. Wilkerson and permitted to substitute "not guilty" for the guilty plea he recently withdrew. The first duty was the selection of a jury.

For the government it was the crucial test of its campaign against Chicago gangsters.

The gangster's entrance and the opening of the trial lacked only a flourish of trumpets to give it the illusion of comic opera. The crowds gathered at every entrance to the Federal building. It was their only chance to see him as the public was barred from the trial, but most of them were disappointed.

Surrounded by a police detail "to see that nothing happened to him," he ran in a side entrance, slipped past the photographers and walked quickly through the crowds and corridors. When he faced the court room, about 20 minutes before court was opened, he was surrounded by reporters and deluged with questions.

Banned 40 Years "Salome" is Produced

London, Oct. 6. — Oscar Wilde's play "Salome" received its first public performance at the Savoy last night after being banned by the censor for forty years. Apparently it is just forty years too late for there are no expressions of anything shocking about it. Professional critics indeed vote the play "boring". Wilde however wrote the play without any idea of its being staged. The production is an ambitious lines and the chief honors are awarded Robert Farquharson as Herod, and Jean Maud makes a strenuous effort to make "Salome" a thrilling character.

BRINGING UP FATHER, By George McManus

OLD GRIMES TAMES A'S AS HE HURLS TWO HIT GAME

Cards Now in Driver's Seat With Regards To Outcome

WIN 6-2

(By Edward J. Neil, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Philadelphia, Oct. 6.—For the first time in five years, the National League representative in the St. Louis Cardinals, held a World Series advantage today over the champions of the American League.

In many ways as the situation could be diagnosed, these surprising Red Shirts of Missouri had the Athletics, "world championships for two straight years, on the run. They lead by the series, two games to one, the first time a National League club has done that since the Cards of 1926 took two of the first three games from the New York Yankees and finally won the series four games to three.

They have Charley Grimes's great pitching due, Lefty Grove and Geo. Earnshaw, in successive games. They have all the better of pitching strength, stronger in relief, in echelony and greatest of all, winning impetus.

Today the veteran pilot, Connie Mack, seeking his third straight world championship and the fifth series title in a row for the American League, sent forth a lineup that was truly desperate.

Against the charges of the Cardinals, rising with the power and savagement of their own Mississippi on a rampage, he had not one forward to throw up against them—Big George Earnshaw, the Red Birds can beat the great righthander as they did the second game, and then there is not a baseball man in his hive of series excitement and conjecture who will concede to A's the slightest chance of catching St. Louis in the final three games.

Maybe Wallberg?

The sanctum buzzed with excitement and showing more and more of his 68 years as he watches the hum-drum of the machine he baseball world hailed as invincible only a week ago, until today when the problem of making quick and dreadful repairs in what was, apparently too late, silent as ever, Mack had nothing to say of his pitching prospects for the fourth game today. It was hoped that he decided to gamble all on Earnshaw. The critics thought he had. But there was also a faint hope of substitution that Rube Walberg, the southpaw who beat Hallahan and Connie through the past American League season, would try his mettle against the closing Cards today with Earnshaw held in reserve for a final do-or-die effort if it is necessary tomorrow.

There was no sports today that Connie had decided to replace his regular second fielder, Jimmy Dykes with Roger Cramer, a young substitute. The "rookie" hampered by inactivity and a wrist that was injured late in the season has not been hitting. But if Connie wants to yank the members of his club who had a part in the defeat, he would have to send nine substitutes against the Cardinals in the fourth game of the series here today.

Once again it was the same old story yesterday. Bewildered and vengeful, seeking to balance the scale for the 13 runs which had been plastered on him last year by the A's in the last series, Marshall Grimes, snarling his hatred added another pitching performance to the three hit 2 to 0 shutout "Wild Bill" Hallahan doled out to the champions in the opening game of the opening pair of contests in St. Louis on Friday.

It was the opening game of three straight days of baseball, a double-header after a week-end cessation of activity, the shadows lengthening to impactity, the day was magnificent for baseball, and even President Hoover, with Mrs. Hoover and a party of friends, were present in the flag-draped box that is the President's own.

As if the presence of the President, who never before had seen the Athletics field in five games or two of them World Series contests were not enough to ensure victory, Connie and Lefty Grove, the long left hander with the tremendous speedball, an almost invincible pitcher in the past American League season, he pull his burning brands from the fire.

They got to Burleigh for two hits, one of them Al Simmons' towering home run with two out and one man on. In the ninth innings, as the Cards baited Robert Moses for 11 hits and four runs and made it a ha-ha-ha fairly came in, to win 3 to 2.

Seven Innings

For seven innings the former pitcher whose hair is thinning on the top fakked spitballs at the helpless A's and baffled them with his curve and control, fanning after inning he went along backed by brilliant fielding, when an occasional base on balls put a man on base, turning them back without a semblance of a hit, even a hard hit ball.

There were visions, of a no-hit game and probably the new crowd of 32,000, that last year yelled for his heart's blood as he infected everything but fisticuffs into his two bitter duels with the A's, wrong to the side of the gallant warrior. They wanted a no-hit game, something never before accomplished in World Series' history, and by the time the eighth inning started they wanted it as badly as though Burleigh were pitching for the Athletics.

But the right hand master of the wry Pozz to start the eighth was the same, the problem of sacrificing personal glory for the good of the team. Earnshaw then takes a chance on a rally, he pitched to Bing Miller to make him hit, following the strategy, that with one out, a ball to an infielder might mean a double play for Burleigh gave Bing a pitch just a trifle too good and the right fielder banged it on a line to centre for a clean single.

The tension lightened. Grimes had equalled the World Series' record of the New York Yankee southpaw, Herb Pennock, who went seven hitless innings defeating the Pittsburgh Pirates a bit in 1926, and he had only to retire one of one hit in a full nine inning game set by Ed. Reulbach of the Chicago White Sox against the Chicago Cubs in the series of 1906 to do it. He got the next three men on flies.

Grimes, who had been ill late in the season and was not considered well enough to start the opening game, had to have a "cycle" pulled out of his neck before he could muster sufficient co-ordination to get two men on grounders and then passed Mickey Cochrane. For seconds later Al Simmons reached across the plate for a high ball on the outside and poked it over into right field wall.

Burleigh's shutout went with that soaring ball and so did his vision of a one-hitter, but by the time he did allow placed him in the choice company of six great hurlers who have performed that feat in the World Series game.

While Hoyt, now with the Athletics, but then with the Yankees, was the most recent southpaw to turn the trick. He beat the Giants in the final battles in the World Series of 1921.

Grimes helped himself to two of the hits that made off Grove and drove in two runs. But again it was the fielding support and error of the rookie sensation, "Pepper" Martin, that featured the attack. After Jim Bottomley had walked with one out, Martin popped-faced Cecve again for the first time he hitted him for three safeties in the series. Then Martin singled, drove Bottomley to third and scored on Jimmy Wilson's son's single, rode home on Charley Gelbert's long fly to right field. Again in the fourth after Chick Hafey had singled, Martin blasted a double to deep right centre and both rode home on Grimes' single. Martin's double, Wilson's single, sent the final run off Mahaffey in the ninth. This action, brand new to World Series play, in the more restricted league in this time this year, is hitting around .400 for the series.

Gabby Street, a recent convert to Connie Mack's theory of silence, was content with the starting pitcher today, but he can afford to gamble with Jesse Haines, successor to Jim Lindsey, both right handers who have done fine relief work on the past two series, are favored for the call.

BADMINTON SEASON SOON UNDERWAY

Cold breezes, and colds in the head, will herald the coming of badminton, the great old English pastime which, in the last few years has swept across Canada. Soon the boys and girls will forget the golfing 100, will be hitting the elusive and birdlike shuttle across the floor with reckless abandon, and soon the day will dawn when the Canadian championships must be decided. Who are the likely winners? Well, Jack Purcell stands out like a sore thumb. Last year he did everything that anyone big way including the far-famed English team. This year, he will probably do the same, but he's not by any means invincible. Perhaps one of the Vancouver stars will take him or a new champion may come from Montreal. In the women's game, there is still Miss Ruth Robertson, the Ottawa star and Canadian champion and her nearest rival last year, Miss Delage, of Quebec. In all it looks like a mighty interesting season for the new indoor winter sport.

LEONARD ON HIS WAY BACK

Will Fight an Unknown In Queensboro Stadium To Show Wares

New York, Oct. 6.—Benny Leonard will try to prove to the New York State Athletic Commission that he still is a good enough fighter to appear in Madison Square Garden.

Officials of the commission will start his come-back in the smaller arena, the retired lightweight champion will meet Pal Silvestri, of Brooklyn, overnight in a ten round bout at the Queensboro Stadium.

The commission recently refused to sanction a Garden bout October 16 between Leonard and Tuffy Griffiths of Trenton, N.J., until Leonard first proved his ability in a smaller club. Should he make a creditable showing tonight the commission is expected to sanction the Walker bout on its original schedule date.

Jimmy Darcy, Milwaukee heavyweight, will face Mateo Ona, hard hitting Spaniard, in the eight round semi-final tonight.

Living and Playing Man's Chief Object

Toronto, Oct. 6.—"While we live, let us live and be happy as we can. Let us play games and more, for in that way we become conscious of the whole population of our fellow men." These were the words of Dr. John Roxborough, of New York, in addressing the recreation congress of the United States and Canada, in session here last night.

And Dr. Brown certainly started something.

Shortly after he had concluded, delegates staged a "play hour". They picked up beads with soda straws, they rushed their shelter across waved floors, they meowed loudly, they played leap frog, they danced and sang.

REDWINGS NEED TWO VICTORIES

Prospect of Shortest Little World Series Since 1928

Rochester, N.Y., Oct. 6.—The shortest "Little World Series" since 1928 was in prospect today as the Rochester Redwings, champions of the International League, and St. Paul, Association champions, prepared for the fifth game of the series.

The Redwings needed only two more victories to clinch the series and their chances looked particularly bright in view of the tremendous batting power they showed in winning three of the first four games in St. Paul.

Last year Rochester had to travel eight games to beat Louisville and in 1928 the series went the full limit of nine games before Kansas City, Association champions that year, in the preceding year, however, with Rochester again representing the International League, Indianapolis won in six games.

Billy Southworth planned to send Carmen Hill, Redwing veteran, to the mound for Rochester for the fifth game, while Lefty Leifield of the St. Paul pitching staff and Johnny Murphy and Russell Van Atta, Advances relief aces indicated a crowd of 15,000.

Eleven Transients In Police Shelter

Although Monday night was mild and pleasant and a good night for hiking, eleven men occupied the transient quarters in the police station—tired, no doubt from their long tramp, and with no desire to proceed further on their way. Two were gentlemen however, were not weary or foot-sore. They left with a car, arrived in town early, they decided to stay, and upon retiring discovered it was very late when they applied for lodging at the police station. This morning they were questioned and on learning they were warned by Sergeant Arthur Wood that they would create a more favorable impression if upon applying for shelter at any police headquarters, they do so at an earlier hour, when they have arrived in the place where they purpose spending the night.

By The Observer

I am still batting a thousand in the World Series, while substituting in this column for the contributor, Burleigh Grimes hang a-fefeat on those White Elephants on Monday that must have been hard to take by the aged Connie Mack. Grimes got ample revenge for the two tough games he lost last year. The Red Birds are on the wing and it looks like curtains for the record that Mack was going to establish. There have been two or three busts in the A's line-up since the series started but it is not Jimmy Dykes of third base. This baby Jaw held his head up in the pinches especially in the fielding plays. In the first game At can only hit so far, when the game has been lost, Mule Gleckson has been lashed to the mast all through the series and it is he is now the fearful target. Martin will steal the laces off his gloves. Wilson has certainly frayed the nerves of all the A's.

Tell Gale, the sensational pacer that burned up the Raging Grand this summer and is owned by J. A. Ross of Ottawa, season will be shipped home this week. Monday afternoon at an exhibition mile will be paced by this horse and the Rideau Ross track and will likely be driven by Vic Fleming of the same city. Tell Gale with the exception of his race in Detroit has had every summary he started in, which only goes to show how breed them right in Canada. He retires for the winter with a mark of 2.09 1-4, a phenomenal record when one considers he is a green horse for his first year. Many horsemen of the district will no doubt make themselves of the opportunity to see this speedy little horse.

Spect is about washed up in this neck of the woods until the hockey season rolls around but I think I will have a few words announcement to make in a few days. The grand and proud boys will be coming to town to give a wrestling exhibition but more of that anon.

Women's Interests in the Home

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman
A Man's Stationery

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like to have some personal stationery printed and I am coming to you for help as I am a little in doubt. I am twenty-five years of age and single.

1. Is white paper the best for me to use.

2. Please also tell me the correct size of the sheet, if single or double, and the texture of it.

3. Is it correct for a man to use his monogram on the sheet? Should it be engraved or printed?

4. Should my address be on the paper too, and also on the envelope?

Michael.

1. I am delighted to help you in the choice of your letter paper, for so few men give enough attention to this most important social detail. Thank you for letting me help. A gentleman is very much judged by his letter paper, for there are certain things that just must be done about it, and certain things that just mustn't be done. Let's talk about them:

1. Yes, white or a just-off-white shade, or a very light gray. Or, if you prefer, Scotch granite. But never a tinted or pastel.

2. I consider that the best of social letter-paper for a man is the double sheet, six and one-half inches wide, and eight and one-half inches long. It may be white, or pearl gray. Kid finish is a perfect texture for this paper. It may be stamped in black, or in very dark gray, almost black. It should be heavy paper, and of as good a texture and quality as you can afford.

Some men plan a letter-paper ensemble, consisting of this double sheet that I have described, a single sheet of the same kind of paper, and a correspondence card of half the height of the sheet. All three items fit into the same envelope.

Another interesting size for a man, if you with a large single sheet, is the slightly less than full, professional or business. For size. This is more appropriate for the letter that is more professional, or the dictation of the social. But this use also there is another size very popular with men: 7 1-4 by 10 1-4.

3. It is never correct for a man to use a monogram on his paper. He may use his two or three initials, in block letters, with a period after each letter. Or he may use his street address engraved across the top of the page. He should have a die made for this, and the paper should be stamped with this, engraved, that is not printed.

4. You may use your address, as well as the initials, if you wish. The initials on the left; the address on the right. And you may use the address too on the back of the envelope if you wish.

And here is the important thing about men's letter-paper these days: most men have letter-paper that they use for all kinds of letters except the formal. And for this paper are engraved the name and address.

Michael Angelo
Four Seal Mansions
New York

The paper is of the 8 by 10, or the 7 1-4 by 10 1-4 size, of light or heavy weight bond, or a fine laid paper.

The stamping should be in black letters, of black, or dark blue or very dark gray.

BRIDGE ST. W.M.S.

The Women's Missionary Society of Bridge Street United Church held their October meeting in the parlor of the Church on October 1st. The president was under the superintendent of Mrs. M. C. Reid's group, and a most interesting study of Missions in Angola, Africa, was presented by story and lantern slides. The meeting opened with prayer by the president, Mrs. (Dr.) Bishop. Scripture lesson from Acts IV, was read by Miss Reeves: a solo, "Rest in the Lord," was beautifully rendered by Mrs. C. E. McClinton and enjoyed by all. Mrs. Bishop introduced the subject, that of the mission field in Africa. It came into the United Church through the conversional body, their mission being established there fifty-one years ago. Missionary activities are centred in one province, Angola, and here are three outstanding stations.

The late Moderator, Dr. Gunn, in memory of his two sons who were drowned in Muskoka, has established a department of manual training in the boys' school.

Dr. Walter P. Currie, the first Canadian missionary to Africa, was a missionary statesman of whom all Canadians may well be proud. The Currie Institute for Boys stands as a memorial of his arduous and faithful work. There are now 200 village schools surrounding these stations and they are taught entirely by native teachers, specially trained and supervised by the station station." The work of the mission is to transform the old slave trail with all its horrors into a "highway for God" with all its joys.

Today a fine railroad built largely by British capital runs right through the country sufficiently near all our stations for the missionary to make frequent visits. Mr. J. H. Oldham, secretary of International Missionary Council, has said, "This is Africa's Century."

The meeting was closed by prayer and a social time was enjoyed.

B.Y.P.U. BANQUET

A very enjoyable time was spent last evening when the B.Y.P.U. of the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church held their annual banquet.

The tables were very tastefully decorated and laden with good things to eat. After the address by the President, Miss Gertrude Fisher, acted as Chairman and the program was as follows:

Sing-Song: Piano solo, Mr. Alex Gordon; Violin solo, Miss Phyllis May; Piano solo, Miss Jean Stevenson.

Mr. Alex Gordon of the O.S.D. was the speaker for the evening and told in a very interesting manner of his life's mission in Newfoundland and Labrador. A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Gordon.

The election of officers for the ensuing year then took place and the result was as follows:

President, Miss Mabel Peck; 1st. Vice President, Miss Hazel Sarley; 2nd Vice President, Mr. Lorne Andrews; 3rd Vice President, Mr. Edgar Jones; Secretary, Miss Edith Looker; Treasurer, Mr. Frank Cook; Pianist, Miss Jean Stevenson; Pianist, Mr. Wentzell Hudson; Reporter, Miss Gertrude Fisher; Song Leader, Mr. Frank Hitchon; Communion Directory, Reverend Ship Commission, Mr. Sid Knowles; Service Commission, Mr. Eleanor Jones; Fellowship Commission, Miss Evelyn Hunter; Devotional Commission, Mr. Arthur Looker; Special Social Committee, Miss Audrey Rowland, Miss Violet Hobson, Miss Dreatha Lloyd and Mr. Joe Blackburn, Mr. Eugene Richon, Convener.

The evening was brought to a close by the singing of Auld Lang Syne and God Save the King.

DODGE FOUR BULLETS

Toronto, Oct. 5.—Dodging four rapid-fire bullets from the automatic of Detective Maxwell Richardson last night, when cornered behind a car in a garage under the Bloor-George Apartments, Bloor Street at St. George Street, Ronald Kinsella escaped convict leaped out through a back door into the arms of a posse of citizens.

Disregarding Richardson's warning to remain still or he would be shot, Jenks kept manoeuvring behind parked cars in the garage until four bullets whizzed by him, then he bolted out of the door and ran around to Bloor Street, where citizens blocked his escape until Richardson arrived and handcuffed his prisoner.

This was an aftermath of two different automobile chases in the streets of Toronto yesterday in which Detectives Richardson and Train had in force a machine car at a speed of 60 miles an hour.

TEACH CHILDREN

By Constance Cameron

A good many times we may have the right idea but fail short in its execution. That is a pretty human and ordinary pitfall to all endeavor, whether in child rearing or in other activities. But good intentions aren't enough in any line. The result the execution, should be thought out as carefully as the plan.

Two opposite cases come to mind in regard to children. I think we all realize the value of allowing the little fellows to fare forth as young business men when the desire comes to them, so far as their strength and time will permit. The contacts, the fair play, the responsibility of giving worthy goods for the money received, are all potential virtues which are easily learned by young boys if we help them a little.

The two boys I'm thinking of each decided, to sell magazines. The first was "encouraged" by his mother to the extent that she telephoned all her friends and lined up a good many customers for the lad. On the days when the periodicals arrive, she took the child and the magazines into her car and drove the child to each home, waiting patiently while he delivers them.

I doubt whether any could convince her that she is failing as a mother in this matter. Obviously her intentions are so obviously good, she is failing. Also in the overly solicitious mother, the mother who smothers and strangles her young.

I have never seen the other little lad's mother. He came alone, solicited me for a weekly magazine, and has never failed to bring it on time, rain or shine. Last week he requested a subscription, saying: "I've only two customers in this end of the city, and I'm raining I'm going to telephone first and be sure they're home before I come 'way out here." That has learned efficiency.

Later in the day I got to get all my business cleaned up the first of the week, because I'm going on a picnic Saturday and I wouldn't enjoy it if I knew I hadn't well done.

Before leaving, he presented me with his business card telling me that, aloud it was the only way of other magazines he handles I could call him! Here's a lad, about as big as a pint of cider, not quite seven or eight years old, who has learned some valuable lessons in business responsibility and efficiency. Methods because he has been allowed to conduct his business independently.

It is one thing to approve your child's ambitions; it is quite another to let him be free and execute them himself, thereby deriving the profit from them that you hope for.

WEATHER IDEAL FOR FARM WORK

After-Harvest Cultivation Well Advanced Everywhere

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 6 (CP)—Weather conditions continue ideal for farm work, according to the weekly crop report issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Hoed crops are nearly all good and fall wheat is showing excellent growth. It will be in good condition when winter comes.

After harvest cultivation is well advanced almost everywhere. Ploughing is more than half completed in some counties. The potato yield, both in southern and northern Ontario, is proving up to or above the average. Temiskaming and Algoma, also with southern counties, report the crop in good shape. Acreage of fall wheat in many cases shows an increase over 1930, due largely to favorable weather conditions.

NEW MARKET IN OUR WEST

Hon. T. L. Kennedy Sees Signs of Revival Westward

Toronto, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Prediction that Ontario would develop a great market in the West, "from which the Province formerly was made yesterday by Hon. T. L. Kennedy, provincial minister of Agriculture, on his return from a two weeks' tour of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

"When the tide turns back on the west again," he said, "there will be a great market for our fruit, cheese and cider."

His trip was to investigate possibilities of the western cattle in Ontario for feeding purposes and then export to England, Scotland and the United States. In these provinces the government was giving 100 per cent. relief, he found there was no reduction in shipping relief, but it was anticipated, and that it would not be profitable to bring cattle, as the crop prospects of the west he estimated that approximately 75 per cent. of a crop would come here during the fall.

Portsmouth, Eng., Oct. 6 — The training ship of the British navy was ordered yesterday to proceed to sea next Thursday to resume its cruise, it was said, on account of the men against reductions in pay.

The fleet will return to Scottish waters with the men apparently satisfied with pay concession granted by the Admiralty last Saturday.

Today's Verse

CAMEO

Your modest eye,
And waving hair,
The lace upon your gown.

The bodice high—
So modish there
To Dr. Crabtree's way.

Are carved for me
By fleeting stroke,
Deep set in golden rim.

So, though I see
More modern folk
Yourself cannot grow dim.

I touch each line,
Wonderingly
Your artistry admire.

Oh, Gra'mere, mine,
Simplicity
Does so inspire!

SPECULATE ON HIS PASSING

Expressions of Sympathy Received From All Parts of World

Englewood, N.H., Oct. 6—There was speculation today, as to what effect his passing would have upon politics, and there was world wide appraisal of his accomplishments in finance and state craft, but doctoring all these was the astounding realization that Dwight W. Morrow, who but a day before had appeared in excellent health, was suddenly dead.

From party heads, leaders of nations, of industries, arts, finance and industry, expression of their grief at new of his death, came flooding in.

In Mexico City, where his most notable diplomatic services were performed as United States Ambassador; in Englewood, where his home has been for 30 years; in New York, where he built his fortune with the Morgan interests, and in China and Japan where his daughter, Anne, and her husband, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh are vacationing, there were equal manifestations of grief.

A United States Senator from New Jersey, a man loved by many to have been on the threshold of even great political distinction that already had come to him, Dwight Morrow died in his sleep at 1.52 p.m. yesterday. A cerebral hemorrhage was the cause of death. He was 58 years old.

Funeral services will take place Englewood, N.J., at the First Presbyterian Church in Englewood.

Arrest After Alleged Bogus House Sale

Toronto, Oct. 5.—Picked up on Queen Street within a block from where he is alleged to have flimflammed a compatriot of $250 a week earlier, Mike Kucher, alias John Bayko, Austrian, was arrested Saturday night by Detective-Sergeant William Black and Detective Harry Smith, charged with theft.

Paul Lash, 22 Draper Street, reported to police last Monday that he had paid over nearly $1,000 to a stranger who talked Russian to him as payment for a house on Royce Avenue, Swansea, which turned out to be false and the seller vanished.

Showing a number of pictures in the rogues' gallery, Lash identified those of Mike Kucher as the Swansea artist. Later the detectives discovered that a man answering Lash's description registered at the King Street private hotel as John Boyko and checked out the day of the theft.

Through him from one address to another, Black and Glassock finally learned he was living on Sullivan Street and arrested him on Queen Street. Part of Lash's $250 may be recovered, police hope.

GAS OFFICIALLY TURNED ON

Bowmanville, Oct. 5—With appropriate ceremonies, gas for domestic fuel was formally turned on in Bowmanville Saturday night when Mayor Elliott raised a torch and lighted a huge gas jet to burn 30 feet in the air. This was the first time in the history of the town that Bowmanville has had gas of any kind for a fuel. Among the speakers for the occasion were Fred W. Bowman, M.P., A. McGuttan, president of the Bowmanville business men's association, J. F. Milner, general manager of the Ontario Shore Gas Company, the owners of the system and Gordon Conant of Oshawa, counsel for the company. Ten miles of mains were laid to bring the gas from Oshawa, and 10,000 feet of mains were laid in the town, making an expenditure of well over $100,000 necessary.

HOOVER CALLS FOR PARLEY

Will Deal With Economic Problems of Europe

Washington, Oct. 5. — President Hoover last night announced that he had summoned leading members of Congress to confer with him at the White House Tuesday night on the international situation.

His plans new, and, he hopes, decisive action in regard to some of the economic problems thrust upon this country by the increasingly serious plight of European nations.

The President acted with dramatic suddenness and in dramatic circumstances in thus assuming world leadership for the second time in three and a half months.

His first international gesture came late on the Saturday afternoon of June 20, when he announced his plan to postpone war debt and reparations payments for one year.

Monday he was on a railway train, returning to Washington from the World Series baseball game at Philadelphia. He had been informed only a little while before of the tragic death of his friend and aide, Senator Dwight W. Morrow of New Jersey. This news was kept from him while he was at the baseball game.

The President's announcement of his congressional conference came immediately after the news was received here that renewed pressure by international bankers had caused the administration to advance the study of plans to prolong the intergovernmental debt moratorium.

Bankers who hold short-term credits in Germany have argued with increasing decisiveness that they must know, before the credits expire next February, what is in store for Germany and Europe.

Specific Plans Not Indicated

The presidential announcement was so vaguely phrased that there was no indication of Mr. Hoover's plans other than that he wanted to secure unity of action between the executive and legislative branches of the government, and that the conference would consider problems which Europe's plight had thrust upon this country.

The way was left open either for domestic or international action based upon the world situation.

AMUSEMENTS

"WATERLOO BRIDGE"
NEW SCREEN HIT

"Waterloo Bridge," Universal's much-discussed picturization of the sensational Robert E. Sherwood drama of the same name, will make its debut upon the Belle screen, tomorrow and Thursday, with Hollywood's best "find," Miss Clarke; Kent Douglass, Enid Bennett and Kent Lloyd in the principal roles.

Directed by James Whale, who filmed "Journey's End," and photographed by Arthur Edeson, the capable cinematographer of "All Quiet on the Western Front," the British-flavoured picture of six reels and the love of a London lady of the streets for a young Canadian officer, is reported as one of the dramatic gems of the picture capital's current crop.

The Sherwood story depicts the ill luck of a pretty chorus girl who descends, as the War progresses, to a cheap artist's model and eventually to a solicitor. A boy-ish soldier literally runs into her during the course of an air raid, on London's well-known Waterloo Bridge, and eventually falls madly in love with her.

The ensuing situations in which the girl proves to be the boy and the intense scenes in which he takes her to visit his aristocratic parents are said to be the ultimate in drama.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., the youthful Universal production head, who has assured us soundly with "King of Jazz," "All Quiet on the Western Front," "Dracula" and "Seed" personally produced "Waterloo Bridge".

Frederic Kerr, well known British actor; Bette Davis, Ethel Griffies, George Arliss' talented leading lady of many successes, and Rita Carlisle appear with the sensational Miss Clarke, Douglass and the Misses Bennett and Lloyd in the picture's cast.

Mae Clarke, sensational screen notable, cast in Universal's "Waterloo Bridge", commencing at The Belle, Tomorrow.

DOROTHY MACKAILL AND CONRAD NAGEL IN BELLE

Another Hitchcock successful stage play, "Ambush" which has been made into a screen play by First National Pictures, and is to be seen at the Belle for the last time tonight, with dashing Dorothy Mackaill as the star. It presents the checkered career of a beautiful female who, through one man and to love it through another. Conrad Nagel and Walter Byron portray the lovers.

"Beauty Secrets of Hollywood," a screen novelty of especial appeal to ladies; another of the popular Boy Friend Comedies, and an entertaining Fox News Reel preceded the exhibition of the feature offering.

Manager Holmes has learned to take life easy, however, that the story is sensational fiction, the danger sic which rich young folk today are exposed, and turns the spotlight on big-scale racketeering in the financial district of New York and Wall Street. One of high lights of the story is the method used to win and win the affections of the rich away from their own families, and ruin them financially; and in this instance the biggest of the financial racketeers does not hesitate to calvy his machinations to the highest court in the land.

A love story runs through the picture, with James Hall and Frances Dade as its protagonists. Although plenty of traps are set by financial enemies, their romance finally achieves a happy ending.

"Mother's Millions" is the latest screen novelty to have been made from the inimitable stage play by Howard McKenzie Barnes, a notable cast was assembled for its portrayal. May Robson, the famous stage actress whose name is a household word, makes her screen debut in the production. A group of the foremost younger players of pictures appear. They include James Hall, "find" and Kent Douglass, handling the dramatic triumph, "Waterloo Bridge," commencing at The Belle, Tomorrow.

MAY ROBSON IN "MOTHER'S MILLIONS"

The machinations of designing flappers, husband hunters, social aspiration and racketeers against the little daughters, sisters and sons of the rich are depicted in the satirical talking picture, entitled "Mother's Millions," which will be presented at the Capitol Theatre beginning tonight.

There have been wolves of Wall Street in real life and on the screen but a she wolf in the financial world is something new, and the management of the Capitol Theatre in announcing the booking of this important picture promises that it deals with a subject never before presented in pictures.

The play from which "Mother's Millions" was taken is by Howard McKenzie Barnes, a notable cast was assembled for its portrayal. May Robson, the famous stage actress whose name is a household word, makes her screen debut in the production. A group of the foremost younger players of pictures appear. They include James Hall, "find" and Kent Douglass, handling the dramatic triumph, "Waterloo Bridge," commencing at The Belle, Tomorrow.

Frances Dade and James Hall in "Mother's Millions" the uproarious comedy-drama at The Capitol Tonight and Wednesday.

THANKSGIVING AT THE CAPITOL

In right, regular, royal style, Manager Holmes, now well on the way back to health after the operation and forced vacation in the Belleville Hospital, prepares a Thanksgiving programme at the Capitol.

On Friday at 11.15 p.m. Wheeler and Woolsey will arrive at the Capitol in "Caught Plastered," their latest mirthquake. This feature will be shown as a Midnight Show, full programme and popular prices. "Caught Plastered" will also be shown on Saturday and Monday, (Thanksgiving Day) at the usual performances.

On Thanksgiving night at 11.15 p.m. the greatest newspaper drama of all time, Ben Hecht's "Front Page," the screen. Edward G. Robinson, will open at a special Sunday Midnight Frolic when all the employees of the Courier Intelligencer will be the guests of Manager Holmes.

This drama was "The Star Final," having played to capacity in Toronto last week, and now in its sixth dramatic week on Broadway. It also be shown on Tuesday and Wednesday next week.

The Press Midnight Frolic will be inside the usual "show" programme, and the Capitol's popular prices will again be in vogue.

MILESTONE OF C. N. R. LINES

75th Anniversary of Opening of Main Line From Montreal

It is not generally known that October 27, 1931, is an outstanding date in Canadian railway history. It was on this day in 1856—75 years ago — that the main line of the Grand Trunk Railway, now a part of the Canadian National System, was officially opened for operation between Montreal and Toronto, and the first through trains operated between the two cities. The main line was opened in divisions, on the following dates: between Montreal and Brockville, Nov. 12, 1856; Brockville and Belleville, Oct. 27, 1856; and Toronto to Belleville, Aug. 11, 1856.

F. E. D. McIlwraith, writing in the Canadian National Railways Magazine, reproduces the first Grand Trunk advertisement to appear over the main line, which states that the train left the Montreal terminal, which is 8½ minutes faster than Brockville line, 13 minutes faster than Kingston, 14 1-2 than Belleville, and 22 faster than Toronto time." He speculates upon how many people missed their trains as a result of this peculiar timetable mix-up, and points out that in those days it required fourteen hours to make the trip, while today the International Limited makes the run in exactly six hours.

Business began to require advertising before prohibition was thought possible.—Sonny Ford.

Charity Crusade is Asked by Pope

Encyclical Deals With Menace of Unemployment and Needs

Vatican City, Oct. 5 (AP)—Pope Pius XI Saturday issued an encyclical in which he called on the world to join in a new crusade of mercy for the relief of unemployed millions who, he said, are the victims of economic distress caused in part by "the unbridled race for armaments."

The encyclical, called "Nova Impendent"—New Things Are Upon Us —was written by the Pope Friday, the day on which the church celebrates the feast of guardian angels.

Hunger, want and the menacing "plague" of idleness, the Holy Father said, are caused largely by the armament race inspired by national rivalry resulting in the distruction of enormous wealth.

He instituted the Bishops and other church authorities to organize relief, and directed all men to contribute to the support of this charitable endeavor.

In discussing armament, the Pope recommended that by preaching and through the press bishops "seek to illumine minds and open hearts on this matter."

Innocent children, he declared, are suffering most. "In the quarrels of misery they are condemned to see fade from their lives joy and happiness."

He warned the world that the "want of so many families and their children, if not provided for, threatens to push them, which may God avert, to the point of exasperation."

Strikes the Weaker

The present misery, the Pontiff said, "strikes more cruelly the less strong, though the more strongly loved, the children, the humble, the less-moneyed, the workers and the proletariat."

The stricken people of the world ask only the privilege of earning their bread, the Pope continued, when many of them are unable to do so "in these days of hatred and of implacable war."

In Vatican City it was considered significant that yesterday the Pope had a 45-minute talk with Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, for many years one of Great Britain's chief proponents of disarmament. Last evening the Viscount conferred with Foreign Minister Dino Grandi, who submitted an arms truce proposal at the recent League of Nations meeting in Geneva.

BROKER FIRMS CLOSE DOORS

Greenshields & McDougall & Cowans Accept Petition

Montreal, Oct. 5.—Victims of the severe drop in international stocks and of the exchange position in Canada, Canadian and United States funds, two of the largest stock brokerage firms in Canada, with headquarters in Montreal, on Monday accepted bankruptcy petitions in court. In each case Canadians were appointed.

The firms are McDougall and Cowans and Greenshields and Company, each a member of the Montreal Stock Exchange and the Montreal Curb market. McDougall and Cowans have branches at Halifax, Saint John, Quebec, Ottawa, Toronto and Winnipeg, while Greenshields' branches are at Quebec City and Toronto.

Gordon W. Scott was appointed custodian for McDougall and Cowans and C. G. Currie for Greenshields and Company. In a statement issued Monday afternoon Mr. Scott stated it was impossible to forecast the future position of McDougall and Cowans towards the public at the present time, but, from indications in their office, it would appear as if the firm's clients' funds and trust accounts remained intact. The liabilities are mainly secured by stock Exchange collateral.

An official statement issued by Greenshields and Company stated that the firm's audit showed it to be solvent, the assets being in excess of the liabilities. Unless the collateral behind loans was needlessly sacrificed, the firm did not anticipate there would be any eventuations to concern. The statement stated that the companies for which Greenshields had been the principal in financing were in sound condition and were not involved in any way.

Licenses to operate radio receiving sets in Canada advanced in 1930 to a total of 630,110 or an increase of 43 per cent over the 360,130 issued during 1929.

STUDENTS BACK WITH DEAD

St. John's, Nfld., Oct. 6.—The purpose and experiences of a number of Oxford University students who arrived here Monday with one of the remains dead, from an expedition in Hudson Bay, were cloaked in extreme reticence, coming down from the north after three months in the wilderness, they declined to discuss the expedition's results.

It was learned that C. Death who lost his life, had set out with N. Polvion as an advance party to one of the Akpatok Islands. They missed their way after losing a compass, and Death slipped over a cliff and became engulfed in a snowdrift. Polvion returned to the party's headquarters for assistance but, despite the usual "short" period, unconscious, up to his waist in the marsh. He died shortly afterward.

BRITISH PARLIAMENT PROROGUED TODAY

Britain Plunges in Campaign Lineup of Issues and Candidates Most Confused in British History

Nominations Will Reveal Failure or Success of Step

LABOR SOLID

Platform of National Goverment Is Still Vague

London, Oct. 7 (C.P. Cable) —The King today signed the ordsr-in-council prorogueing parliament. After prorogation comes the formal proclamation dissolving the 16th Parliament of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

And all party organizations today were working at fever heat preparing for the polling on October 27. In his library at No. 10 Downing St. Prime Minister MacDonald spent the morning working on the appeal to the country which he will broadcast tonight between acts of "Hamlet" from the Covent Garden Opera House.

Sir Herbert Samuel, Secretary for Home Affairs, opened the Liberal campaign at Bradford tomorrow. Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, President of the Council, opens the Conservative campaign at Birmingham on Friday. Leaders of Liberal and Conservative leaders will make their own appeals, but following generally the appeal of the Prime Minister.

London, Oct. 7 (Canadian and Associated Press Cable)—Great Britain plunged into a turbulent general election campaign today with the most confused line-up of issues and candidates in a generation.

Nomination on October 16 will reveal the success or failure of the national government's desire to avoid conflict between different parties who are supporting it.

The polling on October 27 will determine the fate of the government but the Labor party is fighting without a party, supported by a kaleidoscopic coalition of conservatives and Liberals thrown together by emergency backed by a handful of "right wingers" of the old Labor party.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald will seek re-election in his present constituency, Seaham, Durham, where the local Labor party has already endorsed him. His opponent will be the seeking of a free hand to deal with the nation's problems. The Conservative and Liberal leaders will issue their appeals tonight within the general terms of the Prime Minister's appeal to be made this evening.

Baldwin Opens Campaign

St. Stan. Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader, received a vote of confidence from his party tonight last night. He will be the first of the government leaders to open campaign, going to Birmingham on Friday.

Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George, veteran Liberal leader, continued his opposition to the election. But he sees his party's weakness in the split from his control. Liberal leadership for the moment anyway is divided between Sir Herbert Samuel, leading

$50,000 Government Fund Aid is Granted Belleville

None of Money To Be Used For Purchase of Right of Way

MAYOR PLEASED

$50,000 grant from the unemployment fund of Ontario and the Dominion was received in Belleville, Mayor Reid announced today on receipt of a telegram from Hon. W. H. Hoiland, K.C., after conference waited upon Premier Hills in Toronto in regard to the matter of relief.

The mayor was much pleased with the results which his efforts and those of the citizens' committee brought in securing aid for winter undertakings in this city. He had telephoned and wired the Unemployment Board yesterday in relation to the city's application for relief. This grant with that of $22,500 last year, means that the city will be the recipient of some $72,500 in relief.

Speaking of the plans which the Mayor and council have been considering, the Mayor stated that they felt it desirable to have the work for the unemployed of this city done only. It is distinctly understood that no part of this money is to be used for the purchase of property for the right of way for road or esplanade, although the government has sanctioned the building of this project under unemployment relief.

Mayor Reid went on to say that it is not necessary for this amount, the fifty thousand dollars, to be spent all at once. It will be spread over the entire winter.

Asked by the newspaperman when the work ought to be started, he said, "Work must be started within a week in order to get in shape for the winter's operations before the high water comes." The Mayor referred to the preliminary work on the projected esplanade.

A decision in regard to the latter proposal will probably be made by next Tuesday or Wednesday.

Mayor Reid and the committee have been tireless in their efforts to secure aid from the fund for the relief of those who are out of work and whose daily needs can be met only by work.

Inventor's Life Flickers Like Faulty Lamp

West Orange, N.J., Oct. 7.—A 76-year-old life that has created thousands of wonders of convenience flickered uncertainly today like a incandescent lamp — as Thomas A. Edison lay dying.

The inventor continued to lose strength, physicians said. Dr. Hubert S. Howe, explained the growing weakness saying Mr. Edison had taken but half the nourishment needed in the past week and added his resistance is a complication of diseases.

The "lethargic" state of mind and the long periods of sleep, Dr. Howe said, indicated unmistakably that the end was but a matter of days.

Hoover's Recovery Program

Washington, D.C., Oct. 7.—Details of President Hoover's six-point program follow:

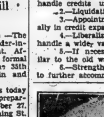
1.—Creation of a half-billion dollar private credit agency to handle credits unacceptable to the reserve banks.

2.—Liquidation of some of the frozen assets of insolvent banks.

3.—Appointment of regional bankers' committees to act generally in credit expansion.

4.—Liberalization of the rules to permit reserve banks to handle a wide variety of securities.

5.—If necessary, creation of a government credit agency similar to the old war finance corporation.



6.—Strengthening of the resources of the federal land banks to further accommodate the farmers.

CUTLER'S FEAST IN JEOPARDY

"Banquet of North" at Sheffield May be Abandoned

London, Oct. 7 (CP)—Instances are multiplying of the drastic effects of economy may have double-edged reactions. Sheffield has been discussing abandoning the famous cutlers' feast this year. This "banquet of the north", where almost every eminent British personage of the last fifty years has been entertained, had Prime Minister R. B. Bennett of Canada as the chief guest last year.

It has been decided by the incoming "Master Cutler", Joseph Ward, that the feast is a valuable advertisement for Sheffield manufacturers and should be held — but with a modified menace.

PARLIAMENT PROROGUED

Dissolution Will Follow and Election on Oct. 27th

London, Oct. 7.—(By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer)—Parliament prorogued at 4.20 this afternoon. Dissolution will follow and the General Election will be held on Oct. 27. It was declared quietly but in quiet that bore portends of the coming storm.

In the Lord, scarcely more than a dozen peers were present as in the old French phrase that sang back to the Norman Conquest the Commons was given the commission to various bills!

In the House of Commons Labor-ites pressed question after question about the pro means of raising and qualifications for the transitional benefit—the unemployment insurance that are covered by contributions to the fund, and are properly known as the dole. There were jokes across the floor over who would be sacrificed in the coming fight and who would be left.

Flier Blames Red Tape as Ambassador Didn't Aid

Wenachee, Wash. Oct. 7.—Clyde Pangborn, trans-Pacific flier, told a newspaper interview today that Herndon, Jr., and himself last night that Ambassador W. Cameron Forbes had failed to aid them after their arrest in Japan last month for photographing certain fortified areas.

The criticism arose in a description of the activities of the returning New York. The fliers were detailed as having told how:

"I guess it was as much our fault as anybody's," Pangborn began. "No doubt more."

Without mentioning Forbes directly by name, Pangborn said: "We had been told by Americans staying so much golf or something else, we would be much better off not going to their function. The ambassador did nothing. The roll of red tape kept growing."

Some doubt developed as to whether the $25,000 Tokyo-Seattle prize would be presented to them. W. W. Hawkins, president of the Seattle chapter of the National Aeronautic Association said today that the prize was a standing one and that the fliers would be entitled to it.

SEARCH FOR FLIERS MADE BY TUGBOAT

All Day Crews Search Flats and Waters of Bay

Maitland, N.S., Oct. 7 (C.P.)— Search for two German fliers who crashed on Cobequid Bay early yesterday morning was continued today when the tug Almac arrived from Parrsboro to join several motor boat parties in a thorough coverage of the bay and Minas Basin.

The tug is employed by the North German Lloyd line, for whom Prinz Edmo and Captain Hermann Koenenkoechi were rushing trans-Atlantic mail from the liner Bremen in mid-ocean to New York when the plane carried them by tragedy.

After refuelling at Sydney on Monday night the fliers lost their way through their bettie with fog and headwinds over the North Atlantic, pushed on for the American metropolis hoping to break existing records before the crash, when a boat was launched about five minutes after the plane still heard but they died away shortly after the machine left the shore. All day long boat crews and people of the villages searched the mud flats and waters of the bay. The Maritime and Newfoundland Airways plane Pioneer, from Sydney, joined them late in the afternoon.

Search of the mud flats gave up the detached gasoline tank of the German plane, main evidence of the fate of the courageous mail fliers. The search was continued until darkness shut down on the bay, and the receding tide sent boats scurrying for safety back to harbor from probing stranded on the red mud flats which are left at low water.

No other trace of the plane or fliers was found during the day.

HEPBURN M.P. ASSAILS TORY GOVERNMENTS

Says Farmers Reduced to Condition of Slavery

POWER INQUIRY

Civil Service Overstaffed Is Liberal Leader's Claim

Preston, Ont., Oct. 7 (CP)—Returning to the public platform after a long illness, Mitchell F. Hepburn, M. P., Liberal party leader, speaking here last night, called for more light on the administration of the Hydro Power Commission of Ontario and further explanation of certain contracts entered into by the Commission. The Liberal leader also demanded an investigation into gasoline prices in Ontario, a cut in the rate of interest paid by farmers on loans from the Ontario Farm Loan Board and an overhauling and cutting down of the Ontario Civil Service.

"Slavery" On Farms

Mr. Hepburn dealt particularly in the first part of his speech with the problems that beset the farmers and characterized their present situation as one bordering on slavery. The "conception of great wealth in the hands of a very few", partly as a result of the "grazing wealth of governments to certain interest of special privileges" as weighing heavily up on the people and it was the hope of the Liberal party, the speaker said, when clothed with the necessary power, to put into effect "a system of taxation that will place the burden upon those most able to pay."

Both Governments Blamed

Condemnation was voiced by the Bennett Dominion Government and the Henry Provincial Government, said Mr. Hepburn, had tended to aggravate the condition of agriculture. The immediate duty of government, "the pegging of the cost of the implements of production," and the Bennett governments trade policy of "unbridled extravagance" of Stevens Reno. If these articles are not satisfactory in this respect in having them they may be returned.

She is justly proud of the garden and her every room to be those who delight in dahlias should visit the garden in question and see for themselves these beautiful specimens of nature.

the government faction and Sir John Simon, who has rallied twenty-two Liberal members of parliament in support of the Prime Minister.

But the Labor party finds itself in a united front for the first time. The elimination of such leaders as Mr. MacDonald, Rt. Hon. Philip Snowden and Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, paved the way for adoption of more radical policies than formerly. Labor will fight the national government, and fight bitterly, on a platform calling for public control of banking, credit and industry and cancellation of war debts, reduction in armaments, and reversal of the government economy cut proposals.

Government Platform Vague

The government's election platform remains rather vague as to detail. The leaders unveils the speech by Mr. MacDonald tonight. And the Liberal party has not yet made exact position the tariff plank will occupy in the government platform.

The Manchester Guardian agrees with Mr. Lloyd George in describing the election as a "khaki" one. While the party machines were working at high pressure, there was no estimating the election would cost £10,000,000, the Guardian called it "an extravaganza of an election—a mad election".

"A national government sounded well," the Manchester Guardian added, "but it would be impossible for the arrogant assumption the Labor party were wholly responsible for and were anti-national. To speak of the Labor party as government is to bring national when it was advertised to all the world its complete failure to govern and to leave a devastating formula is to misuse the language.

"The election is simply a device to enable the Tories to fix their country in a permanent system of high tariffs." The Manchester Guardian concluded restfully that "the conviction that had the Liberal party kept its independence when the national government was in power, it could have played a most important part in the stormy days that were to come. "But it is to be feared that the position will soon be found to have been compromised by its being an integral part of a heterogeneous parliamentary coalition," the Guardian added.

The London Times, the other prominent newspaper that is definitely Liberal, is less despondent in Liberalism. It splashes a declaration that the Liberal party should be in sufficient strength to safeguard the nation from dangerous extremism, either of right or of the left," the Daily News said.

DRAPERIES MADE NEW

"When we resumed housekeeping a month ago I found my draperies had become creased from packing. I hung them out on the line, hoping to remove the creases. Then I forgot all about them. The result was they became badly faded and sun-spotted.

"I was heartbroken until the happy though struck me to dye them. I that dyed them a deeper green, and as I used Diamond Dyes they look gorgeous and new. I have never seen easier dyes to use than Diamond Dyes. They give the most beautiful colors—when used either for tinting or dyeing—and never take the life out of cloth as other dyes do."

Hoover Will Release Capital for Recovery U. S. Gold May be Used

U. S. Credit Structure Created to Solve Impasse

OFFICIAL BOARD

Half Billion Dollar Corporation Will Be Formed

Washington, Oct. 7—A new credit structure, with wide authority to put idle capital at work for economic recovery, was outlined by President Hoover Tuesday night at an special White House conference with members of Congress.

The details were not immediately disclosed, but in one well-informed quarter they were said to be:

Creation of a $500,000,000 corporation, to be known as the Emergency Credit Corporation, authorized to lend, at its discretion, to any financial institution.

Subscription of the stock of this corporation in whole or in part by the Treasury Department.

Supervision of the corporation by a board of five directors, with Government officials authorized to serve.

Authority for the Federal Reserve Board to rediscount all the corporation's obligations.

In effect, the new institution would operate much as the War Finance Corporation did in the war years.

To End Restrictions

The proposal is designed to circumvent some of the restrictions which now hamper credit, by permitting the liquidation of credits locked up in restrictive banks and which are insolvent, and cannot be brought into the channels of trade because of the limitations surrounding rediscount.

All these handicaps the plan proposes to overcome, by the substitution of a more elastic credit basis, so that the money which the country has in abundance can be brought into use for the restoration of confidence and the revival of trade.

Wall Street Affected

New York, Oct. 6—Some $5,000,000 was reported to security values in Wall Street at the stock market surged upward in the swiftest advance in recent financial history.

This was Wall Street's response to news that leaders in financial, business and public life had been summoned in Washington to consider an aggressive program to check the vicious circle of deflation.

This sudden bulge in quoted values added more than 12 per cent. to stature of shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange. The extent of this sudden restoration of quoted values is staggering. The figure approximated "the total amount of currency in circulation in this country, and exceeds the total amount of monetary gold in the United States. Furthermore, the estimate, based on price indices, is regarded as conservative.

In many quarters in Wall Street it had been felt that the September decline which had lopped more than $12,000,000,000 from quoted values in the stock market, was being carried on largely by hysteria, and today's startling about-face was strong evidence of the soundness of that analysis.

The bond market, normally more staid than stocks, recovered substantially in active trading. Leading commodities also joined the upturn. Cotton futures sold up more than $3 a bale, and closed with net gains of $1.25 to $1.75. Wheat and corn gained about 1 1-2 to 3 cents a bushel.

Closing Prices Good

The turnover was 4,300,000 shares was one of the largest since last June, and closing prices were generally near the day's best.

The stock exchange authorities took further cognizance of the agitation for checking short selling by ordering members to label all short sales as they are transmitted to the floor of the exchange, and by permitting no such orders to be executed unless they can be executed without depressing the price of the stock.

It was said in conservative banking and brokerage circles that such a spectacular stock market as today's should be regarded largely as reflecting the correction of a panicky psychology, rather than the start of a major upturn, and that it was hoped that a period of stability and quiet would ensue.

Rumors that an extension of the international debt moratorium for three years might come out of the Washington conferences were denied as premature, both in New York and Washington, but it was acknowledged in high banking quarters in Wall Street that the Hoover open situation would probably receive consideration.

Turning from Europe to South America, it was that a meeting of delegates from the Central Bank of Chile, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador and Colombia to be held shortly in Santiago was described in Wall Street as highly constructive.

$300,000 Suit Against Bank of Montreal Continues

Toronto, Oct. 7.—(C.P.) — The liquidator of the assignment of the Bank of Montreal branch at Trenton which acquired the business produced by W. H. Bonier as part of the evidence to prove his $300,000 suit for damages against the bank were not written on the purported receipt by the accountant, Gerald E. Hazen, a handwriting expert testified at the resumption of the trial case on Tuesday.

As a result of experiments made by him Hazen testified that the two receipts produced by Bonier "had been finished with level precision". The first was a receipt signed by W. H. Bonier, acknowledging for certain stocks and the other a receipt said to have been given by Bonier to his wife, who had since died, for the same block of stocks, and also initialled by Bonier. Ownership of stock originally belonged to his wife, but was given by mutual consent to the bank. This stock was worth $80,000 in 1929 and is valued at $365,000 is his claim and was given by the bank to secure a $1,000 loan.

Bank officials contend the stock never was transferred from the bank branch.

The trial is proceeding before Justice Masten in a special non-jury Assize Court at Osgoode Hall.

$200 LOSS PER MINUTE

Fires cost Canada two hundred dollars a minute over a period of ten years. That is every minute sees a fifth of a thousand dollars of human effort and labor go up in smoke.

The time of the year has come when fire prevention is stressed. The call has been broadcast throughout the Dominion asking the people to pay more and more attention to the exercise of caution where fire risks are concerned. The Montreal Gazette refers to the importance of the united effort of the country to lower the fire loss rate.

"The need for ever striving to provide greater safeguards is proved by the official statistics of losses. In ten years 386,000 fires in Canada have destroyed property valued at $413,900,000, and, in addition, it is pointed out by the Dominion Fire Commissioner, nearly 4000 lives have been lost and upwards of 9,000 persons injured seriously by fire. And in the last year alone 39,200 fires were reported, with a property loss of $46,110,000. It has been proved that neglect has been responsible for a great deal of this calamity. Every man's and every woman's own interests obviously command constant circumspection and application on their part of all possible safeguards against the outbreak of fire.

"A spark neglected may make a mighty flame. Nevertheless, many people are peculiarly careless about precautions themselves, and are quite indifferent if individuals next to them are imperilled, although it is an age-old maxim that 'your own property is concerned when your neighbor's house is on fire.' The officially recorded fact that the average annual waste by fire in Canada represents an expenditure of $280,000 daily, or approximately $200 for every minute throughout the years, brings to the mind ready realization of the woeful losses suffered under this head, so much of which could be avoided with reasonable human care. It is to be hoped that the information and expert counsel which will be given this week through the public press and in a multitude of other ways may result in more concentrated effort being directed by everybody to eliminate fire hazards and so lessen the consuming mischief of conflagrations in Canada."

DIE IS CAST

The die is cast after days of consideration and uncessness. The British people will go to the polls on October 27th. The campaign which promises to be one of the most strenuous in the history of politics will be unique in that the Conservatives, many of the Liberals and some of the Labor party will under the leadership of MacDonald oppose the broken party, Lloyd George has predicted further chaotic conditions to follow. Conservatives hold a different view.

ROMANCE AND TRADE

The first shipload of Canadian wheat from Churchill has reached England by the Hudson's Bay route. The event was made much of as the captain of the ship and his crew and cargo were welcomed by Canadians and Britishers in England.

Britain is ever interested in the development of new routes. Pioneer among the nations and the greatest among people in the world's history they naturally look with great favor upon the northern route, wishing that it will turn out to be a key to Canada.

The Hudson's Bay has always attracted attention for with it goes an atmosphere of romance of trade. The lure of the north still continues and will continue while Canada holds the north land.

With the romance is an important link —that of business, which plays so large a part in modern life.

STUDY OF ENGLISH

A writer in a Toronto paper complains that for every one student who wins honors in French there are ten who are awarded honors in French, German, Latin, science or mathematics, blaming the lack of attention shown English on the smaller number of periods of study. He declares that English is shamefully neglected. He says too little attention is paid the subject thanks to little memory work, and composition of essays, which teachers spend much time to read. He calls on the inspectors of the Department of Education to see that "the subjects of greatest importance are not crowded off the timetables."

Authors are careless, some of the best seller writers being almost indifferent as to style.

Perhaps too much is written and too much read to make for perfection in the knowledge of written English.

But other conditions doubtless tend to create the condition complained of,

SUCCESS

Whene'er you measure your success
Use standards of unselfishness.
Since these alone will tell aright
What it is worth in Heaven's sight—
For all you get through others' pain
Is merely lost and never gain.

If you would draw much dividend,
Make all humanity your friend.
Yourself forget, and give much thought
To emply lives and souls unsought—
For these shall make your balance-sheet
Pass muster at God's judgment seat.

Success is not of place and power,
Patrician friends or beauty's dower,
Nor is it found by those who seek
To grind the poor, exploit the weak—
But, rather, if success be true,
It blesses me and blesses you.

FLORIDA WINTER RESORTS may be minus Canadian regulars this season if the exchange question does not clear up. Costs enough to live in the South during the winter without having Canadian money discounted. Notice that United Hotel chain have sent out word that the Canadian dollar is just as welcome at their U.S.A. Hotels as the flowers in May at one hundred per cent. par. The south slowly recovering from the wounds occasioned by the exploded land boom and investing banks, will join in the chorus of welcome to the Canadian dollar without question of discount.

A NEW QUESTION opens up in the age-old controversy as to answer to prayer—will radio prayers be answered, or are they just entertaining prayers? Radio players go out on the ether and travel right round the world, but do they reach the throne of heavenly grace?

x x x

LONG PRAYERS on the radio seem to me very much out of place. Brief periods in the morning are allotted to religious services, and beautiful hymns are sung by talented singers. There is also a clergyman appointed to give a few words of prayer, and some of these "few words" take up more time than the singing of three hymns. I prefer Seth Parker's silent radio prayer. "You pray in your way and I'll pray in mine."

ACCENTS IN LIVERY

BRINGING SOUND into the pictures has not been an unmixed blessing. Many stars and directors and cameramen probably wish that talkies had never been invented, but there is one class in Hollywood that is profiting handsomely, according to Variety, New York, the butlers, maids, valets and chauffeurs formerly played by extras are now tenderly entrusted to real actors that "speak the broad A test." The role of lackey is no longer scorned. Many English players are in clover, after waiting years for anything better than a part in a mob scene. With the numerous mystery stories now being filmed, for talkies, it should be an excellent chance for some of those British accents to be heard in a big way. An inspector from Scotland Yard must not talk like a Californian. Authentic English accents are getting from $50 a day up.

THE POOR HUMAN INSECT

In a jocular essay Mr. Chesterton was once good enough to remark that genius always carries a magnifying glass and that "imagination perpetually peers and creeps further down the screws and vistas in the tubes of science," so that we get a very "ironic reversal of proportions." And judging by some of the pronouncements made in the name of science the interference is inevitable that the savant has turned his glass on himself. It seems to be the chief fad of the hour. Dr. Wells it has been writing about that in one of his novels he took us to the moon, only to enlarge a few specimens from the nearest earth ant-hill to capture our imagination and leave us fascinated and enthralled. An instance of this transvaluation of values is provided in the well-remembered dictum of Dr. Barnes, in his fulminations against the orthodox protagonists of morals having as its groundwork the Biblical text, and in his remarkable statements concerning man's real place in the universe. There is no need to enlarge upon the severe criticisms urged against superstition. That happens to be his word for the common religious views in vogue, and it is evident that philosopher deems it high time there should be a counter programme. What is particularly noticeable, however, is the system of thought and of evidence that would fain substitute for ethical teachings already received and sanctioned.—Montreal Gazette.

THE AUTOSTRADE

This type of modern motor highway has been introduced by Italy already a land of wonderfully good roads. As explained by Robert McBurney, assistant trade commissioner for Canada at Milan, who writes in the current number of the Commercial Intelligence Journal, they are "roads reserved to motor traffic and completely free from crossroads or other obstructions to rapid travel. There is no speed limit on these roads, and it is possible to effect a very great saving in time by their use. Though a toll is charged, their construction is justified by their increasing numbers, two new ones having recently been completed."

Presumably junctions with other roads are not eliminated, but the latter are made to connect at an acute angle, so that certain minimum motor driveways in United States cities. Obviously, this arrangement traffic saves further time, and it may be assumed that there is a minimum speed limit, otherwise there would be congestion as on any other highway.

It has been proposed that the new highway of the Province of Hamilton and Toronto be given over to motor traffic. Here, more might interest the government of Canada to collect a toll, even if concessions had to be made in favor of special traffic regulations.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

McDOUGALD AND COWANS

The Street and the investing public will hear with the greatest possible regret of the suspension of the well-known stock-broking firm of McDougald and Cowans, which was announced after the close of the Toronto Exchange on Friday. The direct cause of the suspension has been the unprecedented drop in certain important international stocks which the firm has been carrying for its clients. The drop has been so precipitate that many who are interested have been unable to take care of margin calls and as the market for certain of these stocks was very narrow, the firm was unable to protect itself.

The recent heavy drop in the value of the Canadian dollar in New York has further aggravated the situation. The firm was carrying substantial loans in American banks repayable in United States dollars, but secured by Canadian funds. The firm found itself in the position of being unexpectedly called on to make good the discount on the Canadian dollar, now nearly 15 per cent. It is understood that the firm's debts to Canadian banks, trust companies and private individuals are well secured by stock exchange collateral. Unfortunately, any loss sustained will to a great extent, fall on the investing public. It is hoped that with the readjustment of values and improvement in the market the firm will be able to reorganize and continue in business.—Montreal Gazette.

AUTOMOBILE OWNERS FOR RELIEF

Figures compiled by A. W. Laver, Commissioner of Public Welfare, show that of the 39,474 men who applied for relief here here, 1,166 owned automobiles. Such ownership may be evidence of reckless extravagance. Possibly few of the seven hundred cars represented family conveniences or luxuries. Yet the upkeep of these cars, the constant increases in gas and oil, may easily have meant the difference between a next egg put by for the proverbial rainy day and the necessity of applying for relief.

Automobile habits are a seductive one. It is a great and glorious feeling to have the freedom of the highways. Yet every revolution of the wheels must be paid for just as strictly as though a taxi-meter kept checking off the miles. There is a great temptation to let the car be overlooked even by those who live right up to their incomes.

Recent statistics show that in Canada was an increase of 44,000 in the number of cars registered in Canada. The statistics do not show how many of the owners can afford the luxury of driving an automobile. The figures compiled by Mr. Laver suggest that several hundred Toronto residents made a mistake in abandoning the old faith for their own private transportation system. They were living on too narrow a margin.—Toronto Telegram.

Winnipeg, Oct. 7.—Murder charges may be laid against two youths arrested in Northern Manitoba in connection with the burning, nearly two years ago, of a convict at Crosse Lake, police said here yesterday. Charges from time to time to death in the fire.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police Sergeant Baker, who arrested the two, a half breed named Palmer and an Indian known as Hughie, has been ordered to bring his charges to Winnipeg next week. Palmer was arrested two weeks ago at Norway House, and police say he made a statement which implicated Hughes who was picked up yesterday at Bickett Falls.

Toronto, Oct. 7—Suggestion that all school and pre-school age children in Toronto be vaccinated for diphtheria and smallpox marked an address last night by Dr. Harold McPherdan, president of the Academy of Medicine, before that body. He also urged establishment of pre-natal and post-natal clinics and suggested that a member of the staff be consultant to the Board of Health.

P. C. MacLAURIN ADDRESSES KIWANIS CLUBS ON EDUCATION

Twenty Members of Local Club Make Journey To Picton.

SPLENDID MEETING

Education, its problems and solution, was the subject of an address by Peter C. MacLaurin, Principal of the Belleville Collegiate Institute, when an inter-city visit was held between the Belleville and Picton Kiwanis Clubs in Picton on Tuesday night at the Globe Hotel and the good fellowship that reigned pepped up both clubs and sent them away from the meeting determined to carry on to the best of their ability. Over twenty members from the Belleville Club made the trip to the Prince Edward town and a most enjoyable time was spent.

Inter-City Visit

The meeting was opened by President Don Guilett of the Picton Club and then turned over to President George Cole of the Belleville Club, whose organization conducted the meeting. The musical program was in charge of Leo B. Riggs and Ross Hunter and a most excellent program was given. Solos by Al Stillman and James Bankier were given followed by a duet by Ross Hunter and James Bankier. Ross Hunter accompanied the community singing conducted by James Bankier on the violin with Leo B. Riggs at the piano. The sergeants at arms, Phil Brown and Claude D. Tice, collected a tidy sum from the members for breach of the rules but before the meeting was closed the mite box was lost and Phil Brown had a hard time explaining the mystery. Those responsible for the theft were apprehended and a heavy fine levied.

Announcement Made

Announcements was made by Stan Mambly, that the late W. J. Carter, a charter member of Picton Club, had left a sum of money to the club for the furtherance of Kiwanis work in Picton and this was fittingly referred to by vice president A. B. Collins who also expressed pleasure of the Belleville Club in being present. The vice president was speaking for former District Trustee Geo. A. Lee, who was in office at the time the Picton Club was formed. Another announcement was made that the Karnival recently held in Picton had netted nearly $400.00 profits, about half of last year's total. The speaker of the evening was introduced by Rev. A. E. McCutcheon in a happy vein and the members settled back to enjoy one of the finest addresses that either club has heard in some time.

Before proceeding with his address Mr. MacLaurin stated it was a privilege to come to Picton and that a good job was done, when the Picton Club was formed. Joining Kiwanis meant a new life to the speaker and more was owed to life than the mere asking of money. He referred to the late W. J. Carter in fitting terms and knew that the club would go on to greater efforts after such a wonderful message had been left by this charter member. In olden times it was considered education if a man lived among his fellow citizens as a good one. In education there are many problems, some being every day ones but the majority of problems that require deep thought. If the average citizen gets in a rut his usefulness to the world is done. He must keep an open mind and do every task in the best way." Taking my position as principal of the Belleville Collegiate I have a problem to work out a time-table to suit the requirements of 900 pupils and I am just one cog in the wheel. The teachers of the school meet the Board of Education sometimes happily and sometimes not so happily and the Board should always remember that there is more to education than building and seats. They should be sympathetic and willing to assist in education. It is often always fair to think in dollars and cents but sometimes they should at least sympathize the teachers on the work they are trying to perform. Little praise will pull a time well spent," said the speaker.

Parents Have Problems

"The parents have problems also," said the speaker. "Their whole interest is in their boy or girl and they wonder about his or her progress but do they sometimes wonder about the other boy or girl, that is seeking an education. These have no words of encouragement and sometimes arrive at the school, ill fed and ill clothed. These boys and girls should be thought of and they should be put on the same level. On the other hand the pupils have their problems and the problems of the day of the big school house are not problems of the day. Things are said about the boys and girls today, that is not constructive criticism but destructive criticism. Offer more constructive criticism and see how they respond to it. In the olden days education was for the few and not for all but education is not a matter of the family but a matter of the state."

Dealing with conditions as they are today the speaker believed that man would have to go back to the saying "bread is earned by the sweat of the brow". The speaker believed there would have been no stock crashes and no interruption of the gold standard had the above saying been lived up to. We must teach the laboring man to enjoy his spare hours for in this depression they have time heavy on their hands. The whole educational system must be changed to equip everyone to enjoy their spare time. The speaker believed that the Prime Minister, Hon. R. B. Bennett, was right in his recent remark that God was the only solution and that the two Commandments, love thy God and love thy neighbor as thyself apply. How the Chinese love the Jap, how the French are the German and how the Canadian loves the members of the United States and how the Canadian loves to take his discount. God is the only one that can lead us into green pastures and beside the still waters.

YEARS IN MAIL PARCEL SENT

Found in Dusty Aperture In Brockville Post Office

Brockville, Oct. 7.—Workmen engaged in removing the old wickets and racks in the post office here preparatory to installing new equipment beneath the general delivery wicket found two small parcels which, in the estimation of Postmaster Alfred Wooding, had lain there for many years.

The parcels were covered with dust, but showing no signs of decay in the outer coverings. The addressees on the two parcels were quite legible and permitted the forwarding of them to their owners today. One parcel, containing a small pair of scissors, was addressed to M. D. Prego, Brockville, and bore a stamp of the issue of 1903-1912 with the head of King Edward VII. The other parcel, a photograph from a Waterloo, N.Y., studio, was addressed to David Hogan, Brockville, and was prepaid with a Queen Victoria stamp issued between the years of 1898 and 1902.

The parcel addressed to Mr. Hogan is considered at least 29 years old while Mr. Prego's parcel is said to have rested in the post office 19 years. About two months ago when improvements to the postoffice were begun, a card addressed to a local woman and mailed 22 years ago was found.

GREATEST FOE OF U. S. FEAR

Senator Davis Says Even Dollar Lazy As Result

Vancouver, Oct. 7 — Senator James J. Davis, Pittsburgh, former Secretary of Labor, was vigorously applauded by the American Federation of Labor convention here when he pleaded for an end to what he described as "cheese-nibbling" methods of relieving unemployment.

Senator Davis expressed uncompromising opposition to establishment of a dole, which, he said, "destroys individual initiative and ruins the morale of a nation." He said he was against unemployment insurance subsidized by the Government except as a last resort when it was to be paid back to the state by living off our cash corn and nibbling at the edges of national wealth until both are gone and civilization is lost."

A means of overcoming fear is America's greatest need today, Senator Davis said.

"Fear today of those many millions who are gainfully employed reduces our buying power, because they are afraid that they, too, will join the ranks of the unemployed. Fear of our men of wealth, our bankers, make them call in loans that are being used for productive wealth and progress.

"Few loans are being made today, and the laziest thing in America today, because of fear, is the dollar. It, too, is out of work because of fear."

Senator Davis decried price-cutting as folly as serious as wage reductions.

"How can high wages be paid when prices of goods are down," he queried."

Davis lauded organized labor for its restraint in times of distress, citing instances of how workers had controlled their hunger in the face of despair. He warned that "when too many wrinkles appear in the stomachs of men, their ears become deaf to ay-observance pleas, and their brains become quick to carry other thought but that concerning the preservation of the lives of themselves, their children and their wives."

DEATH... entered the room with her!

The Law was on her husband's side—and Judas who claimed her child. She came to plead for mercy—armed—prepared to kill, but then—FATE stepped in to play an amazing role in this great true-life story of war, infidelity, and mother love!

25¢

IT AGONIZED her to look back on the days of their courtship. War days, in a Paris empty of gaiety and laughter, bombarded by screaming shells—or those happy, carefree times after the Armistice, when Paul-Louis had worshipped his beautiful Gladys, blindly, madly, with all the fervour of the Latin versed in love.

Her childhood sweetheart had gone to Italy to fight—Major Leonard Howarden—and she had done her share in a library for convalescent soldiers—cheering and helping those poor maimed men who ached to forget the horror and degradation of battle. There she had met Paul-Louis, and in the wild peril and terror of bombardment they had confessed their love—the sweeter for so much common suffering.

She had sacrificed all to marry him—her citizenship—her property—content only to be his—to have his love. But he was a gentleman of France. His faithless kisses—his honeyed words outraged her—and yet she forgave again and again. Hating his wayward habits, she loved him still. How could she—how could any woman endure such torture and still go on?

She left him, taking the child which the Law declared was his. He followed across the sea to take it back. Her mother heart grew cold and stern with a terrible purpose—to keep her boy at the cost of her husband's life. And then the violent climax came that wrung her soul and changed her life—told in NOVEMBER TRUE STORY MAGAZINE as only the suffering woman can tell it. Election Fraud Charges Probed

Montreal, Oct. 7—The charges of fraud and corruption made by the opposition in their contestation proceedings of the last provincial election will probably be investigated by the committee of the Legislature on Privileges and Elections, according to a statement made by Premier Taschereau here yesterday. He further declared that the Liberals would not contest all the seats won by the Conservatives but probably few seats here. It is believed, the Quebec election law had been violated.

THE GAY BANDIT OF THE BORDER

by
TOM GILL

Again the silence of that desert; morning fell about the hacienda. Dee Todd looked into the room where Bob lay either unconscious or asleep. Beside him sat the girl, her eyes fastened on the pale face among the pillows. He listened for a long time to the slow, faint breathing, then left the room and paced the porch for an hour when the girl joined him.

Lighting a cigarette she inhaled eagerly. "I've been afraid to smoke in there." Her face was white and worn, and with a pang of remorse Ted remembered that she had been up with Bob through the long night and morning.

"Better get some sleep," he told her. "I'll stay with Bob until Peter comes back."

She shook her head. "What's the use? I couldn't sleep. I couldn't bear to be alone now. Talk to me. She sat down beside him on the step. "Has Bob a chance—I mean an honest-to-God chance?"

"Price thinks so."

"Who shot Bob?"

"I've told you all he knew of the past night. "Bob and the Mexican must have seen each other and fired almost together."

"And the Mexican?"

"Dead."

"Then there is no one to know?"

Radcliffe shook his head slowly. "Morales may suspect.

Again the girl's eyes drooped. and he added: "Don't you think you'd better lie down? There may be a hard night ahead for us both."

"But what will the end be?"

"I wish I knew. I'm going get better it means war until either he or Morales wins. The whole border will be brought in, for those two men are making a storm that will sweep the country."

"Will it bring you into the fight?"

"Bob was my friend—whether he lives or dies my hand is against his enemies."

She rose, then suddenly swayed forward, and Ted caught her and carried her into the house. Quietly he laid her down on his bed. She looked at him and whispered: "I'm so tired and afraid for Bob—and everything."

Radcliffe nodded. "I know. It will all come out right. I'll call you if there's any need."

Outside he resumed his lonely vigil. Twice the moons rang, and each time he said that Bob was riding the southern range and would not be back for several days. Once during the afternoon he thought of the girl inside, wondering what part she might play in the hidden life of his friend. She seemed a strange blending of tenderness and almost brittle hardness. She was like someone living beyond both happiness and unhappiness. And once he remembered her eyes as she looked at Bob.

At last he forced himself to think of other things. Hours passed. Outward dusk the cook brought him a tray of sandwiches, and suddenly he recalled that neither he girl nor he had eaten all that day.

He carried the tray inside and, seeing the door open, tiptoed to where the girl lay sleeping, one arm curled beneath her head. She seemed quite untroubled. sleeping there as if for the moment she had ceased to be that stern antagonist against which good ever on her guard. As the slight sound of his coming, she opened her eyes and again those eyes were guarded and alert.

In the dusk they ate and smoked and either the cigarettes or the strong tea dulled the fears of that interminable day. They began talking in low tones.

"He's quieter," Ted told her. "I think his fever's broken. That may be a good sign."

She nodded.

"Will you go back to Mendoza's tonight?"

"I should, but until Bob's better I won't. Damn Mendoza's," she added sullenly.

He was silent. not knowing what to say. There seemed so very little to say to this impassive girl, always so far away, always a little apart from everything except that corner in the darkened room.

Then, to his surprise, she began talking about herself. "I couldn't go to Mendoza's and have anything happen while I was gone." she said him in the voice that seemed at times like low-toned music. "But nothing could happen, could it?"

Unable to answer, Ted shook his head.

"If it does—" She broke off. "He was the gentlest soul I ever knew."

It was for you he asked first of all."

She smiled and a faint color came again to her cheeks. "You're good to say that. But I'd made him promise to do it long ago."

"You knew who he was long ago?"

"For more than two years. It is to me his leaders come for their orders, and it is to me they give their information. There are few things taking place on the border that don't get whispered at Mendoza's. And all those things sooner or later reach Dee Bob."

"But why?"

"Why do I do it?" She looked squarely into his eyes. "I don't want you to be in the dark about me. We must be friends, you and I. I've loved more men than one. but none like Bob. I've been a good deal of life, and I've got a few of his knocks, and I'm probably sorry bit as old as you, so you won't think I'm just an irresponsible kid. And I do it just because I love him."

"Bob is a lucky man."

"I don't know. Nobody can get across to him. Bob's life is somewhere in the past. He's got two things that are real to him—his memories and his fight against Morales." As if the name brought up some recollection, she frowned, then added, "I can tell you something about yourself and there's too—something helpful maybe, but not now." And soon she went to Bob's room and closed the door.

Price, when he came that evening, seemed more cheerful. Bob's temperature was nearly normal. His was quieter, and after watching him for a time, the doctor took a sample of Ted's blood.

"Lucky," he murmured. "We need to be lucky, don't we? You see, your blood happens to be the same type as Bob's."

Within an hour he had completed a transfusion. "I think," he said, "tomorrow will see an improvement. Give him a teaspoonful of brandy in the morning before I come." He looked at Ted. "You'll probably be able to sleep without trouble tonight yourself. I'm going to stay her until midnight, so you can both get some real. Then you'—he nodded toward the girl—"better sit up."

And whether it was the loss of blood or the loss of sleep. Ted did not open his eyes until the bright sunlight of the next morning was pouring into him.

He hurried into Bob's room. The girl was still sitting there, and Bob, he noticed at once, had the happiest smile he had yet seen on her white face.

"He woke up once and knew me. I leaned down and kissed him and he fell asleep again. He's been sleeping ever since. I haven't dared stir. And I'm too stiff to move."

Ted put his arms about her and raised her. "I'm sorry for you, little girl," he said, and obediently she left him.

Remembering Price's words. Ted poured a cup of coffee and went to the man's life. His face was cooler. The deathly pallor had gone. For a long time Ted sat and walked to the window. At last, remaining very still, Bob's eyes turned toward the bed, and with a wild thrill of joy, found the gray eyes of Don Bob open and the lips faintly smiling.

"Thank God!" The words burst from him.

Bob moistened his lips. "Something tells me," he said in a weak whisper, "you've been doing the patient brandy." He motioned the boy nearer. "Did anyone see us that day?"

"Not one."

"Good."

"But you're not to talk," Ted warned.

"Oh, the devil I'm not." And a moment later Bob had fallen asleep. Ted sat by him until two days afterward that Price pronounced him out of danger.

"And it's only because of those two kids," the doctor told Price had told him, "that your homely, grinning self is still with us."

For a time Radcliffe hesitated, then blurted out at last, "Give it up Price. You can't cure all the poverty of northern Mexico.. As for Morales, the man has a screw loose in his brain that will never let him change."

Weakly, Bob smiled up, but the old, unquenchable fire glowed in his gray eyes. "I couldn't give it up —I wouldn't know how to give it up. There are men over there are looking to me to save them—to help them. I'm one of them. When I've done that, I'll give it up—not before."

Price nodded. "You know what I think. I think you're one of those lucky saints. I think both you and Morales stand for forces in the world that must always be at war. The forces of despotism and freedom. And you can't help being enemies any more than a zeitre and a bull snake. Well, I suppose it's my job to leave you back into shape until you can get hell once more. If you don't mind, I'm telling everyone that you're enjoying a strained back. See you tomorrow."

Letters to the Editor

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

There are three classes of the genus Homo called man. First we have that class without augmented thinking. Second, only able to live by clearing around at the same grist all their working hours, always hurrying, always worrying and soon after the stage of youth is passed start-to grow grey hairs and wrinkles at a rapid rate and at mid life they are old-and practically worn out. Then we have the drones and between these two we have the sensible, thoughtful class whose guide through life is reason, and common sense."

Now Mr. Editor I submit this communication to the paper because I have just met a beautiful dog and a magnificent black cat raised by myself from a kitten, filled by these crazy speed demons. Anyone standing on Bridge Street East at the corner can see them hitting a magnificent pace going in an opposite direction. Life is their time so precious, are their minutes worth dollars, that they can't take one minute longer and drive at a moderate safe pace. I am no prophet, neither am I a seer of a prophet, but I look some day in the near future to see or hear of the life of somebody's darling child being snuffed out by these crazy or half crazy auto drivers. Cannot something be done to prevent such a catastrophe?

Yours truly,
D. H. Ackerill, V.S.

Ten Miles of Beauty In Northern Hills

North Bay, Ont., Oct. 7. — The changing panorama of color in the wooded hills of Northern Quebec, as seen from the trans-Canada airway at Rankin, Ont., have had their effect upon the airmen who have at last found work here. One of these, Pilot Ernest Hamilton, gazes across the Ottawa River to the ten mile stretch of Laurentian hills every morning.

"It's wonderful," he said, "There's no place in the world where you can see ten miles of such beauty and see it change and get more beautiful every day."

The autumn hues of the northland have created a deep impression on many of the other men who have come into the camps. Many of them have never seen the northern bush before and some have never seen the changing color scheme as the leaves commence to turn.

Sensational Rookie Gets Only Hits Off "Jarge" Earnshaw

(By Edward J. Neil, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Philadelphia, Oct. 7.—"Big Jarge" Earnshaw, one of the greatest pitchers ever to tread a world series mound, had brought the smile back today to the face of an aged gentleman pointing toward his third consecutive championship of the world.

The old gentleman was Connie Mack, pilot of the world champion Athletics, and as he sat in the ivory tower of his office in Shibe Park today, pondering his pitching selection for the fifth game of the World Series with St. Louis Cardinals with there was nothing but joy shining out through every wrinkle in his 68th year old face and thunderous in his heart for the magnificent pitching ability of this 30 year old product of Swarthmore College.

"Big Jarge" stepped into the breach, where the mighty Robert Moses Grove had failed, turned in one of the World-Series masterpieces of all time yesterday to riddle the National League champions with his fast ball, baffle them with his curves, keep them under with his control, and swing the Athletics back from the abyss of almost certain defeat to an even footing again with the Cardinals. They have two victories apiece after the first four games-of one of the most sensational World Series of all time. It was do or die for the mighty Athletic regulars, battered and bounded by the surprising Red Birds, struggled for two straight games by the magnificent three-hit left-handed pitching of Paul Dean Hallahan, the snarling dogged vengeful two-hit epic of the A's life-long foe, Jesse Burleigh Grimes and the amazing "Pepper" Martin.

They Want Three

It was a day when the Athletics, thirsting for three straight world championships if only to answer the prayer of a grand old man seeking his last baseball record, suddenly found themselves the first American League champions to trail the National League rulers in five years, struggling on the brink of World Series catastrophe. They lolled in the sunshine over among themselves, they listened to Connie's plea, watched the lanky young fellow with the thin esthetic face of a priest, tap Earnshaw on the shoulder and say:

"George, you've got to do it for me, just this one thing."

Then they went out to tackle the Cardinals in the fifth game of the series, the second at Shibe Park, and the first to the Cards' credit they could make it the riotous Cardinals, riding the wave of one of the finest pitching efforts any pair of World Series hurlers ever put together, the smartest and most overwhelming drive to victory.

They did it grimly, defiantly, and the manner in which they ripped into Paul Dean for seven big Cardinal hurler, who had been doing splendid relief duty through the past two days, relieving in a pinch of the Athletics the baseball world has come to consider as invincible when the Cardinals learned how to take the great, Dizzy Dean and Tom Foxx hit a tremendous home run, Simmons, Dykes, Bishop and Walker all got the credit for the A's emerged from their slumber.

Leading the comeback surge, magnificent in his power was Earnshaw as he turned back all but one of the Cardinals. Martin, while the big gunners of Connie Mack floundered the reign at last against the pitching of Sergeant Gabby Street's second southpaw, struck out 3 to 0 victory.

Toning after inning, Earnshaw, pitching perhaps the greatest game in World Series history, never gave the Cardinals down to add another two hit classic to a string of pitching performances that knows no equal in past series history. In Earnshaw's right arm yesterday was all the guile, all the swiftness, power and control of a mere a no-hit classic, the goal that no one has ever attained in this annual struggle of baseball mighty.

Martin No Rookie

But there was one flaw in his ointment, the chunk dogged figure of John (Pepper) Martin, freshman outfielder who is playing this series for the Cardinals. His first full major league baseball, as no rookie ever has before him. Just as Earnshaw inspired with a new zest for victory, love for his aged benefactor, Connie Mack, was pitching the greatest game of his career, so was the grim, hawk-faced youngster from the wide open stretches of Oklahoma, battling eagerly and fearlessly for his own private festival.

As the series wears on the wondermost lessons stealthy at the man, no ordinary hitter during the National League season, smashed the offerings of every Athletic pitcher, even an Earnshaw on the greatest day of his career, as well as giving them all a slight attack of the fever in his display of speed and daring once he is on the bases.

The veterans of the Cardinal cloisters, the league champion, Chick Hafey and his rival, "Sunny" Jim Bottomley, were vainly poking at Earnshaw's dazzling speed and uncanny curves, lifting them feebly into the air or rolling them vainly through the dirt to the infielders. "Pepper" took his cut freely and whole-heartedly and smacked "Big Jarge" for-two hits, the entire Cardinal quota. He fanned in the second inning and allen crowd cheered his every movement through for a while, that he had been finally stopped. Instead he whole-heartedly faced a single into left field in the fifth and after getting the entire A's defense on edge raced into second base. His fourth theft of the series, to come up after a headlong dive into the bag, covered with dirt, grinning through the grime like a big Mulatto stevedore on some boat dock.

That blow ended Earnshaw's chances for a no-hit game but he had had an opportunity to case home under the two-hit figure Burleigh Grimes set yesterday until "Pepper" strode to the plate to start the Cardinals eighth. That time the irrepressible youngster smashed a double against the left field wall but again he could get no further than second as Earnshaw's stuff shot out the mans who followed him to the plate.

Hitting .444

At the present he is batting a gawdy .444 with 8 hits, four of them doubles in the first four games, surpassing the all-time record of .438 Babe Ruth set when the Yankees conquered the pittsburgh Pirates in four straight games in the series of 1928. And so far there is no indication at all that "Pepper" has shot his bolt.

The Athletics bitter attack, that sent Jesse Johnson from the start slashing across one run in the first inning on Max Bishop's single and Al Simmons' two- base thump against the left field wall, reached a fitting climax in the sixth inning when Jimmy Foxx, with two outs, whaled a ball clear over the double decked stands in left field for one of the longest drives ever seen in World Series history. It was a tremendous clout and it paved the way for the finish of Johnson, who already had barely escaped disaster a couple of times as the Athletics slashed away at him the other hits.

Pitching fighting the enemy off to that time, Johnson seemed to have a chance. But Manager Billy Bing Miller doubled and scored on Jimmy Foxx's single. Then Earnshaw singled and though there were two outs, Max Bishop sent Johnson's place on the hill. He fanned Earnshaw to end the inning, got by with a scratch single instead of the Cardinals batted unsuccessfully for Collins batted unsuccessfully for Earnshaw in the seventh and then to Paul Derringer, giant right hand relief pitcher, who was given the order in the final inning, the game for 1932.

All the strategy that the sideline critics could muster in the face of Earnshaw's masterful pitching was Gabby Street indicated that a left-handed pitcher might be the thing. "Rube" Walberg or even Lefty Grove might stem the tide of the Athletics and Bill Hallahan for the Cards in the last of the three games remaining. Nevertheless it came today the scene shifts back to Sportsman's Park tonight for as many of the final two games as are necessary to give one team four victories and the championship. The sixth and seventh game if necessary are scheduled for Thursday and Friday on the banks of the Mississippi.

PLAYER'S POOL IS ANNOUNCED

Winning Player Gets $4,484.24 and Loser's Share is $2,989.49

Philadelphia, Oct. 7.—Each winning player will receive $4,484.24 and each loser $2,989.49 as his share of the 1931 World Series Pool, if it is split thirty ways.

The Cardinals have already decided to cut their series "melon" on this basis but the Athletics may have fewer slices, thereby increasing each player's share larger.

The players' pool, derived from a big portion of gate receipts from the first four games only, amounted to $220,303.60. It is the smallest since 1926. The series rivals split 60 per cent of this on a 60-40 basis. The other 30 per cent goes to the clubs finishing second, third and fourth in each Major League.

These clubs will get $66,091.08 as follows: $24,022.75 to each of the second place teams, New York Giants and Yankees; $16,015.17 each to the third place clubs, Washington Senators and Chicago Cubs; $8,007.58 each to fourth place outfits, Brooklyn and Cleveland.

A FUTURE CHRISTY MATHEWSON

If anyone ever told a story of how he had seen a pitcher strike out 24 batters in a nine-inning game, he would probably be laughed at for the rest of his life. But here is the story he vouched for. In the final game for the Ontario Amateur Baseball championship in the bantam group, young Sammy Salsberg actually struck out twenty-four batters, in the first game of the series against Merriton. In the five games he hurled in the play-offs he whiffed, fanned, struck-out, baffled and otherwise amazed no less than 101 so-called hitters. Then in the final game he pitched his no-hit-no-run game. Sammy, who never knew he was a pitcher until the coach of the Toronto St. Andrew's team happened upon him one day, is most modest about his startling performances, thinks that some day he would like to have a try at pro ball. He needn't worry; he's probably a marked man by a dozen scouts already.

WHITE SOX ARE CITY CHAMPS

Donie Bush Led Team To Victory Over Hornsby's Cubs

Chicago, Ill. Oct. 7.—Donie Bush and his luckless White Sox, who were kicked around unmercifully by the American League Clubs last season, had their big day at last today.

They were Chicago city champions for the first time in five years, and Bush's men were the center of big end of the players' purse, and they had a big time bashing Cub followers by wishing they played in the National League instead of the American. Bush had something more to be happy about as it was generally believed that he would all be re-hired as manager of the team for 1932.

A noisy six run rally in the fourth inning, backed by Thomas' four-hit pitching, gave the White Sox a 7 to 2 victory in the seventh and final game of the series at Wrigley Field yesterday.

Throughout the seven games, the cellar champions of the American League played by far the best baseball. They scored 36 runs to 17 by the Cubs and their pitchers turned in seven beautiful hurling performances. While the Cubs won three games by the margin of one run, the White Sox captured their victories by margins of 9 to 0, 4 to 2, 13 to 6, and 7 to 2.

The official total attendance for the series was 137,451 with receipts at $153,134.50.

REDWINGS HAVE TO WIN 1 GAME

Defeat St. Paul Fourth Time By Four to Three Score

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 6.—A single victory stood between the Rochester Red Wings and their second successive "Little World Series" championship today.

The International League champions led Billy Southworth, gained a commanding lead of four games to one by turning back St. Paul, American Association title-holders, yesterday, 4 to 3. St. Paul now is faced with the almost impossible task of winning all four remaining games. Another victory for Rochester automatically will end the series.

The Red Wings were outhit 12 to 8 in the fifth game but bunched these blows with nine walks by three St. Paul hurlers to gain the winning margin. The run that decided the game came in the seventh inning when Jack Bentley, former big leaguer, singled after Hopper and Puccinelli had walked.

Carmen Hill was shelled off the mound by St. Paul in the second inning but Foreman took up the burden and staggered through to the end although he was wild and hit hard.

The Red Wings, participating in their fourth straight series against the Association champions, have won three games in 1929 and losing to Kansas City in 1929 and Indianapolis in 1930.

The sixth game today and all other games necessary to wind up the current series will be played in Rochester.

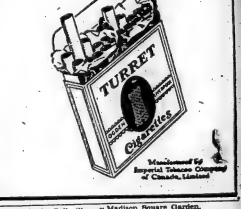
Canada's Record Casting

The heaviest iron casting of record ever made in Canada, was recently turned out at the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation's foundry in Sydney, N.S. Finished weight —120,000 lbs. Time required for preparing mould—13 days. Actual pouring of metal required only 12 minutes, but 7 days were required to cool the great casting before stripping.



The RECORD SPEAKS for ITSELF

This mighty iron casting constitutes a record in the history of Canada's iron foundries and is a tribute to the development of this great country —while Turret's record of popularity stands unchallenged in the cigarette world due to their quality and mildness.

TARZAN OF THE APES, No. 50. (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

By Edgar Rice Burrough

When d'Arnot regained consciousness, he found himself lying in a little shelter of boughs. Soon he recalled the whole hideous scene at the stake; the savage white figure carrying him away. What fate lay in store for him now? Outside the hut he saw the squatting figure of a man.

He called faintly. The man crawled to him in French, then English, but he shook his handsome head. After examining d'Arnot's wounds he disappeared, coming back with fruit, water, pieces of smooth bark, and a pencil. Squatting beside d'Arnot, he wrote, handing the message to the Frenchman.

D'Arnot read with astonishment: I am Tarzan of the Apes. Who are you? So d'Arnot wrote in English about himself. Thus conversing, he learned the story of the fight and found Jane was also a captive. The three days he was in a delirium. Tarzan feared to leave him alone.

Days after, d'Arnot, very weak, but recovering, sat conversing with Tarzan by means of the smooth bark. He wrote: What can I do to repay you? Tarzan replied: Teach me to speak the language of men. Slowly he taught him to speak in French. Tarzan was a very cager student.

Soon Tarzan asked d'Arnot, if he felt strong enough to be carried back to the cabin. Both were anxious to go, longing to see Jane again. D'Arnott wrote: You cannot carry me all that distance. "That's easy," Tarzan laughed. So they set out, Mid-afternoon, they arrived. The cabin was deserted.

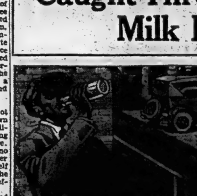
The Beauty Box

By Evelyn Foleis



Procrastination robbed time and teeth. Postponing the pilgrimage to the dentist's office increases the amount of pain and the size of the bill. Every six months the bases of the teeth should be scraped free of tartar. Unless it is removed they will become irritated, chances of an army of germs invading tissues, setting up a state of inflamation and infection. Once a day dental floss should be passed between the teeth to remove forcign particles that escape the brush. After the brushing, use a mouth wash, swishing it around vigorously, every which way.

Every hair on the head is not the same color. A thatch of brown hair may include a half dozen distinct shades. That is why dyeing is so apparent to the keen eye. It is one solid color; there are no lighter and shadowy tones darker to give the more it advertises itself a beauty parlorishit. Some of the new dye chemist shades are effective.

If by chance you have acquired a tanned skin on the back or your neck, when the rain has been down without mercy, dip a cloth in buttermilk at night and rub over the darkened surface, covering with a large, dry towel. It is not alone the fat in the milk that whitens the skin, but the steam of the liquid that follows the cold application.

Bath salts come in powdered form, now, to replace more quickly. They are a delightful luxury, soften ing the water, imparting fragrance to the skin. Two cupfuls to a large tubful, one cupful is sufficient for the day's bathing.

Safe Robber Caught Through Milk Bottle

Finger Print Identifies Him

A series of safe robberies in a number of factories had baffled the police for months. Then, finger prints experts. They never left a trace. They were simple in avoiding patrolmen, and burglar alarms.

Then they made a slip—they always do. One night the safe in a suburban factory was blown open and $4,700 in cash and securities stolen. There were no clues. No finger prints were found on the safe.

However, a stenographer noticed that a bottle of milk on an outside platform was minus its cream. A finger print expert "dusted" the bottle and sure enough—a set of five finger prints showed up. One of the robbers had helped himself. At police headquarters the finger prints speedily established his identity. He was soon behind bars awaiting trial.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beekman

A Gentleman Protests

Dear Mrs. Beekman:—

To shift or not to shift (while walking with a lady)—that is the question.

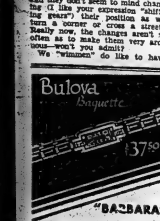
Whether it is better to preserve a straight line and keep to one's own course, or to shift to the outside position as was considered the code of order.

Quite some time ago I noticed in your column, or other authoritative source, that since the passing of the spanking horse-and-carriage era, there was no particular reason for observing the then sensible rule above mentioned. Therefore I have endeavored to avoid appearing to defer to such of the aforesaid authority described such precedent, and am rewarded generally am rewarded with pitying glances, if not a frank effort to supply the supposed deficiency in my social training.

I usually start out from a lecture room, and so forth in the "outside" position, but the shifting seems forced upon me. Am I right, or are my views the wrong? To change or not to change, and why? That is the vital question now awaiting judicial consideration. Can any the ultimate arbiters in such matters say?

Yours for equality of sexes on thoroughfares,

B. B.



Well, anyway modern dame, I say I push forward to say that you didn't get advice in the main room, for I am "old fashioned"—the word is yours, and I'll not resent mine—that I like to have a gentleman walk on the side of the pavement nearest the curb, when he is walking with a woman. It is but one of those small graceful courtesies and several gestures that I like to really associate with some very delightful and gallant gentlemen, and they don't seem to mind either. (I like your expression "shifting gears"!) But sometimes we do turn a corner or cross a street. Really now, the things aren't so often as to make their every occurrence—don't you admit?

We "winnows" do like to have the protected feeling of having the man walk on the side that naturally would be the most exposed, and which is, obviously, the one nearest the curb.

However, if you don't like to do this, there isn't any reason why you should change sides as you walk with the ladies May men not be? Just as you do, and don't make this change. If you are willing to stand the glances, whatever these glances say or indicate, then you can feel justified.

"I'm not a gentleman," sir —I'm all wrong, if you don't agree with me. Perhaps I am not entirely right and I'm all right in my point of view, to those who do agree with me.

The "ultimate arbiter" is the man. For he has the privilege of doing as he wishes in this matter, and if he wishes to change sides, deciding whether he wishes to follow the usher as he and his lady fair go down the aisle of a theatre, or whether he wishes to follow the headwaiter in a restaurant when they are being assigned a table!

Your Finger Prints on Food Dangerous to You

This crook knew his finger prints were dangerous to him. His revealed touching anything with bare fingers—until one time he forgot and the results for him was arrest and imprisonment. Your finger prints will not send you to prison, but they may be the cause of crimes but they are dangerous to you if you forget that they are the cause of disease germs.

Your hands tell about us. We cannot escape them. You clasp hands with friends. You wash things that other hands have touched—a door knob, a telephone. Those other hands may have checked a cough or a sneeze and become charged with germs.

How to be Safe

The germs your hands have picked up will get on foods you eat—a candy, a fruit, a biscuit—and so into your system, to cause you illness. Colds and flu are the most commonly spread this way. Life Extension Institute has made use of this danger to be communicated through the hands.

What can we do to be safe? Wash many times a day and always before a meal with the right soap. No ordinary soap will do. It should be Lifebuoy, It contains a germicide. Laboratory tests have proved that it kills deadly disease germs where other soaps fail.

A Beauty Soap Too

Blended from two wonderful palm oils, Lifebuoy is a beauty soap as well as a germicide. It is a true aid to skin health and to complexion beauty. You too will want to enjoy Lifebuoy every day. Millions do, the world over.

There is no perfume in the luxurious and protective soap—just a safety scent you will learn to like. It vanishes like incense. A lasting, fragrant purity which alternating periods of delightful cleanliness, marvellously refreshing, prevail until they had reached home and were about to depart to their respective homes, and the gentle warmth pours break.

"June, I must tell you something. I hardly know how. I——I have to go back to Chicago. I have earned money—probably to my uncle's hardware store. The bank where I had all my money failed last week—and I'm penniless."

For a full moment June had stared, uncomprehendingly. Then, as the gist of his words registered, she had instinctively begun to struggle for a way out.

"Why, Jimmy, don't be absurd. You can't let anything interfere with your graduation. In three months you'll have your degree. And that means—marvellous opportunity for Black and Black to take you in as soon as you pass the state board. Why, Jimmy, you've got to prepare yourself that offer is the kind of luck a man gets but once in a lifetime—that it is your Great Opportunity—and you can't throw it to it——"

"Three months" he had interrupted curtly, "but it will require five hundred dollars to see me thru commencement. I've got to have it in thirty dollars, and the fare home is almost that.

"But can't you borrow that much money?" she had insisted incredulously.

"Times are hard. Other students have been able to borrow with additional funds at the university are unobtainable. I've counted myself for a loan at a bank. There isn't a job to be had around here for love nor money.

"Steve——your friends. Why mother would be glad to have you stay here, and I——"

"Jimmy, June dear," he had abruptly checked her. "Spoken like a friend. But I said his voice came all the pride of his own being and that of countless proud hearts before him. "I——I won't——accept charity from friends."

For a moment they had stared at each other through the mouth. It semi-darkness. Then suddenly he had taken her roughly in his arms, kissed her hungrily, pushed her abruptly aside, and disappeared through the open door.

All so absurd. So unnecessary. But now she must find a way out —now—within the next few hours. Stephen needed five hundred dollars. He couldn't get it for himself and stay here. So she would have to.

Not until the clock in the campus chapel struck three did June finally slip upstairs to her room. But the smile that still lingered on her lips when dawn illumined the room was one of hope and triumph.

"Any luck?" she asked hopefully. "Not an atom. I've slept on my hand; no deceased rich uncles; no Santa Claus in town with pots of cheese."

June was silent, then with extreme casualness asked, "By the bye, Stephen, would you walk over to the library with me this evening, o'clock? I'm finishing a paper for Prof. and I'd have it done by then." When he agreed quickly, she left the breakfast room in a sigh of relief. Her first step had succeeded.

Returning from their errand a few hours later, they passed the awninged entrance to the exclusive Fairmont Club, the residence of many of the North Shore's elite. Sounds of music and laughter mingled with the clink of glasses. Suddenly June stopped with an exclamation of excitement, slightly behind her companion's back. "Stephen, I've got a dickens of a night. Fix it, will you please, dear?"

Turning quickly, he bent over to be the strap, but paused, to peer intently at the ground. "Isn't that something lying there right under the trees? Is it Mrs. Fairmont Hannah! I do believe its jewelry." Swiftly he darted for the shining object and held it in the glare of the street light. The circlet of gleaming stones grew forth hundreds of scintillating lights to delight their eyes.

"Mr. Frai" said the girl excitedly. "Unless I'm much mistaken you've made a real find." Her eyes grew keen as she studied the number of gems in the bracelet in the drive. If we're right, there will be advertisements in the paper tomorrow. Oh, Steve, will tomorrow be here?"

There are no classes for Frait the next day. With June at his side, he fared forth hopefully to procure the latest editions of Chicago papers. At noon their eyes were rewarded. "Here, we are. 'Lost: Thursday night, in or about the Bohemian Club, a diamond circle. No questions asked. Finder call at office immediately. Liberal reward.' June, we've saved. Can you grasp what it means to you and us?"

"I rather think I can," replied his companion demurely.

The chapel bell chimed midnight as June made ready that night for bed, but before slipping in between the sheets she opened the small desk drawer a photograph which she addressed swiftly.

"Daddy, dear, wherever you are, thank you. You wanted me to invest that insurance money for an emergency—for a rest egg. How is for an investment and high finance?" She checked off the items on her slim fingers: "Five hundred dollars for reward; two dollars and ninety eight cents for a rhine stone pin, and seventy five cents for an add. Total, five hundred and three dollars and seventy-three cents. Dividend. One salvaged gilt-edged future; personal profit: fifty per cent interest in the near future. And as a special bonus, six feet of good manhood as a life partner."

Gambling On Horses Blamed

Toronto, Oct. 7—Gambling on horse races was the predominating factor even in the arrests yesterday on charges of theft of Charles T. Marshall, 72 Avenue Road, accountant for the Empire Wall Paper Company, Limited, 344 Yonge St., and William C. Mackay, aged 52, of 15 Rosehill Avenue, bookkeeper in the postoffice, Bay and Front Street.

The theft charge against Marshall involves $10,000 while Mackay is charged with stealing six letters from his Majesty's mail. The theft of letters, postal officials claim, goes back to the month of February of this year and involves a few hundred dollars.

Steady Job Since 1927

Marshall is 52 years old. Until last September he had worked steadily since 1927 as accountant for the Empire Wall Paper Company. He first is alleged to have stolen $200 and by falsifying his books evaded detection. He began playing races and the stock market until his losses amounted so high that he was seized with the gambling fever and is alleged to have adopted startling larger sums in the hope of "getting a lucky break" and being able to put back the cash he had taken.

His fortune continued to pursue him, he sold police, until he began drinking, to relieve the mental strain. Then, on account of the huge amount of money he is alleged to have stolen, he admitted taking the proceeds upon his mind until he made a confession. Auditors were called in and the amount found to be $10,000. Crown Attorney Eric Armour, K.C., was consulted and a warrant was issued for his arrest. Marshall appeared at headquarters and was taken into custody by Detective Sergeant McCreary, Tinsley and McCathie.

In a signed statement the prisoner is alleged to have expressed relief at having made a clean breast of his alleged defalcations by stating he was "glad it is all over, for you cannot believe how it was bothering me."

Shannonville

Shannonville, Oct. 6 (by mail)—This community was thrown into deepest mourning on Monday, September 28th, upon the receipt of the announcement of the death of a dearly beloved former resident, Mrs. Stratton Gallagher (Nora Farnsworth) eldest daughter of Isaiah Abram Farnsworth. Born in Shannonville on the 31st day of July, 1903, she resided here continuously until a few years ago when she went to Detroit, Michigan.

Nora was one of the brightest girls of the community, always willing to help in any good cause. She was greatly missed in the church in which she took an active part, teaching in the Sunday School, belging to the Epworth League work and in the many successful dramas, Nora was a leading character. She was educated in Shannonville Public School and Albert College and was a member of the Senior Class in the latter institution. Never of a robust constitution her last illness was too much for a frail body which had been constantly called upon to fight against pain and suffering. The funeral was held from the home of her mother, Mrs. John Larone and service in the United Church which was conducted with friends who gathered to pay their respects to the deceased, sleeping in the esteem in which she was held. The remains were laid beside those of her father in Shannonville cemetery.

Left to mourn her loss are her husband and young daughter, her mother two sisters, Mrs. Blake Rose of Detroit and Leona, at home, two brothers, Thomas and Norval.

At rest with Thee O Blessed Light! Has found her soul at last.

And brought her peace and comfort

Now, the darkest hour has passed.

Hunt was under arrest on a charge of attempted murder and was guarded by police all the time he lay in the hospital.

Chief Coroner M. M. Crawford ordered the body to the morgue. Death and the autopsy was held last night. An inquest is compulsory, as the dead man was in custody.

The body was identified by Mrs. Anna Benott, Sunnyside Avenue, with whom Hunt lived while in the city. Anna Benott still lives at Mrs. Hayden's.

10 Million Dollars For Election Cost

London, Oct. 7—An estimated expenditure of $10,000,000 for the general election by some 1,700 candidates who will fight for seats in the House of Commons.

Of the 30,000,000 voters will be entitled to cast their polls, twofifths of the electorate voted at the last general election in 1929, when men voters out number men by nearly 2,000,000. Each parliamentary candidate permitted by law to spend six pence (about 10 cents) per voter in the country constituencies or five pence in the Borough constituencies.

Sawed-Off Rifle Is Found In Car

Toronto, Oct. 7—When Detectives Skinner and McConnell searched an automobile parked in front of Central Hall 12 Queen Street West, yesterday afternoon, they found a sawed-off rifle with shells and a number of flashlights.

The owner of the car, Earl Baker, aged 27, of Clarkson, had previously been arrested by the detectives on two charges of breaking and entering. On September 27th, it is charged, Baker entered the home of Mrs. G. M. Schreiber, Clarkson, and stole silverware and jewelry. On October 1, it is charged, he broke into the home of Pettigrew also on Clarkson Road, stealing watches and jewelry. The watches disposed of on York Street the day morning for $8.00 were recovered. No arrest in connection with the second theft was made.

Baker will be taken to Brampton for trial. To the detectives he stated he had been out from jail nine months. "I hate to go back to jail," he said, "but I don't want to know them for years." he said to police when being turned over to a Brampton constable to take him to Brampton.

AMUSEMENTS

SHERWOOD'S "WATERLOO" begins its run today for two days, matinee daily.

"Waterloo Bridge" is tremendous in dramatic power! It is subtly alluring in its beauty and its infinite variety. A heart-breaking in its emotional appeal! It has a great love story. One of the most unusual in modern drama, between a girl who wanted desperately to love decently, and a man who knew her to deserve it, and a boy who knew all and still could surrender the world to his heart's cry.

These two young lovers caught in love's cross road on Waterloo Bridge in a tangle of love morals and war's dire needs are Mae Clarke, who will be remembered in a "Front Page" and Kent Douglass, the lyrish stage juvenile and coming screen star. James Whale directed it and that alone should be an insurance of a perfect production. If you saw his "Journey's End."

MAE CLARKE AND KENT DOUGLASS in a tense moment in Robert E. Sherwood's spectacular dramatic triumph, "WATERLOO BRIDGE," now at The Belle Theatre.

Thelma Todd and Zasu Pitts in a highly amusing comedy, "Catch As Catch Can," the popular Metrotone Sound News, and Bobby Jones in "Practice Shots," are announced for exhibition on the same program.

"MOTHER'S MILLIONS"

Apparently American audiences are turning away from the so called true-to-life dramas for these picturesf with clean laughter and honest heart interest. At any rate there is sufficient basis for this belief in the large audience that found "Mother's Millions" at the Capitol Theatre last night thoroughly enjoyable and entertaining.

This again is the original stage play of the same name by Howard McKent Barnes, is delightfully enacted by a splendid cast headed by May Robson, who won fame on the legitimate stage in the same role. Others in the cast are James Hall, Frances Dade, Lawrence Gray and Edmund Breese.

Miss Robson gives a grand performance as the penurious woman financial giant whose one thought is for the future welfare of her children but who apparently treats them with the same hardness and ruthlessness that she uses on her Wall Street rivals. Her appeal-ness is dramatic heights when the mother rewards loyalty and final understanding of her children and triumphs over the unscrupulous financiers who would ruin her and thousands of others with their nefarious stock jugaling.

James Flood has given the screen a deftly handled directorial job. He shows in the appreciation of the value of real heart interest moments and deftly blends the dramatic results in the sequences between the lovers.

Frances Dade makes most appealing sweetheart for her mother's secretary. Miss Dade, a newcomer, will recently a Broadway star, brings to the screen a captivating personality to the screen and makes an appealing heroine.

Walter Pidgeon does good work as Clay, a social lion. He's hardly fair to refer to the work of Inez Courtney and Tom Dugan, that adequately matched pair of comedians, as "comedy relief," because they fit so nicely into every spot of the film that they just naturally seem to belong there.

Thelma Todd, Holmes Herbert, and Nellie Walker complete the supporting cast.

Bright personalities, good acting, and interesting story make entertainment combine to make "The Hot Heiress," one of the season's most decided, worthwhile pictures.

Comedy and interest will be the feature of the supporting program which also plays on Friday.

MAY ROBSON, star of "Mother's Millions" at The Capitol Tonight.

"THE HOT HEIRESS"

"The Hot Heiress" opens at the Capitol on Thursday (Silverware Gift Night) with Ben Lyon and Ona Munson.

The courtship of a struggling youth and a rich girl will continue to be interesting as long as people fall in love—and when that story is enacted by a brilliant and smoothly directed and beautifully photographed film, it simply simply can't escape being capital entertainment and that is precisely what "The Hot Heiress" is.

Big Ben Lyon is perfectly cast as Hap Harrigan, a steel worker who falls in love with an heiress but still contends that a wife should be in her home, a home furnished and maintained in keeping with her husband's income. He gets his point when Ona Munson, as the heiress, drops down to Hap's former friends to cook corned beef and cabbage in the kitchen of a three-room apartment. But the joke has arrived when you gentlemen must begin to think of my successor."

The Cabinet was said to be sorely divided over question of religious freedom, family life and education, all of which are included in the clause of the new protected constitution, and the President is said to have lost prestige among his colleagues.

Revolutionary Paper's View on Economics

Mexico City, Oct. 7.—(AP)—El Nacional, organ of the National Revolutionary Party, said in an editorial today that Pope Pius XI. was justified to perform a miracle by appealing to the capitalist class to solve the world economic slump.

President Says Time Has Come to Think of Successor

Madrid Oct. 7.—(AP)—President Nicesto Alcala Zamora's attempt to resign was regarded as presaging the most critical period for the provisional Government in view of impending clashes over religious clauses in the constitution.

He submitted resignation to the National Assembly last night on the grounds that he lacked the confidence of socialist and radical socialist deputies but withdrew it when party leaders insisted on him to remain until the constitution was further advanced.

"I wish to resign," he said, his voice wistful and trembling, "but the difficulty of forming a new Government now makes it imperative for me to continue indefinitely.

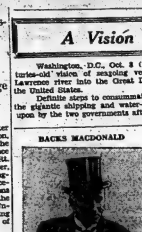
WATERWAYS PROJECT STIRS CONTINENT

St. Lawrence Waterway Project Vision of Centuries Soon Realized Belief In Canada and United States

Employment For Thousands of Men Seen as Possibility



DEFINITE STEPS

MacNider and Herridge Will Begin Parleys at Once

A Vision Coming True

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 8 (A.P.)—Early realization of the century-old vision of seagoing vessels sailing westward over the St. Lawrence river into the Great La kes is to be sought by Canada and the United States.

Definite steps to consummate negotiations for a treaty covering the gigantic shipping and water-power project have been agreed upon by the two governments after years of discussion.

BACKS MACDONALD

Sir John Simon, —pictured above leaving the Houses of Parliament recently, has decided to help Premier MacDonald in his election fight for a new national government. Sir John and 21 Liberalites over to the new protectionist cause, thus splitting the Liberal party, in—ing.

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 8 (CP)—After ten years of discussion off and on, concrete developments towards the construction of the St. Lawrence seaway are taking place. From Hon. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister, and President Hoover in Washington, came simultaneous announcements last night that negotiations will be initiated at once between the governments of Canada and the United States looking to the speedy conclusion of a treaty for the development of the St. Lawrence.

"Work for thousands of Canadian and United States workmen, industrial and grain transportation rates for the western farmers, great stimulation of Canadian manufacturing and trade and cheap power for Ontario and Quebec users are seen as a result of the proposed development. From all angles a new era is dawning in economic conditions throughout the country, it is generally accepted, will be brought about.

Construction in 1932

Start on the work of construction early next summer providing employment on a huge scale, is hoped for. The fact that the United States government has accepted the invitation of Canada for a verbal exchange in the early stages of negotiations should expedite the making of a treaty. Premier Bennett pledged his government to the fullest co-operation of last year to the building of the St. Lawrence. President Hoover with a presidential election scheduled for November of next year, too, is interested in the advancement of the project.

The estimated cost of the entire work is $500,000,000 approximately, which will likely be shared equally as between the two countries. The Welland Canal, which Canada has been building at a cost of $125,000,000 will be part of the scheme, it was stated in the announcement that this expenditure will be deducted from the Dominion's contribution of $250,000,000.

The treaty to be negotiated between the two countries, it is expected, will be the subject to be placed before the Canadian Parliament and the United States Congress and Senate for ratification during February or March.

The first definite announcement of Premier Bennett last night reads:

"Negotiations between the governments of the United States and Canada leading to the conclusion of a treaty for the development of the St. Lawrence seaway will be initiated at once. The Canadian government has expressed an opinion that the initial stages of the negotiations progress would most definitely be assured by direct and confidential exchange of views between the two governments and Premier Hoover has agreed to this proposal."

Quebec, Que., Oct. 8 (C.P.) — "I think that the project is premature. In view of the present world-wide situation and disruption of money markets," said Premier L. A. Taschereau of Quebec, today commenting on the announcement that the Canadian and United States governments would open negotiations in Ottawa for the proposed St. Lawrence waterways project.

"I do not consider it a sound policy for the Dominion to permit the Americans to develop a power project on the St. Lawrence when we have power potentialities in this province, which are bringing American capital to Quebec," added the Premier said.

"Further, the project will cost $1,000,000,000, a large expenditure which I do not think would be justified in view of existing conditions and that the Dominion is ready to turn for its expenditure of many millions of dollars would undoubtedly desire to exercise some control over the St. Lawrence to which this province always has been and always will be opposed.

The statement by Hon. R. B. Bennett is too vague to permit much to be said, but I keep out our conviction that the question of St. Lawrence transportation was but one phase of the whole problem of the development, electric power, which the Americans are sorely in need."

Pacey was knocked down by a shunting train, backing east, and dragged along 80 feet. When picked up, he was found his left foot had been cut above the ankle and his left hand was horribly mutilated, but he was still conscious.

Pacey was an old employee of the Canadian Pacific and was due to retire on old his service at the end of October.

The accident happened between eleven and twelve o'clock last night as the victim was tapping the wheels of a train which had just come in. He was lying stretched, one leg across the adjacent track and the yard engine backing up on this caught his foot and dragged him. His own son was firing on the yard engine.

Surviving are three sons and three daughters, all married, besides his widow.

Oslo, Norway, Oct. 8 (A.P.) —Literary Norway was stirred this morning by the publication in the Oslo Aftenposten of the news that a long lost drama of the noted playwright Bjornstarne Bjornson has been found.

The details about the play were disclosed except that it was written by Bjornson while on a visit to Rome as a young man and the central character is the famous medieval painter Giotto.

Bjornson died in 1906. The play was handed thirty years ago to Professor Collin of Oslo University, who has been dead many years.

The discovery was made public today by Bjorn Bjornson, son of the playwright.

PARTY LINES CLARIFYING IN CAMPAIGN

Ramsay MacDonald to Speak in Seaham On Birthday

PARTY PLATFORMS

Lloyd George Group Still Irreconcilable To Election

London, Oct. 8 (CP)—The issues are being clarified. Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, field-marshal of the consolidated national government forces, has issued his general appeal for support of the national government. Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, leader of the Conservative wing, and Sir Herbert Samuel, leader of the Liberal wing, will issue their own manifestos tonight following up that of the Prime minister.

The Labor party's stand is already defined, defined more clearly perhaps than that of the component parts of the national government. Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, parliamentary leader of the Labor party, last night replied to Prime Minister MacDonald's manifesto with the challenge, "Socialism hurls at capitalism cannot be patched up any further. Labor is now forward directly to a socialist society."

Lloyd George's Views

Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George, ulitular head of the Liberal party, is expected to broadcast his views on the campaign issues shortly from his sick room at Churt in Sir Surrey hills. But the Liberals have three voices in this campaign. Sir John Simon, erstwhile staunch free trader who has turned protectionist, who broke personally Lloyd George three months ago, declared last night that there was no time left for the Liberal minister that if he has lost the socialist majority he has gained the party backing of his fellow-countrymen. And in addition to the support of twenty-five liberal members of the last parliament, Sir Herbert Samuel looked for the support of members of the national government. Lloyd George will speak for his own faction — and Lloyd George controls the Liberal war chest.

Polling is to take place October 27, less than three weeks from today. Much before the end of that time the nation will have heard from all leaders in these critical days.

Free Hand Sought

The Prime Minister's manifesto yesterday asked the electors to give the national government a free hand to consider every proposal likely to help. And he indicated as some of these proposals tariffs, expansion of exports and contraction of imports commercial treaties, and financial economic arrangements with the Dominions.

5 ARRESTS IN INDIAN DEATH

New York Natives Held As Murder Report Probed

Cornwall, Ont. 8—Arrested at the St. Regis, New York State reservation, the Canadian Press this evening day pending complete investigation of the death of Angus Thompson, 60 year old Canadian Indian, whose body was found on the St. Lawrence River, near Lancaster, last week.

Held on open charges, Mrs. Emma Benedict, Dan Lazore, Gerald Lauson, Paul Thompson and Peter Cass, all residents of the New York State reservation, were taken here by Provincial Police Officer Malone Jail. If Thompson, as it is alleged, met death at the lower end of Cornwall Island, the Provincial action section of the St. Lawrence River, the woman and men in custody may be turned over to Canadian authorities.

The state troopers, acting in conjunction with Provincial Constable Mounted Police and Ontario Provincial Police officers, made the arrests at the reservation.

Thompson's widow has told the police that her husband was murdered. The information came to her, she said, from "a confidential source." According to her story Thompson was running across the St. Lawrence River with a quantity of liquor when he met some people on the ice. A struggle took place and her husband was struck on the head with a heavy object, and either fell or was thrown from the boat, she told the police.

An autopsy was held Tuesday but failed to reveal a fracture of the skull or any severe bruises.

London Still Independent Town Crier Spreads News

Only Last Night Old City Heard of Dissolution

WIG AND GOWNS

London, Oct. 8—(CP)—The City of London, the small part in the centre of the great modern Metropolis, jealously preserves its titular independence of the Crown or Parliament and stilks to its traditional way of making local proclamations known, to its good citizens.

Thus the city did not hear, officially, of the proclamation dissolving parliament last night until the proclamation crier and sergeant-at-arms of the city, in wig and gown, by medieval usages, being cocked hats and carrying staves, mounted the lead flight of steps leading to the Royal exchange and read the proclamation, this afternoon.

The odd little ceremony was a mild diversion for the thousands of passers-by probably not one out of a thousand of them being entitled to call themselves citizens of the City of London proper.

5 YEARS WITH LASH IMPOSED

Kidnapper of Officer is Sentenced at Stratford

Stratford, Ont., Oct. 8.—(CP)—James "Red" Shortt, the London youth who pleaded guilty a few days ago to a charge of kidnapping Traffic Officer Jay, Hodgson of Waterloo last July, was sentenced by Police Magistrate J. A. Makins here today to five years in Portsmouth Penitentiary and ten strokes of the lash.

Shortt was the companion of Amie Lamontagne of Toronto in the escapade of last July when the pair kidnapped Officer Hodgson and forced him to drive them under fire hundreds of miles. Arriving at Michigan City, Indiana, the car of Pawn's Garage at the point of a revolver and wounded a youth who tried to stop them. Later, Hodgson escaped but was caught next morning and is now serving a ten year term in Kingston. He received 18 strokes of the lash. On the night of the hold-up Shortt was left to watch the traffic officer and on hearing the police siren Lamontagne's gun, he forced the officer to drive away from the scene, shortly was not caught until a few weeks later when he was arrested in London on another charge and recognized as the man wanted in the kidnapping case.

$500,000,000 Corp. Near Organization

Washington, D.C., Oct. 8.—(AP) —President Hoover's plan to ease the financial strain on the nation's banks moved swiftly today toward actual operation.

He was informed by Governor Harrison of the New York Federal Reserve Bank that the proposed $500,000,000 credit corporation was expected to be incorporated within 48 hours and that details of the completed proposal would be laid before every member bank in the banking group in the country at once.

A ruby weighing seventeen carats and valued at $125,000 was recently found in Burma.

JURY BLAMES HEALTH DEP'T

Fumigation Death in Toronto Probed By Inquest Jury

Toronto, Ont. Oct. 8.—(CP)—That Toronto's Medical Department of Health was negligent and partly responsible for the death of 19-year-old Pearl Winnik, who was poisoned by hydrocyanic gas on September 22, when she entered a Sherbourne Street house which was being fumigated, and that Joseph Hills, the fumigator, neglected to observe certain by-laws referring to his type of work were the finding of a coroner's jury in returning a verdict last night.

The verdict, returned after 55 minutes' deliberation, reads in part: "From the evidence gathered, we are of the opinion that the civic Medical Health Department was negligent in granting a permit to an operator who did not possess a license as required by Provincial statute, and that Joseph Hill, the fumigator neglected to observe a clause of the Municipal By-law which obliged him to look and barricade the premises prior to and during the process of fumigation."

WALL STREET IS CONFIDENT

Quiet Steady Strength Indicated By Stock Prices

New York, Oct. 8.—Security markets moved confidently forward in quiet trading today, and also as expected quarterly dividends were declared.

Swift progress in the setting up of the huge credit corporation to aid banks appeared already to have removed the chief source of uneasiness. Stocks moved steadily ahead, after a momentary sag in the morning.

Gains of about 3 to 8 points were recorded in such blue chip favorites as General Consolidated Gas, North American, Consolidated Gas, American Can, American Tobacco "B", Union Pacific, New York Central and Santa Fe.

Further gains appeared in U. S. Steel, General Electric, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania and others.

The New York Traction issues show a strong strength, in response to rumors of progress toward unification.

The prospect of the setting up of another pool, to stabilize the oil trade, continued to add buoyancy and real estate, received considerable attention, and the meeting was were without information as to positive plans.

County Launches Unemployment Work on Road

TAKE ON MEN

"Hole in the Wall" Route Changed to Skirt Hill

Ten thousand dollar relief program has been undertaken by Hastings County Council on the county Highway from Belleville-to-Bancroft, starting at the Hole-in-the-Wall hill and proceeding northward.

In fact Hole-in-the-Wall will not be touched now, except that plans are to skirt the side of this hill. Excavation is proceeding here. Other hills to be cut down are Hall's Hill and the Hole-in-the-Hill, near Bancroft. Owners of land about the Hole-in-the-Wall hill have made a gratis title to land to permit the changing of the road.

Hastings does not secure any extra grnat for this work, securing only the usual fifty per cent. grant the government provides on such roads.

The work of winter construction is not new, for Hastings County tried it out on a small scale last winter in getting out rock for summer road work. While a little more costly, the winter operations will undoubtedly relieve much unemployment conditions in the county.

The coming winter's plans will be carried on to the end of Christmas holidays or the end of the year, though they may be carried on longer. Road Superintendent Simeon Fox stated to a reporter that the work at Hole-in-the-Wall hill was proceeding rapidly and that the ten thousand dollar relief job is in full swing about forty men will be given employment.

Even after the heavy rainfall of Wednesday afternoon, it is apparent, there is prospect that more rain will fall before the week ends. The city was visited by one of the heaviest rain storms of the year on Wednesday night shortly after the supper hour. The rain fell in torrents and the sleet and hail added to the rising river. So heavy was the fall that the storm sewers were soon came plugged with refuse brought down by the rain. Soon the city was backed up to cause some inconvenience. Water hands however, opened the sewer openings and the water was soon carried away. The rainfall was general throughout the city and as far north as Sydenham. Point Ann reports that the rain did not heavy, just a light frizzle.

The heavy rainfall here over the city on Wednesday morning, one flash of lightning being particularly severe, was felt in other parts of the city were put out temporarily and the service was on as was interrupted. It was reported that one citizen was stunned by the lightning bolt but no confirmation could be obtained. The storm passed over quickly but a heavy rain followed. In the afternoon it was still raining and the rain fell all day in the evening. The heaviest rainfall of the day was recorded at the city hall of 1.16 inches was recorded at the pump house during the day.

The rain brought a slight falling in the temperature but the weather was not exactly cool today although many light fires were lighted in the homes to take the chill off the house. The highest recorded yesterday was 72 and the low 50, while today the highest was given as 58 for high and 52 for low. Early today there was some prospect of frost tonight.

Work on St. Lawrence May Start Early in Coming Year

Half Billion Dollar Expenditure, 5 Million Horsepower

WILL GIVE WORK

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—Announcement by Premier Bennett last night on the St. Lawrence Waterways is viewed by political observers in the capital as an immediate step for Canada. The statement of the Prime Minister strikes a hopeful if cautious note. If the treaty to be negotiated between the two governments is acted upon and ratified by the Canadian Parliament and the United States House of Congress and Senate in Washington in March, actual work on the project may be started not later than next summer.

A total expenditure of $500,000,000 approximately, development of 5,000,000 horse power, providing Ontario and Quebec with cheaper power or employment for thousands of Canadian and United States workmen during a two years' period of construction, lower transportation rates by a decrease in the cost of movement of grain from the head of the Great Lakes to the ocean by the avoidance of unloading and elevator charges giving in effect a bonus to wheat growers of the west; vast development of manufacturing industries and trade transforming the Upper St. Lawrence valley into a great industrial age — all these are involved in the practical effect of the project. From the development of the international section Ontario will get approximately a million horse power at low cost. From development of the national section, Quebec will similarly benefit.

The project will bring the sea to the back door of the half-west country up to Fort William. Shipping enabled to go right to the head of the Great Lakes, and their grain, and carry the product of western farms to the markets of the world without rehandling and elevator charges. Toronto will be made an ocean port. Montreal will benefit from the increased traffic attracted to the St. Lawrence route.

A. B. MORTON DIES AGED 28

Promising Young Man Fails to Survive Operation

One of Prince Edward County's promising young men passed away yesterday at Toronto General Hospital in the person of Albert Haworth Morton who failed to survive a serious operation. Born in Hillier twenty-eight years ago, the only child of Mr. William John Morton and the late Mrs. Sarah Morton, the late Mr. Morton was a graduate of Picton Collegiate Institute. After completing his studies there he entered Queen's Bonnington College and also attended Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, for a special course.

A resident of Hillier all his life, Mr. Morton was a whole-hearted into the community life of the district and was very popular with both young and old. Ill-health for the past two years prevented him taking an active part in recent community affairs, and his death robbed Prince Edward of an outstanding young man.

The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon, leaving his home at one o'clock for services at Millville United Church of which the deceased was a member. Interment will be made in Hillier Cemetery.

GAS SYSTEM IN OPERATION

First Burner Was Lit By Mayor Elliott at Ceremony Saturday Night

Bowmanville, October 8 — On Saturday evening, with due ceremony, gas was turned on in the town of Bowmanville for the first time. In the presence of over a hundred citizens, Mayor Mill. Elliott raised a blazing torch, and set a flame to a huge gas burner which stood on the top of a pole some fifteen feet in the air. The gas sent forth a towering flame, and the people of Bowmanville cheered this tangible expression of the fact that the community was now being served, with gas. The operating committee of Bowmanville's new utility were brief, but they provided Mayor Elliott, and other prominent citizens of the community and district with an opportunity of congratulating the Ontario Shore Gas Company, Limited, on the speed with which the pipe line from Oshawa and the system of mains in Bowmanville had been laid so as to make gas available for the people of Bowmanville. The other speakers included F. W. Bowen, M.P. for Durham county, and T. A. Dunlop president of the Bowmanville Business Men's Association, while the gas company was represented by J. T. Milner, vice-president and general manager and G. D. Conant, counsel and Canadian director.

EDISON NEAR DEATH'S DOOR

Physicians Give Up Hops For His Recovery

West Orange, N.J., Oct. 8.—Thomas A. Edison was near death today in the peaceful surroundings of his spacious estate at Llewellyn Park.

The attending physicians held no hope for the famous inventor's recovery. Official bulletins during Wednesday evening indicated he was sinking rapidly.

His courage remained evident during a dangerous day, and his heart was standing the strain "unexpectedly well".

Nevertheless, there was a strong hint in the bulletins issued at the Edison mansion that the end was nearing. Dr. Hubert S. Howe, physician in charge, insisted that his patient was fighting strongly as the day waned, but he admitted that Edison was "much weaker physically" than at any time during the critical illness.

"Mr. Edison is in a light sleep practically all the time now," Dr. Howe said in a brief interview amplifying the bulletins. "He does not sit up a while in his favorite chair but we had to put him back to bed almost immediately. The strain was too much for his weakened condition. He is much weaker physically than at any time during his present illness."

Dr. Howe intimated that Edison was possibly in no immediate danger of death, but was less optimistic than during the earlier stages of the inventor's sickness.

"Mr. Edison's condition remains practically unchanged since 4 p.m.," said a bulletin issued at 10 o'clock last night by Charles Edison, the inventor's son.

German President Puts Restrictions On Liberty

Berlin, Oct. 3.—A rigid dictatorial regime with cold-accountable and restriction on personal freedom was enforced throughout Germany last night after the cabinet of Chancellor Heinrich Bruening had resigned. The Chancellor was asked by President Paul Von Hindenburg to form a new government.

Simultaneously, came another clash of Fascists and Communists outside the Labor Exchange in the suburb of Schoenefeld, with Fascists resisting police who intervened. Forty-five were arrested. Another gang of twenty youths pillaged a butter shop in a suburb.

The cabinet resignation was to permit Bruening to strengthen his regime before the opening of the Reichstag next week, when Adolph Hitler's Fascists and the Communists plan severe attacks on the government. President Paul Von Hindenburg instructed Bruening to form a new regime "regardless of party affiliations." Former Foreign Minister Julius Curtius will be dropped and several other posts changed.

The emergency decree published by the President was considered a drastic measure in preparation for a difficult winter both in economic affairs and politics. It was designed to protect the nation's banks, care for unemployed, who will total perhaps more than 5,000,000, and to prevent threatened political disorders.

Personal Liberty Restricted

Basic constitutional rights such as inviolability of personal freedom of the home, letters and expression of opinion in the press as well as the right of assembly were restricted as was the constitutional guarantee of personal property. The decree, which will be valid at the discretion of the government, amended Hindenburg's previous emergency decrees dealing with the entire range of public and private economy.

Censorship of the press, private mail, telephones and telegraph was authorized. The state governments of the Reich Ministry of Interior may prohibit showing of films, and publication of any news items which will be punishable by three months in prison. Gathering of Radicals in such restaurants as are now regularly patronized by the party millionaires may be prohibited and the restaurants closed if police believe such action necessary.

CHIEF 'HANGED' AROUND SHOP

Witnesses Tell About Capone at Trial of "Slicker"

Chicago, Oct. 8 — Government witnesses described Alphonse Capone as a superficy slicker yesterday in the federal charges of defrauding United States of $215,000 in income taxes. Capone ignored and grinned in turn.

The session ended with the prosecution attempting to prove that Capone was owner of the Hawthorne Smoke Shop, notorious Cicero gambling house, which made nearly $600,000 profits in less than two years.

Capone never has made an income tax return. If the Government can show that he owned the Smoke Shop and a few more exceedingly profitable gambling houses, shady hotels illegal breweries and illicit distilleries, District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson thinks his case will have been won.

The Government's witnesses agreed over the objections of defence attorneys, that Capone apparently was a scalawag.

Capone's attitude turned to a scowl when the government produced Lee A. Shumway, ex-cashier of the Hawthorne Smoker Shop, as its star witness. Shumway produced a daily entry book of the gambling house. He told the jurors all about the intricacies of cashing chips for dice games, figuring roulette profits, and handling horse race bet sheets.

The prosecution spent the afternoon trying to get Shumway to say that Capone owned the cigarettestore smoke shop. Shumway was willing enough, but Capone's attorney had an objection every time Shumway started to name Capone as the proprietor.

Shumway was allowed to testify, however, that Capone "hanged" around the smoke shop, that he sometimes placed bets there and

MECHANICAL AMUSEMENTS HAMPER MAN'S APTITUDE

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 8—Mechanical amusements stultified man's natural gratitude for personal relaxation, declared Joy Elmer Morrison, Editor of the Journal of the National Education Association, addressing the recreation congress of the United States and Canada here last night.

Commercializing of radio was strongly criticized by Mr. Morgan in his speech. Pleading for education of leisure, he said through widespread use of the radio, it was possible to declare the whole human race in a decade it it were not properly controlled, he said. It must be purged of "petty sales talks" and "crime scents" if the atmosphere of the home was to be preserved.

SCULPTORS' DEAN IS DEAD

Daniel French Designed Lincoln Memorial at Washington

Stockbridge, Mass., Oct. 8.—Daniel Chester French, 81, dean of American sculptors, who designed the Lincoln Memorial at Washington, died in his sleep yesterday at Chesterwood, his summer estate.

French did of an heart attack after illness of several weeks. His wife, their son-in-law and daughter, Major and Mrs. Penn Dresser of Washington, D.C., were with him at the end.

Born at Exeter, N.H., April 22, 1850, French grew to manhood at Concord, Mass., at a time when New England culture was expanding under the influence of the Transcendentalism of Ralph Waldo Emerson and the rest of the Concord literary group, Thoreau, Lowell, Longfellow and Hawthorne. His first statue, fittingly, was of the minute man at Concord.

As a boy his interest was in criminology and he spent most of his time mounting birds. This led to modeling bird and animal groups, but a lovely family first attracted attention to his skill. He modelled the vegetable into a frog.

French died of a heart attack afternoon's portrait most of any. He tried to catch the expression of the man of whom people said, "He looks as though he had seen God." Emerson, when he saw it, said, "yes, that is the face I met every morning."

He maintained a studio in New York. Interviewed there on his 80th birthday, he said, "New York is New York. Stockbridge is heaven."

His best-known inspirational group ... h staying the hand of the sculptor."

FRACTURE OF LEG BY FALL

Mr. Elmer J. West, a stationary engineer in the employ of the Imperial Oil Company, had the misfortune to break his leg at the ankle this morning at the local supply station of the company. Mr. West was engaged in pulling on a pipe wrench and in some unaccountable way he fell over the pipes upon which he was working. The Belleville ambulance was called and Mr. West was taken to the General Hospital where Dr. Blaksley attended to his injury. The home of Mr. West is at Lucknow, Ont., and he is in Belleville for a short time on special work.

MADOC'S FAIR

All Hastings seemed to be at Madoc Fair on Wednesday afternoon, so representative was it of the county and district.

It was the last autumn exhibition in Hastings and the people gathered from far and near for this greatest of all the fairs of the centre and north of the county —a great autumn gathering or festival.

Madoc fair possesses individuality and distinction—it has everything to be proud of. It has the stock and the products which can take their stand by those shown at the largest exhibitions anywhere on the continent, and back of this it has the human stock who make the fair for an exhibition of these proportions is testing the people of the district and finding out their mettle.

Madoc Society has an aim which is intensely practical and yet sufficiently ideal to make it romantic—at least the results are like fiction—Madoc society never spends money unless it knows how it is going to pay for the work done, and it never sends away a disgruntled spectator or exhibitor, and exhibitors and spectators are diligently sought and carefully held. It is no wonder the fair succeeds under these conditions.

In addition it is a representative fair of all the centre and north for Madoc is a sort of other capital of Hastings.

Friends of Madoc fair, who are legion, have no doubt of the continued growth of this exhibition.

THE PERENNIAL CHALLENGER

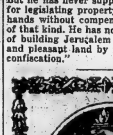
Sir Thomas Lipton's character has been praised by the press of the world. The C. S. Monitor says of him:

"The fame of Sir Thomas Johnstone Lipton, K.C.V.O., went far afield because of his valiant but fruitless quest for the premier prize of the sailing pastime. His name was a byword for resilient courage and fine sportsmanship far beyond the borders of the British Empire. Repeatedly vanquished, he won greater renown than most victors.

"Persons who regarded his vast contributions to the industrial celebrations of the British Empire in the jubilee year of Queen Victoria as something in the nature of a "splurge" were compelled to "haul in their mainsails" as years went by and the genial Irish baronet continued to uphold the loftiest traditions of Britain in sailing contests. In the last thirty years, Sir Thomas has nailed the blue ensign to the masts of no fewer than five yachts in an able though unsuccessful fleet of Shamrocks.

Aside from his sporting enterprises, generous contributions to public welfare enterprises frequently marked the career of the man who rose from the ranks of the humble Glasgow grocer's boy to the head of a great mercantile establishment.

"The year 1930 loomed brightly in Sir Thomas' long career as an international yachtsman. To be sure, Shamrock V bowed to the challenging boat, but the American people would not permit him to go home empty-handed. Entirely through public subscriptions, a cup valued at several thousand pounds was presented to the Irish baronet. Upon this occasion, Sir Thomas remarked that while he would "try and try again in the hope of bringing the America's up" the trophy presented by the American people 'represents something far finer.'



"The crowning point in Sir Thomas' career came earlier this year when he was elected a member of the Royal Yacht Squadron. It was the first time that a man had risen from such humble circumstances into the circle of those privileged to fly the blue ensign at sea. On the strength of his character, Sir Thomas Lipton won a high place in the hearts of people throughout the world."

SNOWDEN TO RESIGN?

Speaking of the probable elevation to the peerage of the Rt. Hon. Philip Snowden, the London Daily Star says:

"His acceptance of a peerage, therefore, while it may seem at variance with his life-long principles, is not necessarily a volte-face but may well be a step he is taking deliberately in order to do what he can among the landed class to pave the way for changes that many among that class have come to regard as inevitable. The House of Lords contains many members who, today, are frank converts to a readjustment of problems involving property they would have scorned to consider twenty years ago. It is not inconceivable that Philip Snowden may have visioned as a climax to his political career some missionary work among them, in the heart of their stronghold, as one of them. He at any rate could speak without any suspicion of personal aggrandisement. He alone, perhaps, could address them on their own floor without one of them doubting either his sincerity or his loyalty to the land he loves.

"Au fond, Snowden may think that it would be a better world if it could be remoulded nearer to his dreams of youth, when capitalism and landlordism were anathema in his eyes—eyes that had been washed clear by long months of agony and long nights of concentrated thought. But he has never supported wildcat plans for legislating property out of its owners' hands without compensation, or anything of that kind. He has no longer any dreams of building Jerusalem in England's green and pleasant land by means of wholesale confiscation."

TRIUMPH

By Aline Michaelis

Triumph is not the share alone
Of him who wins acclaim,
For though through victory some are known,
Some conquests bring no fame.

Some conquerors still humbly go,
Unknown to all the world,
For them no boastful bugles blow,
No banners float unfurled.

They pass unnoted in the crowd
Upon their way, serene;
Unheralded are they, but proud
Amid each shifting scene.

Some triumphs must be bought with tears
And blood and agony,
While others, sought through lagging years,
Are gained where, none may see.

Conquest may sometimes mean control
Of sea and continent;
Or it may spell the mastered soul,
Vague realms, unquessed extent.

OUTOFWORK CALLED at residence on East Hill, asked for something to eat. Was fed. Asked if he would do some work. Yes. Put cutting wood in the cellar. Worked well and lady of house who had to change lunch told him to go to corner grocer and ask for fifty cents on her account. He did. Asked for one dollar and a half on the lady's account, but the lady had checked up on the transaction by phoning the grocer limiting the tramp's credit to fifty cents which rather took the wind out of his high finance sails. He was lucky to get away without a measure of grief added to the fifty cents.

TALKING IN THEATRES is taboo, although some folks do not seem to know it yet. Talking was bad enough in the old silent days but with sound pictures it is horrible. Good taste demands that talking be given up completely and to spoil an evening's entertainment for several rows of seats is the extreme of bad manners. Thoughtless, generally, of course. Let's try and remember that the actors are paid for conversation and the auditors pay to hear the actors, not the audience.

ALL TRAMPS are not "Bums", a term used to designate the lowest in the scale of WORTHLESS men. Two young men, looking for work, they said, called at a house on the east hill, and asked permission to cut the grass on the large lawn. They were given permission, started, but as it was late in the day did not finish. They departed and returned bright and early the next morning, finished the lawn, washed the car and did other odd jobs so well that the lady of the house was delighted and considered the money she paid them well invested. Now there are any number of odd jobs around the city which would furnish many hours of employment to those who need it and cannot leave home to work on the road gangs. If everybody would telephone the Government Employment Office there may have one or more hours of work, they can get everything snugged up for winter and do someone a good turn besides. Remember our good fortune is not the result of any particular merit on our part, but is handed to us because the best use of ourselves and others.

WAR DEBTS

If the Anglo-American debt settlement was a farce, the Anglo-French settlement was a scandal. Year after Year France refused to pay anything on an account totalling almost $3,000,000,000. Finally Mr. Churchill concluded a pact with M. Caillaux whereby France agreed to repay 11,250,000,000—little more than one-third of what she really owed.

It is noteworthy that, in spite of the fact that Britain wiped out almost two-thirds of the sums owed by her debtors to her, she has never yet succeeded in collecting even a sum sufficient to defray the annual levy collected by Washington.

Ill-informed people sometimes castigate Britain's present position unfavorably with that of France and the United States. The fact is that France has obtained cancellation of her internal debt (by inflating paper money), and was forgiven two-thirds of her external debt by Britain.

And the fact is that the Anglo-American war-debt settlement was the most unfair settlement in financial history.—Toronto Globe.

EDISON IN ONTARIO

Thomas Edison, great-great-father of Thomas Alvah, was a bank official on Manhattan Island during the days of John, was a Loyalist, and after the war emigrated to Digby, Nova Scotia, where Samuel, father of the inventor, was born in 1804. One biography says that John Edison also proceeded by ox-team to Bayfield, on Lake Huron, before settling at Vienna. In the latter place Samuel conducted a hotel and in 1828 married Nancy Elliott, school teacher, daughter of Rev. John Elliott, a Baptist clergyman, and descendant of Capt. Ebenezer Elliott, a soldier of the revolution. A few years later this son of a Loyalist became prominent in the uprising of '37, but on a side which resulted in his exile from the country. He and his family made their way to the other side of Lake Erie.

Edisons now reside at Vienna, who speak of their distinguished kinsman as "Al" and have had letters from him from time to time through the years. They have never visited him, but a few years ago gave a letter to a friend which opened to the latter the factory doors when others were refused admittance. These are the only Ontario relations of Thomas A. Edison, and people are wondering if side was the late Isaiah Edison, Colloden, of whom Rev. F. C. Elliott and Mrs. Wilson Ingersoll, are son and daughter.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

FUTURE GARDENS

The garden of this year cannot be made to overcome the errors and omissions of the past season. This, therefore, is the time of reviewing garden lore, when these regrets are mankish and foolish things to the end with themselves and with the time from which they arise.

For the real visionary of beauty that might have been there is even more real than that which is, and may be. Other seasons will follow this and all that was not done may yet be done when the spring is complete and spring heralds a new beginning.

This is the time for the amateur to remind himself of how that other spring caught him unprepared for her gracious ministrations. And surely he will not fail to realize that these glorious days of autumn are given him to do all those things done that may be done against the early days of next season when there is so much to do at once.

Simple Funeral Of Senator Morrow

Englewood, N.J., Oct. 8.—Senator Dwight W. Morrow rests today on a little knoll in Brookside Cemetery a quarter of a mile through the woods east of his home.

His funeral services yesterday from the fashionable first Presbyterian Church were marked by the same publicity that characterized his life but the presence of many national dignitaries, the silent thousands of spectators who lined both sides of the mile-and-a-half street between the church and the mausoleum row home, gave the rites the air of a state occasion.

Vice-President Charles Curtis came from Washington as the personal representative of President Hoover and former President Calvin Coolidge was here to mourn the passing of his old friend, political associate and Amherst classmate.

All of Senator Morrow's children except Mrs. Lindbergh, who is with her husband in the Orient, took part in the services, which lasted scarcely half an hour.

Women's Interests in the Home

The Beauty Box

By Helen Follett

Complexions in general show improvement; body beauty should go up. Due to the use of creamy cosmetics and astringents, the texture is better, there aren't so many oily faces, wrinkles are staved off until late in life. The only lack is natural colouring. Where are the blushes of yesteryear, Nobody knows. They were overcome by late hours, stress and strain of modern life, too much hurry. In yore-times ladies took afternoon naps. The all-night party was a rare occasion. Life was more leisurely then, and women grew their own roses.

Bobbed wigs have reached a state of perfection. No telling how many lovely heads around you at the theatre are transplanted, made of tresses to which the wearer is not naturally allied. Time was when the parting of net was a dead give-away, but now, the hair emerges from a substitute that is all almost perfect imitation of real scalp. Women wear wigs to give their hair a holiday. They have the old thatch well-clipped, oil the scalp twice a week, watch the new growth sprout.

There should be unity in perfumes. Soap, bath crystals, toilet water, perfume, complexion and bath powders should carry the same scent. Then there aren't so many manic fights going on, one odor destroying another, as happens when one's toilet accessories are a hodge-podge of floretted and synthetic lone fragrances.

Fastidious femmes buy their lamb's wool powder pads by the dozen. They are small, not expensive. Get a powder box in which they stay clean and sterile until they are used up. Don't furnish the dull finish to the royal rose. Attractive boudoir bags are offered to gals who are always on the go. They are for bath brush and soap.

"We've had our summer of sunlight and now comes the autumn of beauty gloom. Complexions, necks and arms must be bleached. Lemon juice will serve, so will peroxide. Or you can buy something from the drug store. Anyhow, get busy and remove the rust spots.

A BITE OF HOME COOKING

By Barbara B. Brooks

The first few days of college life are always exciting. There are new faces, new classes, and an entirely new routine. Everyone is gay and happy. Even the meals in the dormitories seem good—at first. But after a few weeks have passed the food begins to lose its savor and all the collegiate glamour will not make it taste like home cooking. The pies don't taste like mother's. Mashed potatoes seem to be the only kind which the cook knows how to make. The vegetables are tasteless and there are entirely too many carrots and prunes. There is much grumbling about the food and no matter to what campus you may wander you will always hear it. It is then that the pound aluden longs for a chair at the family table again.

When a letter from home tells that a box of food is being sent parcel post, it is good news. Its arrival is anticipated with great joy and the day is utterly ruined if the post man fails to bring it at the expected time. It is time, now, to begin sending those boxes because in most sections of the country, the fall term of college is just beginning. Many a weary student is wishing for a meal at home or even a whiff of the family dinner.

It is sometimes a question as to what to pack in these boxes. Many of the foods which would be enjoyed will not stand the journey. If the distance is not too great, send fried chicken as nothing tastes better. The chicken will keep very well if it is allowed to cool thoroughly before wrapping. A box of fried chicken always means a "spread for the roommates and send plenty of it.

Cookies and cakes are very good travelers and should always be included in the box. It is well to remember that if honey is used as a sweetening in these baked foods they will stay fresh much longer than if sugar is used. The food for which recipes are given here will be just as good and even better, when it arrives than when it started.

Honey Bran Spice Cookies

1-4 cup shortening
2-4 cup honey
1 egg (well beaten)
1 cup all-bran
1 1-2 cups flour
1-2 teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon baking powder
1-4 teaspoon soda
1 cup chopped raisins.

Cream shortening and honey. Add egg, all-bran, sifted dry ingredients and raisins. Drop by teaspoonfuls on a greased baking sheet keeping them 2 1-2 inches apart. Bake in a moderate oven (400 F.) about 30 minutes.

Yield: 2 dozen cookies 3 inches in diameter.

Honey Date Bars

2 cups dates, seeded and chopped fine
1 cup nut meats cut fine
2 eggs, beaten light
3-4 cup honey
1-2 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1-2 cup all-bran

Mix well, bake 20 minutes in moderate oven (375 F.) Cut in bars and roll in powdered sugar.

Honey Ridge Cookies

1-3 cup shortening
1-3 cup honey
2 eggs (well-beaten)
1-3-cup sour cream
1 1-2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1-4 teaspoon soda
1-2 teaspoon cinnamon
1-2 cup nutmeats (black walnuts are delicious).
1-2 cup chopped dates
1 cup rice krispies.

Nutmeg or vanilla flavoring.

Cream shortening and honey. Add eggs and sour cream. Sift the flour with the baking powder, salt, soda and add to first mixture. Stir in dates, nuts and rice krispies. Add flavoring. Drop with dessert spoon on buttered pan and bake in moderate oven.

Yield: 2 dozen cookies.

A small jar of jelly or jam or a few sugared almonds will fill in the corners of this box which is "college bound."

Sugared Almonds

1 pound of shelled almonds
1 pound sugar
1-2 cup water

Put the almonds into a heavy frying pan with sugar and water and cook until the syrup forms the hard ball test in cold water. Remove from the fire and work with a spoon until the sugar granulated and separates from the nuts. Remove half the sugar and continue cooking nuts with the other half. Add this sugar, and the remainder little by little until it has all been added to the nuts. Remove from the fire and shake in a sieve until the nuts which stick together are separated.

N. South Wales Refunds Money

Canberra, Australia, Oct. 7.—(Canadian Press Cable via Reuters)—The State of New South Wales, which early this year refused to meet some of the instalments of interest due on overseas debts, will refund to the Commonwealth Government every penny the Commonwealth has paid out on its account.

This announcement was made by Hon. W. A. Theodore, Commonwealth treasurer, in the House of Representatives today. Payments made to the Commonwealth Government shouldered the burden amount to £29,642,000 sterling (interest, exchange on remittances and loan charges). From this total must be deducted $7,060,000 due to the State which the Commonwealth had withheld.

The net debt to the Commonwealth is £22,500,000 and the State is discounting treasury bills to this amount, paying the proceeds to the Commonwealth. The State also declared some time ago, that all future debt payments would be met. It finally fell in line with the other States and Governments of the Commonwealth in carrying out an Australian financial readjustment designed to lead to balanced budgets.

"As New South Wales is now meeting full interest payments as they fall due," Hon. Mr. Theodore stated, "the Commonwealth has agreed to discontinue the court action." This action was instituted by the Commonwealth on behalf of itself and other States governments against New South Wales for recovery of the payments made on her behalf.

SUPPORT WON FOR PLAN BY PRES. HOOPER

President Not Given Power to Extend Debt Moratorium

CONFIDENCE NEED

False Alarm Spread By People With Drawing Currency

Washington, D.C., Oct. 7.—(AP)—A momentous six-point program for marshalling the nation's latent buying power into commercial channels today was laid before the people with the unified indorsement of President Hoover and political captains.

It included liberalization of the governmental credit and currency restrictions to permit acceptance of certain classes of industrial security—the new ineligible creation of a $500,000,000 corporation by private bankers to handle the frozen paper of insolvent banks and supply some cash soon to hard-pressed depositors and expansion of the Federal Land Bank system to provide more adequate credit accommodations for agriculture.

Placed before a colorful bi-partisan conference of Congressional leaders last night at the White House, the administration's domestic plan won their support in principle. While Congressional action will be required eventually to carry the program to completion, no special session is contemplated.

The President failed, however, to gain sanction for him to discuss with Premier Laval of France, on the latter's visit to Washington this month, extension beyond next June of the Hoover-Congressional debt moratorium. In one of the flurries of opposition which gave the chief executive an insight into Congressional floor debate, he was told that any discussions of this kind with the French Premier would be on his own responsibility.

People's Support

Full support of the people for the programme was asked by Mr. Hoover.

In making public after midnight the proposals which had brought the Democratic and Republican leaders hurrying from all parts of the country, he said this alarm was delaying the return of better times.

"The prolongation of the depression by the accession of events in Europe," he said, "affecting as they have both commodity and security prices, has produced in some localities in the United States an apprehension wholly unjustified in view of the thousand-fold resources which we have for meeting any demand.

False Alarm

"Foolish alarm in these sections has been accompanied by wholly unjustifiable withdrawal of currency from the banks.

"There is no justification for any such situation in view of the strength of our banking system, and the strong position of our Federal Reserve system.

"Our difficulty is a diffusion of resources and the primary need is to mobilize them in such a way as to restore in a number of localities the confidence of the bankers in the ability to continue normal business and to dispel any conceivable doubt in the mind of those who do business with him."

Following closely his conference with the Congressional pilots and more intimate discussions with private financial leaders which have occupied him for days, the President called together today a group of representative real estate men and bankers for further conference at the White House.

He won approval for his immediate relief programme last night amid a setting the character of which has been seldom seen in this country.

68 DAYS IN SMALL BOAT IS TALE TOLD

Skipper Meets Boat in Atlantic With Only One Occupant

ON WAGER

Man Was Running Short of Food but Provisioned by Skipper

London, Oct. 7 (CP)—The tale of an adventurer who has apparently spent 68 days in a small boat crossing the Atlantic from Quebec City was revealed today when Skipper John Rowse of the Brixham fishing smack "Pemlee" said he had spoken to the small boat "Oben," bound from Quebec to London with only one occupant, off Start Point last Monday.*

Start Point is on the Devon Coast.

"We understood from the occupant of the boat that she was 68 days out from Quebec," Skipper Rowse said. "In addition we signalled to give his name. The boat was scarcely bigger than our own rowboat but was half decked. She had a mainsail and jib hoisted.

"Her occupant told us he had run short of petrol and his food was also getting very short. We gave him all the bread we could spare and also some fish. Apparently his water supply was sufficient for his voyage to London as he would take none aboard, although we offered it.

"We invited him to come aboard the Fern Leaf as he seemed sleepy and he looked utterly worn out through obviously having had no rest. He refused to come aboard, saying he was doing the voyage for a wager but he added, no more wagers for me. I will never do th's again."

Skipper Rowse added this spparently the man was "fed up" with the privations he had suffered through rough weather lack of food and sleep, since leaving Quebec.

TARZAN OF THE APES, No. 61

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The men turned and looked at one another. D'Arnot knew that his people thought him dead, but Tarzan thought only of the woman who had kissed him in love, then fled. A great bitterness rose in his heart. He would go far into the jungle and rejoin his tribe.

As Tarzan stood on the threshold brooding, D'Arnot entered the cabin. He found many comforts left behind. There were two notes addressed to Tarzan of the Apes. One, in a woman's hand, was sealed. Turning toward the door, he found Tarzan gone. He called aloud, but there was no response.

To be left alone in the jungle, a prey to solitude and hopelessness! Brave man that he was, d'Arnot was frightened. He closed the cabin door . . . Far to the east Tarzan was speeding back to his tribe . . . But he couldn't escape his thought. He should have deserted one of his own people.

D'Arnot read the unsealed letter to Tarzan. It told how the rescuing party had been forced to give up in despair. Also of the girls they were leaving for him, of their eternal gratitude for his protection and service and ended. "We sail in an hour—never to return."

D'Arnot threw himself face downward on the cot. An hour later he started up, listening. Someone at the door . . . trying to enter. Duty was calling. His hair rose on his scalp . . . He reached for the loaded rifle . . . And then d'Arnot pulled the trigger.

BUILDING OF HOMES URGED

Washington, Oct. 8.—President Hoover conferred with bankers, insurance executives and real estate men Wednesday on a plan to make it easier and safer for Americans to build and own a home.

The plan was discussed at a three-hour conference as a part of the president's campaign to loosen credits, one phase of the battle to overcome economic depression. The president is one that greatly concerns the president and would involve reorganization of the real estate mortgage system.

Today's meeting differed from the banking conference of last night principally in that the banking conference dealt with forms of credit not easily susceptible of rediscount, and therefore rigid in character. The real estate conference had to do with rediscountable securities and means of making them more liquid and lower rates of interest.

A principal topic of discussion was a plan previously submitted to the President's conference on home building and home ownership by the National Association of Real Estate Boards. The proposal is for a central mortgage rediscount bank, Government supervised, which would float bonds for public sale and handle real estate mortgages.

Another proposal, advanced by building and loan men, is to establish a central discount bank somewhat different than the proposed by the real estate boards.

Another is for a series of redistount mortgage banks which would be similar in character to the Federal Land Banks and to the Federal Land Bank, which were aided at the outset by the Government, but now are private institutions. This differs principally from the real estate proposal in that the latter would be private from the start, but with Government approval and supervision.

Some thousand delegates are to meet here for the conference on home building, which has been organized for a year, on December 2, 3, 4 and 5. At this meeting the President hopes for specific, constructive action in aid of home building.

COMMITTEE IS FORMED TO MEET COUNCIL ON RELIEF

Meeting of Tuesday Night Elected Officers to Care For Work

Representatives from the various church organizations, service clubs and fraternal societies with a member of the Trades and Labor Council present of this city, met at the City Hall Chambers on Wednesday evening to perfect plans for the relief work among the unemployed this winter. Mayor George A. Ellis acted as chairman with Miss Lynch as secretary. Election of officers took place with his Worship Mayor Reid appointed permanent chairman and R. P. Daly as vice chairman. Miss H. Lynch will act as secretary. Considerable discussion took place with regard to the housing of transients during the winter, and a committee composed of Joe Shorti, secretary of the Y. M.C.A.; Fire Chief William Lewis and F. R. Smith was appointed by the newly formed association to meet a similar committee from the city council to go into this proposition and devise ways and means. A suitable building will likely be secured and the transients fed from that depot. Nothing is definite in this matter, and the committee appointed will give the question earnest consideration. Another meeting will be held in the near future.

RIOTERS USE GANDHI TRICK

Squat in Manchester Streets, But Police Move Them

Manchester, Eng., Oct. 9.—Refusing while carrying out demonstrations at city hall today, a mob of unemployed demonstrators adopted the "passive resistance" tactics of Mahatma Gandhi's followers by sitting on their haunches in the street and refusing to budge.

Police changed their minds and after half an hour of fielding during which 14 persons were injured and several were arrested, order was restored. Among thes injured were five policemen, one of whom suffered a broken leg, a woman and eight demonstrators.

The riot started when police refused the mob permission to enter the city hall, where council was in session.

The jobless breaking through the police cordon, swarmed toward the building, throwing hammers, bricks and stones at the bobbies.

Reinforced by mounted men, the police guards drew their batons and charged the mob. In the free-for-all fight that followed firemen were called out to help. The firemen turned streams of water on the rioters.

Some of the demonstrators, rushing to get a tram car and smashed its windows. One mounted policeman was pulled from his horse and badly beaten. Rocks thrown by the rioters broke window panes in the surrounding buildings. Traffic was at a standstill and several women fainted.

The deputy mayor finally consented to receive a deputation of the unemployed and the crowd gradually dispersed.

Municipalities Gain By Wisdom of Board's Action

POWER PURCHASE

Toronto, Oct. 8.—From Hon. John Robert Cooke, Chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, the Electric Club, at its inauguration luncheon of the 1931-32 season, in the Royal York yesterday, had emphatic statement that there was not one contract nor agreement into which the Commission has entered that has not had the closest scrutiny of some of the outstanding talent of the city, as well as the scrutiny of the Commission auditor, and the closest technical observation of the Commission's Engineering Department.

"I feel," said Mr. Cooke, amid applause, "that the Commission is justified in saying to you that it was only the part of ordinary commonbusiness prudence, for the protection of our customers and Ontario industry, that the Commission entered into the agreements it has. We feel that the effects of those efforts will be of beneficial benefit to our people, their industries and their homes as the years go by.

"The casual newspaper reader might gather that these various power 'contracts' are an immediate obligation upon the Hydro Commission. Such is not the case. Every one of these agreements stipulates that the Commission is to take only a specified amount of that power each year, until the total has been absorbed. The delivery of that aggregate horse power runs on into 1977, and there is some of it that the Commission does not have to pay for until that time. Let it be clearly understood that, in all developments and contracts, we called in all the engineers in the Commission's service — also men who have been with this organization from its inception. We asked them to outline and suggest to the Commission a program of what they considered our power needs would be for the ensuing seven or eight years — believing that there was no possibility of distributing energy from the St. Lawrence before that period. It was on the expert advice of these men, [illegible] that we entered into these agreements . . to provide for the power needs of this province during the years that must intervene before we can divert power from the St. Lawrence."

Speaking of reported financial relationships between the Commission and the Union of Hydro Municipalities, Mr. Cooke said, that the Commission finances all its operations, either by bonds of the Commission (guaranteed by the province) or by direct advances in cash by the province to meet expenditures necessary to issue in developing and distributing power throughout Ontario. I know that there is a general impression that the municipalities have pledged either bonds or debentures as securities for that money, but it is quite incorrect. There is no municipality in the province connected with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission that ever pledged one dollar of negotiable security for the development and distribution of power—but the governments of Ontario have advanced $260,000.00 on the credit of Ontario for that purpose, and the municipalities have invested $100,000,000 also."

GLADIOLUS SHOW MADE MANY FRIENDS FOR BELLEVILLE

History was made in Belleville by the Canadian Gladiolus Show held here recently, which was the most successful ever held. Flower lovers visiting here from a distance carried pleasant memories of the event and admiration at the progressiveness of Belleville citizens and flower lovers. As an instance of the pleasant feeling, evoked by the Gladiolus Show the following letter received by Mr. Charles Symons, Chairman of the Parks Board, is illuminating:

CANADIAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY

Dear Mr. Symons—On behalf of the Canadian Gladiolus Society, I wish to extend, through you, to the members of the Parks Board of the city of Belleville an expression of the deep appreciation of the officers and members of the Canadian Gladiolus Society for the hearty co-operation of the Parks Board and the citizens of Belleville in assisting so efficiently in making the 1931 Show a success.

Yours very truly
Mrs. C. C. Marshall
Secretary-Treasurer

Hamilton, October 5, 1931.

Wellington

WELLINGTON — Mrs. Robt. Wait was seriously injured while attending Coe Hill Fair by a race horse which became unmanageable. The animal ran away, plunging into the crowd, knocking Mrs. Wait down and breaking three ribs and causing other injuries requiring her to be taken to Coe Hill hospital. She is gaining as fast as can be expected. She was able to be taken to the home of a relative, Mrs. Albert Livy later when she spent a week. She intended spending this week at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Ormsby. Hope to hold out that she will be able to come home soon.

Mr. Webster, Agricultural representative, held a coaching class at the home of Mr. Arthur Alexander on Saturday, October 3rd. The work was in connection with the judging competition for the Royal Winter Fair. Among the boys attending were Messrs. Jas. Alexander, Robert Alexander, Jos. Manson, Earl Cassidy, Chas. Berry, Albert Dennison, Arthur Kerr and Briden Alexander. Mr. Webster was very pleased with the interest shown by the boys.

Sympathy is extended to the members of the Morton family in the death of Mr. Chas. Morton, an aged and esteemed resident of Hillier. There was a large attendance at the funeral service held at Merrill Church on Sunday when the pastor, Rev. Plant, comforted the friends and delivered God's message to his people from the text, "Be ye also ready for an hour ye know not the son of man cometh."

Mrs. Marshall Thompour has returned home after spending a week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Grass on the Kingston Road where she visited her mother, Mrs. Brown, who is an aged lady and is very ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Weir and little son, Oshawa, accompanied by Mrs. R. Weir who has spent some time at Oshawa, Toronto, Dundas, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. Weir during the week-end.

Mrs. H. Weir, Moneymore, will spend the week with Mr. and Mrs. A. Weir and other relatives in the County of Prince Edward.

PAY TRIBUTE TO MEMORY

Many Attend Funeral Service of Sir Thomas Lipton

Glasgow, Scotland, Oct. 8 (AP)—Sir Thomas Lipton's native city paid homage today at funeral services in St. George's.

Long lines of Glasgow folk filed past the bier, mingling with many of his closer friends. Interment was in the obscure little cemetery where his parents are buried.

There were tributes from all parts of the world—floral anchors, shamrocks, Irish flags and silverware. One of the most unusual was a model in flowers of the Leviathan, sent by the captain and crew of the liner.

Sir Thomas Lipton left $80,000 Sterling worth $310,000 at the present rate of exchange to the Poor Mothers and Children of Glasgow, his native town, it was revealed today when the will was read. It is estimated that the total estate will exceed $1,000,000 ($2,825,000).

The Lipton country home at Osbridge is to be reserved as a home for nurses with an endowment of £20,000 (more than $75,000).

After payment of legacies to friends, employees and servants, the remainder of the estate is to be divided among hospitals and charitable institutions in Glasgow, the town of Cambuslang, five miles from Glasgow, London and Middlesex.

Charitable bequests will consume most of the estate, for it is estimated that they will total more than £1,000,000.

THE GAY BANDIT OF THE BORDER

by TOM GILL

That night and each following night a rider came to Bob's window and sat there silently in the starlight until the same grizzled Mexican always like the same questioner.

"El senor?"

And each night Ted answered, "Buono," wondering as the man rode away by what telepathy he had known of Bob's danger.

So for a week Ted took full charge on Bob's ranch, riding the range, working out with the young boys, herding the cattle on both sides of the border line. One evening as he came back dusty and tired, Bob looked up at him with an affectionate smile.

"Remember I once told you I needed you more than you did me?" he asked. "Without you, old fellow, I'd be lost in every way."

And it was that, same evening he talked for the first time of the night that for him had so nearly been the end of all things.

It was a moment both had dreaded and postponed. Yet both men knew that the secret of El Coyote had to be faced. Not for always could they share each knowledge in silence, and so, as Bob lay on his pillow that night in early spring, he considered for a while how best to begin. They were alone, for the girl had returned to Mendoraz.

Bob waited for a cigarette, and after a puff shook his head. "Tastes just like an outer tube," he complained and Ted laid it aside.

Bob watched the blue smoke curl upward on the quiet air.

"I suppose," he said at length, "you'd like to know just what happened outside the jail—that unremarkable evening?" for a moment he frowned in reminiscence. "A devilish close squeak. I'll never be a really successful bad man; but I lose all faith in human nature. Almost I have, but not quite—not enough. And it was not me you came for. That beast Antonio was selling my life to Blount. I never suspected the fellow. Not once. I had saved his skin only two years ago with some little danger and effort. He was very grateful then, and he swore with many fine Spanish oaths he would serve me always. For two years he did serve me. And Ted,"—he stirred restlessly—"then, I suppose, came the old itch for gold. It was too strong for that poon whose hide I had preserved. But let that go." Bob's lips narrowed.

"When Blount told us the man's name it gave me a hint as to the direction Antonio might be coming from. That, too, was a long chance. It was an evening of long chances. Almost I was too late. When I went outside I hurried toward the troopers' line. In the darkness it was easy to slip through, but it wasn't a minute before I heard a horseman coming from the north. I couldn't be sure it was Antonio until he was upon me. I think he recognized me first. He must have been carrying his revolver ready, in the saddle. At any rate, he fired a second ahead of me, and I dropped him from his horse. Then I turned, ran back, and sauntered into the major's tent with a stinging pain in the end of my shoulder as to how long I could stand."

For a time they were quiet, then at last Bob asked.

"Now, old fellow, when you learned I was El Coyote?"

"I must have"—Ted hesitated—"now that I do know how did it all come about?"

Bob's face, still gaunt and wasted turned toward the window. At length in that low, languid voice he began. "To tell how Don Bob became El Coyote—I wonder if I know myself. It's all part of a tale that goes to make up the strange thing we call a man's life. And that tale no matter how unfortunately, must always remain a secret between ourselves and whatever God exists. I think, Ted, some of us are born rebels and some are made rebels by that old stepmother Life. To me it may have come in both those ways. But always, from the very first, that old stepmother has cuffed me about. Well, it may have done me good. Certainly it made me take on a kind of armor. It made me hard, too. Perhaps too hard. And yet I loved life."

Outside the night wind rustled among the tall eucalyptuses. Flames crackled in the fireplace across the room. Bob's gray eyes had grown tender with the memories of days and faces long past.

"Years ago," the soft voice went on, "your father took from me the one woman I ever cared for. That was your mother. Rico was right when she chose your father; I never questioned that. He was a better man, and so he took her, as he took all things, but since that far-off day life has never seemed the serious, heroic business I had dreamed it. Life ceased to have any high importance from that time on.

"I came out here. I expected perhaps to find a kind of Garden of Eden where men lived on a wider, cleaner stage, and I found a land more lovely than any I had ever known. A land of sunshine and great beauty and over it a cloud of human servitude. I found a people struggling against slavery, and seeing all these things I was very young then, Ted—it seemed to me that the game could be played to still another tune, and it seemed a thing well worth trying. To see if one by stepping outside the law could not break the bonds that were holding a whole people in slavery and poverty.

"So I bought this ranch very cheaply, for everyone thought I would be hied dry within two years by the big fellows like Morales. The first year my law-abiding enemies took away a waterhole that was mine, and two hundred cattle died. Before the year was out, five hundred cattle had been stolen from those same gentlemen and sold at a good price across the pass. I kept very exact accounts in those days, and, as they robbed me in one way I took from them in another. One year, in an effort to force me out, they had all of my cattle refused for shipment. A month later their paymaster was held up and six thousand dollars taken from him. That more than balanced the little matter.

"Meanwhile, I was awakening the Mexican man. This world of hers fires him nothing, but I did. I offered him manhood. I raised up his eyes. I taught him to clench his hands into fists. All these things meant the passing of years, while I worked through men I trusted, and so in the making of all comics, some eggs had to be broken. There is blood on my hands. I am not a sentimentalist. When I must I am a killer. Disloyalty and cruelty I will not tolerate. I cannot help it even if I would, Ted, and, as the world goes, I have prospered."

Bob's eyes fixed on the flickering fire. At last he shook his head. "Times change, old son. It isn't likely that El Coyote can stand out against the military of both nations. But whatever comes, I know this. I will have loosened the yoke on the neck of the small rancher across the line, and when

BONZO — By STUDDY

I pass, men can say that in the long list of rustling, raiding, and killing that can be laid at my door, not once have I sided with the strong against the weak. Not by one hair's breadth have I ridden from the course I believe to be right."

Again the low voice stopped and the flare of a match lighted up his slim features. His eyes twinkled, and the half-mocking, half-wistful look came back to his face.

"Meanwhile my services as a trouble-maker have been flattering—I apologized at fifty thousand dollars gold, silver or dead—preferably dead.

"The last battle of all is still ahead. For a long time I have decided that El Coyote must go. But before that I'm going to show the border country that the reign of the cattle king is over. If I can make the border lines still ranch and see men hold their herds and barbecues in defiance of all Morales's vaqueros, it will be something worth living for. But it's not your fight, and I'm not going to have you take part in it. You'll have job enough running these ranches of mine while I'm away and keeping Jilo on his own side of the fence. Now I'm tired of talking, and I'd like some broth, or whatever it is you feed to wounded bad men."

As Ted rose, Bob added, in quiet decision, "And tomorrow morning I get up."

CHAPTER XXV.

That same bright morning Mendoza, patron of the glittering palace of dance, was standing very submissively before a limousine drawn up outside his patio. Mendoza's black eyes glistened with excitement. Not for nothing, he was exclaiming in voluble Spanish, had he been so honored as now. Never before dared he even hope that Senor Paco Morales might pay a visit to his unworthy place. But he was desolate that the senor had come in the morning, for now all was silent; yet if he would do him the favor—would he not take a glass of Spanish wine to refresh him?

Morales listened nonconmittally to the fellow's talk, while his eyes passed leisurely over the low, adobe building that, like some gigantic candle of the desert, brought human scents of both countries to its nightly allure. At last Morales raised his hand and Mendoza froze to respectful silence.

"You have here, I am told, many beautiful women, no?"

The little innkeeper's eyes took on a cunning, knowing look. Now they were getting somewhere. Now, he assured himself, the old fox talked business. He raised his hands in a wide gesture. "Senor, there are women here who would make the great saints weary of paradise. I have here the beauty of many nations. For the dance there is a girl from the boulevards of Paris, a girl, you conceive, who has just come to my palacio, Herr little fool—"

"Let us not spend this delightful morning talking of a woman's foot. Especially the foot of a woman who does not interest me."

Fall Fairs Over in County Whole Countryside Turns Out To Celebrate With Madoc

Success of Centre Hastings Fair Beyond All Expectations

NEW CATTLE SHEDS

Marked Quality of Exhibits and Program of High Merit.

Madoc Fair is the last great autumn festival of Centre Hastings and when the exhibition closed last night it might almost be said that the autumn was far spent and colder weather might be expected. Wednesday's fair was a real harvest home in many ways—it brought the entire countryside together for a radius of twenty-five or thirty miles and stretched even out to the lake front and the north boundary of Hastings.

Eight years have passed since Madoc Agricultural Society purchased new grounds with a credit of $37.82. Today the association owns an eighteen thousand dollars property and building, another favored but four hundred dollars on it which was cleared off yesterday held on Wednesday. Every year has seen hundreds added to the already existing buildings and this year saw the completion of metal roofed cattle sheds costing $1,800 the pride of Madoc. Besides the valuable grounds, this society has thirty-two acres of land to sell.

That is in brief the history of Madoc fair since it left the old grounds in the valley and grew so large. There growth seemed impossible to the extent to which it has been achieved at the part new situated to the northeast of Madoc. At this time of writing we not tell the real thing—it shows the photo and signs but not the dynamic force which has been accumulating this society. There is a spirit—one spirit—dominating the fair—everyone it was apparent this year—all working and co-operating themselves for one end.

"We strive to make new entries and we strive never to send away an exhibitor dissatisfied with the field," was the comment of Secretary W. J. Sills, who from his eyrie office on the highest land in the grounds saw everything moving before him. His remark explained why everyone wore the look of content and enjoyment.

The story of the 1931 exhibition in many ways recalls that of previous years—large crowds, large exhibits, and a rounded out program. There was this year 2727 entries and two hundred and thirty-eight exhibitors. Here also the story is a brief outline. To tell the truth, the exhibition needs every other exhibition held in the Bay of Quinte section this year in many respects. It had not a weak point in the entire program. The rainfall which drenched the grounds in the early morning did restrain a number of the larger exhibitors from coming. Even the afternoon downpour did not set up dissatisfaction—not one person was heard who regretted coming, for the day was rich in enjoyment of the eye, ear and mind.

The attendance mounted up to six thousand or so—the gate receipts being over fifteen hundred dollars.

The wealth of Centre and North Hastings was there. In motor vehicles the fair was impressive, in exhibits it topped the entire resources of the county. The horse exhibits were large, the cattle show would do honor to the largest exhibitions, the sheep and swine and the poultry exhibits were large. In the dairy branch Madoc set a high standard, from the horse of cheese being entered in the competition, and many entries of butter being shown. In grain, seeds, and vegetables, and fruit Madoc fair demonstrated the fertility of this part of the country. In the main hall was one of the finest exhibits demonstrations of the richness of the interests of the people of Madoc area where a mine of lovely handiwork of the women of the community, delicious meats, preserves, pies, cakes, bread loaves of many kinds, confections and fancy work and all the confections and manufactures of the household. In addition to the flower and plant exhibition and the educational exhibits of schools' studies and craftsmanship stood revealed. Here one could linger with thoughts of the delights of the farm life as autumn evenings set in with the chill and the comforts of the homes, where hospitality reigns with the spread of rich foods, which make the table so appetizing.

Madoc board has prepared a program of fine afternoon's overflowing with novel attractions in addition to the appeal — drawing contests, road cutting contests, carpentry competitions, dance, greasy pole climbing and so on, besides the many track events, and saddle competitions.

Speeding Events

As usual the speeding events proved to be popular with the majority of the spectators present upon the grounds, the railings about the track being lined while other points of vantage were taken possession of. There were three events upon the score card and they pertainly proved of interest. In the 2.18 and the 2.35 classe five heats were required to name the first and second winners. Shortly before the finish of the first heat of the 2.25 class Miss Gratton Starr and Peter V. had a spill at the corner of the homestretch. Fortunately both were unescaped with minor injuries while the blossom in addition to the bikes were, however, badly damaged.

2.18 Class

There were six horses entered in this class and when four heats had been run Keenedale, owned by C. Ellis of Stirling, had won two with their credit. In the fifth and final heat between these two horses Dunning the position of the track, good ing the condition of the track, good was the time which was as follows:

Keenedale, C. Ellis, Peterboro 1 2 1 1 1

Moorsy Direct, W. Sharen, Peterboro 2 3 1 1 1

Free For All

Considerable interest centred in this event although there were but three horses competing. They were however, rather evenly matched and as a result the event was treated to three good heats. Princess Audrey, owned by H. S. Reed of Toronto, while rather closely pressed by Rolls Rollie, owned by H. G. Hunter, Smith's Falls, was under the wire first in the three heats. Summaries as follows:

Princess Audrey, R. Scott, Toronto 1 1 1

Louis Bothe, H. S. Hunter, Smith's Falls 2 2 2

Alayne, ——— Morrison, Toronto 3 3 3

Time: 2.21¼; 2.21; 2.19¾.

2.35 Class

When Mr. C. S. Rollins, starter, sounded the bell to call out the competitors in this event, no less than 13 horses responded and were started off after several attempts at scoring. It was the 7th heat that two of the horses fell while on the last turn down the track, but the event ended in a surprise to many. Sid Direct, owned by J. Labarge of Bancroft, after being fourth in the first heat, captured third place in the third heat, then won the next two in the two final heats. Peter V. and Billy Direct, both of Peterboro, won the first heat and Craggy O and Prince Ace were drawn after the second heat. When four heats had been completed the record showed that there were four horses each tied to be called out for the 5th heat as follows: Peter V. owned by Lou Errickson owned by H. Dinent, Belleville; Sid Direct, first, to her credit. Sid Direct, owned by J. Labarge, Bancroft and Christy Marque owned by H. Dinent, Belleville, broke, one in the fifth and final heat Sid Direct won by a slight margin. Summary:

No Salves—No Cutting
Your itching, bleeding, protruding piles will go when you actually learn the cause. Poor blood circulation is the weak, flabby parts —and not one minute before. Relieve the cause with the thin-ink internal remedy must be used. HEM-ROID, prescription of Dr. J. Leonhardt, succeeds because it stimulates the circulation, gives out congested blood, heals and removes the tissue-destroying poison. HEM-ROID has such a wonderful record right in this city, that J. Hepburn Welcome To Assembly Seat, Henry Intimates

Toronto, Oct. 8.—If Mitchell F. Hepburn, official Leader of the Provincial Liberal Party, tries for a seat in the Legislature any time, by way of a recognized Liberal riding, he will not be opposed by the Conservatives.

Premier George S. Henry threw out this assurance yesterday in the form of a veiled invitation to the young Liberal chieftain to be "up and at 'em" in the forthcoming by-election.

"Mr. Hepburn should be in the "in fact," he added, with a sly chuckle, "we are very anxious to get him in the House."

Asked if the Conservatives would refrain from opposing Mr. Hepburn here in the event that North Wellington seat made vacant by the recent death of Hon. Lincoln Goldie, the Premier replied: "No election in that constituency has yet been pasted. And that's a government seat. We're not giving that one away."

FORWARD PASS

Joe Brown, once one of the greatest half-backs in Canadian football, and now the coach of Western University, the "baby" of the Eastern Intercollegiate League, apparently doesn't think much of the new forward pass rule now making its bow to eastern fans in the senior leagues. According to reports emanating from London, Joe isn't doing much about the rule except in a defensive way. He is concentrating on the line again, as he did last year. Fans will remember what the Western line did to the opposition last year; they broke through them like tissue paper. Unfortunately they didn't have the back-field to make gains for them. The Mustangs were the surprise of the year last season, and there's no telling what applecart they are going to upset this fall with a good many of last year's players still in classic. At any rate, Joe is making as good a coach as he was a player.

PEPPER MARTIN PUTS ON ONE MAN SHOW, DEFEATING A'S IN CRUCIAL GAME OF SERIES

Makes Three Hits and Scores Four Runs in Game

HOMERED IN 6th

Scouts Apparently Failed To Look Rookie Over Before Series

(By Edward J. Neil, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Aboard the Cardinals Special Train Enroute to St. Louis, Oct. 8.—Under the personal supervision of John Leonard "Pepper" Martin, escorted by John Leonard "Pepper" Martin, dominated by John Leonard "Pepper" Martin, the one-man show, that is the World Series of 1931, moved westward out of American League territory today and into the land of the St. Louis Cardinals, practically the personal property of John Leonard "Pepper" Martin.

Takes Series by Storm

Never in all World Series history, not even in the heyday of baseball's immortal Babe Ruth has a single individual so taken into his own eager, irrepressible self a drama of the magnitude of this World Series struggle of the Philadelphia Athletics and the Red Birds from the banks of the Mississippi.

Five games have flowed under the baseball bridges since the world champion, Athletics, overwhelming favorites to win their third straight crown and set a new record for series conquests, tangled for the first time with the National League champions just a week ago in St. Louis. Today, as the series speeds westward, the Cardinals lead three to two in games and restlessly waiting to administer the coup de grace is this same "Pepper" Martin, just about the cause of it all.

"There has been pitching by that "Big Moose" of the Athletics, Geo. Earnshaw, that for studied, painstaking brilliance has never been surpassed in their annual league struggles. The great warrior of the game, marching, bitter, uncompromising Burleigh Grimes, hurled another two-hit masterpiece and "Wild Bill" Hallahan's two splendid pairing performances, but all these pales like the brilliance of the wild wahoo from Oklahoma, John Leonard "Pepper" Martin.

Single-handed he has won two of the three games that now belong to the Cardinals. In the first game, when Lefty Grove pitched a loose victory, he hit safely three times, drove in one run and scored the other on Pepper Martin's two, George Earnshaw, in the second game, hitting safely twice, running bases madly, scoring twice. When the Cardinals were trounding Grove in the third game, he led toe way again with two hits. In Earnshaw's great two-hit victory, it was the "Pepper" who got them both.

Martin Wrote Story

But yesterday, with the series deadlocked at two games all, the pressure on hill, the Athletics hitting and fielding with tremendous advantage of virtual summation and Lefty Grove, ace of the Athletics, moved up to fourth place in the batting order, the task-to-end position "Pepper" grove in four runs. He has no part in the making of the trio, when the victory has become a rout, in the ninth, probably because he didn't happen to come to bat in that inning.

That honor was won by Martin, Waite Hoyt, in fairly good command, except where the wild wahoo was concerned; might have made it close for batsman in a stirring struggle.

But with martin in there it was simply no contest. Grove allowing seven hits in six innings, the last one "pepper's" homer, that spun high and far into the upper tier of the 8th field stands, scoring Frankie Frisch before him, Hoyt gave way to Rube Walberg, who everyone thought would be lecture Connie Mack's starting pitcher.

Walberg left Jimmie Foxx and Simmons, three times, or a grand total, twelve men.

With "pepper" driving the heart right out of the Athletics, the rest of the Cardinals hit well.

Bottomley, cropped to ninth in the batting order, shifted Martin into the cleanup post, collected two hits. Frankie Frisch banged out a single and a double and Jim Wilson collected a pair of singles, but it was "Martin" alone, who could hammer over the runs when the ball game still was hanging in the balance. He came to bat in the first inning, the roars of an slim crowd of 22,000 ringing in his ears, filling him in spite of the crusader's mien with which he has been flagging the home boys. Andy Reese was third, running for Sparky Adams, injured third baseman, who had singled in Frisch's long single had sent him to third. Martin immediately scored him with a long fly out to Simmons in deep left.

Beat Out Bunt

Although he beat out a bunt to start the sixth inning, which singled, Martin did no more damage until the sixth.

It was anyone's ball game thus these innings as Al Simmons, doubling in the second inning, in the second and smashing a single off Hallahan in the third, and the third was the particular thorn in the Cardinal southpaw's side, as he took brilliant pitching and Simmons' outfielding from the base paths to avoid an Athletic score in the first occasion as Jimmy Foxx grounded out to Bottomley, retiring the side by trying run across irted to score from second on Jimmy Dykes' infield out. He was caught with fifteen feet to go to the third.

Simmons precipitated another tense situation for Hallahan as he singled to open the fourth and then walked, but the little lefty forced Miller and Cochrane to ground to Bottomley and fanned Dib Williams.

But before Simmons could break through with his single hit, rob Hallahan of another shutout, he made his somewhat insulting streak at it, Martin broke in for the ball in left in the sixth With one out, Frisch doubled to deep third. Then more it was "Pepper's" turn and he banged a single through into the stands.

With that clout went the ball game, although Simmons singled to left, went to third on Foxx's single off Hallahan's shin and scored without opposition on Miller's infield out to the box. Martin's single got that run back in the eighth by singling to Center after Grimes Watkins who had walked and stole second, Bottomley reached first by forcing Chick Hafey, who had singled off Grimmet to start the ninth and the first man reached on an unnecessary run on singles by Wilson and Charley Gelbert.

The A's reached Hallahan for a total of eight hits, five of them in the last three innings when the game was no longer in doubt. Martin will be unleashed on the Athletics again in the sixth game in St. Louis tomorrow. Burleigh Grimes or Paul Derringer right handed rookie, beaten off in their first appearance, will go sitter the final victory the Cards need to give the National League's first championship in five years. George Earnshaw is Connie Mack's likeliest selection.

"I KNOW it's not pleasant to shave, son, but surely you won't continue to risk the respect of your wife just to avoid a little discomfort. I really think Mary has been quite tolerant. Your father was always careful about shaving and I would have felt very badly if he hadn't been particular. I don't think you can realize how much this means to a woman, although before you and Mary were married I never saw you without a clean shave. Now you're getting careless, and Mary is terribly upset about it. She hasn't mentioned it to me, but I know you're treading on dangerous ground. Mary can't help but think you care less for her now than you did when you married her, and I know that isn't the case. Please, son, you'll make us both happy if you're more careful about shaving."

Mother is right, a clean shave is extremely important to most women. A growth of stubble is repulsive and can actually cost the respect of wife or sweetheart. In the past shaving may have been a task to avoid, a real nuisance, but with a keen blade that shears the beard without discomfort. It was designed especially for men with tender skin and is, we believe, the finest razor blade ever produced. Try it on our positive guarantee of satisfaction. Buy a package and slip one in your razor tomorrow morning. You agree it is a far superior blade, that every shave is quick and clean, or return the package to your dealer and get a refund.

GRID TEAMS ARE HUSTLED

All Teams Will Present Near Regular Line-upsFor Games

Toronto, Oct. 8 (CP)—Final workouts in preparation for the opening of the Eastern Canadian rugby season, Saturday, will be undertaken by coaches of senior grid squads throughout the province tonight when heavy uniform practices are scheduled.

With Armour Munro definitely out of Saturday's game with the Tigers at Hamilton, coach Buck McKenna of Argonauts will likely put his speedy youngster, Jack Taylor, on the backfield with Frank Turville. Munro was not be able to get back into the game for two or three weeks but as the knee injury which is bothering him is slow in responding to treatment.

Coach Harry Hobbs of the University of Toronto squads announced last night he would probably use Harold Richardson and Jack Sinclair on the backfield when his inter-collegiate team meets Queen's here Saturday. Richardson who played with the "Orphans" for years and was a sub on the first team last year is a fine all-round athlete. Sinclair is a good catch and a tricky broken field runner. Richardson possesses an abundance of speed.

Sunny Beach, Dominion champions, held a strenuous workout under the floodlights last night and coach Alex Ponton has ordered a similar drill for this evening in order to get his potages into condition for the heavy week-end programme which faces the champions. A. Boy, star punter of last season's aggregation who has featured the Beaches' attack in two exhibition games to date will hold down the kicking assignment when the East leaders journey to Kitchener Saturday.

Barring injuries in tonight's drill, coach Joe Breen of Western University will field his regular team against McGill, when the Mustangs visit London Saturday to officially open the Intercollegiate grid campaign. Breen's squad has formed a strong defence for the forward pass, which McGill is reported to use extensively.

Two leagues were organized at the "Y" alleys yesterday. The Teachers' League with the following officers: President—Mr. Doxsee.

Vice-President—Mr. Anderson.

Secretary—Miss Canfield.

This league had a very successful year last season and everything points to another banner season this year.

The next to organize was the Industrial League with Mr. H. Saltsman, president; Mr. R. Bruton, vice-president; and Mr. L. Blaker, secretary. This replaces the Bush League of last year and as the teams entered appear very evenly balanced everything points to a real interesting race. ST. PAUL WINS EXTEND SERIES

Rochester Defeated 9-3 But Still Sitting in Driver's Seat

Rochester, N.Y., Oct. 8— The St. Paul Saints, champions of the American Association, may have to yield the "Little World Series" title to Rochester but it won't be without a struggle.

Beaten four times in a row and apparently on the run, the Saints came back yesterday to trounce the International League champions, 9 to 3, and send the series into the seventh game.

Despite their easy triumph, however, the Saints still were in a precarious position. Rochester, leading four games to two, needed to take only one of the three remaining contests to clinch the title.

A'S STILL FEEL THEY CAN WIN

Earnshaw Likely to Get Hurling Assignment In Friday's Game

(By Alan Gould, Associated Press) Sports Editor)

Enroute to St. Louis with Athletics, Oct. 8. — The world champion Athletics sped westward today for the concluding world series drama. Looking and acting anything but a club possibly on the verge of being shorn of its title.

They will with the sixth game tomorrow at St. Louis to prolong the fight but they are simply talking about the fun they will have with the Cardinals in the seventh and deciding contest. To a man they consider the sixth game and another knockout theirs for the asking and they do not see how George Livingston Earnshaw can lose.

Connie Mack smiles and says "Yes I have a lot of confidence in George" — players think Earnshaw certainly will pitch Friday and if he wins, they regard it likely the famous right-hander will start the seventh game Saturday, with Lefty Grove in reserve both days.

"The way I look at it," said Mickey Cochrane today, "Earnshaw has shown he can over-power the Cards —that is, all but this Martin. He has shown he can do the trick many times. He did on Saturday he felt like pitching. He pitched success ive games in both the 1929 and 1930 series with only a day in between."

Earnshaw is one of the few who doesn't participate in the general hilarity of the world champions en route. Big George prefers reading him and a quiet conversation to the boisterous exchange of wise-cracks of a poker game. He looks very much like a great hight-handed pitcher. Cagey Lefty Grove, with his "bear down" on the opposition and smoller them whenever required. He's the one big reason why the A's are still confident they will take two in a row and win the series.

Plenty Absent Martin

You hear plenty about a young gent named Martin in the gabfests of the world champions.

"When Martin came to bat about the third time yesterday," remarked Cochrane, "I said to him, 'say, Kid, don't you ever pop out?' He answered me, 'I'm just in there swinging and getting the breaks.'"

Low on record is that with Earnshaw invincible and Grove "due" to have an edge in pitching over the Cardinals, who must rely on Grimes and Hallahan without giving either the advantage.

Earnshaw in Cochrane's opinion, was never faster than in winning the fourth game. The A's backstop and Jim Collins, first baseman, who struck out, and was asked why—for one of St. George's sizzling had much of a break on it. "Only thought a long ball was coming," said Collins, "but I'm not sure I saw it."

UNEMPLOYED NAME HANNA

Belleville Unemployed Association Formed at Large Meeting

The Belleville Unemployed Association came into being Wednesday night when over 300 unemployed in this city met in the True Blue Lodge hall to complete their organization. Charles E. Hanna was again elected chairman and the meeting was conducted in an orderly and thorough manner. The men talked over the meeting that was held recently in the City Hall and practically the same line of reasoning was used. The Association are still of the opinion that Canadians should buy Canada coal and arrangements to that end should be made with the governments interested.

The election for the several offices was keenly contested with the exception of the presidency and only one put before the meeting and he was unanimously elected. The other officers of the Association are Chester M. Hinman, vice president, and A. Ayling, secretary treasurer. The executive committee will consist of Ernie Baldree, Geo. Matthews, Eugene Wheeler, R. Parks and Jack Kane. No representative was sent to the meeting called by the Mayor in the City Hall to perfect the organization started last week to further relief work in the city this winter. It is understood a certified member from the Association will be appointed and meet with other representatives of the city's organization and work towards the betterment of all classes. W. H. Luke of the Trades and Labor Council was the official representative of that body to the meeting called by the Mayor.

TRADE ACROSS "LINE" NEEDED

Economic Adjustment in World's Affairs Required

Vancouver, Oct. 8.—We ought to develop trade between Canada and the United States by every means rather than hamper free intercourse, free barter and free trade," President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, said yesterday addressing a luncheon given by R. J. Cromie, publisher of the Vancouver Sun.

"We have got to remember that you can't sell all and buy none."

In the international field Mr. Green declared that there must be economic adjustment that will put the world's affairs on a more economic basis.

AT CAPITOL TONIGHT

"The Hot Heiress" at the Capitol tonight. (Silverware Night Nights) opens a two-day run at this theatre

This strictly modern romance is from an original story by Herbert Fields. The cast is headed by Ona Munson, beautiful recruit from the Broadway stage, and Ben Lyon of "Hell's Angels" fame. Others who play prominent parts are Tom Dugan, Walter Pidgeon, Inez Courtney, Thelma Todd, Elsa Bartlett, Holmes Herbert, Nella Walker and George Ling. Clarence Badger directed

"The Hot Heiress" presents the startling adventures of Juliette Hunter, a Park Avenue society girl whose roving eye sees and covets a roughneck riveter, Hap Harrigan, who nonchalantly works among the steel girders of the skyscraper, which is mushrooming up, next door to the hifalutin Hunter apartment.

Hap, one lucky day, misses the rivet that Dugan, his comical helper, tosses to him. The lost metal hurtles into the dainty boudoir of Juliette, scaring the carpet. Hap and Dugan crawl into the high place to put out the blaze and Juliette promptly feigns a faint in the arms of the handsome Hap. She then lures them into a caption him for a husband, in spite of the wealthy man-about-to whom she is engaged.

Her rawhy friends sneer, her aristocratic parents scold, but Juliette stands pat. On one occasion Hap finds her ashamed of him, and disappears. The undaunted lady takes a train explaining the next building on which Hap is riveting—scaring by hook and by crook to rivet his attention, and get that is the story! "The Hot Heiress" has the complete bag of tricks—thrills, laughs, snappy dialogue, romance and—to give full measure—several songs by those The Pub Alley hit-makers, Rodgers and Hart.

"The Hot Heiress is the sort of entertainment that puts odd man care on the run. It is the ancient story of love that laughs at lock-smiths, in a modern setting—with overtones of the life of the fascinating city, which O. Henry called "Bagdad on the Subway. Put on your list of pictures that deserve to see. "The Hot Heiress.

The addition of comedy and interest will make the programme delightfully balanced.

"CAUGHT FLAGRANT" OPENS AT ISIS FRIDAY

A title which doesn't tally but which it should is "Caught Flagrant" which opens with a midnight frolic on Friday at 11.15 pm. at the Capitol Theatre, Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey supported by the popular partner of all their triumphs, diminutive Dorothy Lee. Sounds like an innovation where the least expected, and that it most emphatically is.

Credit goes to Douglas MacLean who wrote the original story, conceived the action and supervised the production.

After MacLean's retirement from the screen several years ago, he was lost t ostew at a while until "Cracked Nuts" a Radio Pictures vehicle for Wheeler and Woolsey, blazoned its light across the firmament, with MacLean as co-author and supervisor.

The former comedian simply sat back and studied, soaked up production knowledge and dished out audience appeal," all with the idea of specializing in the writing and production of comedies that would supply the utmost screen entertainment.

Judging from the success of "Caught Flagrant, he has hit on the spot. It stamps him as a firm believer in the efficacy of pantomimic art and the deletion of unnecessary chatter.

If his formula is followed, future comedies will adhere more closely to dramatic plot, heart-interest and situation.

The dialogue in MacLean's production, written by Ralph Spence, is emphatically not of the pun variety. The laughs, therefore, come from the high humor of ludicrous thrilling or dramatic situations.

In other words, "Caught Flagrant is the product of study and labor, the careful analysis of a real story for comedy values.

Discount the incomparable comic artistry of Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, the whimsical humor of Wheeler, and the charm of Miss Lee, and one still has a production worthwhile in its sugary for better an ounce intelligent comedy.

"Caught Flagrant" will also be shown on Saturday and Monday, at usual times.

WARNER OLAND IN NEW "FU MANCHU" MYSTERY THRILLER

Anna May Wong and Hayakawa in Second Story

Detectives and mystery stories, accepted as one of the most popular and widest read of all fiction today are a product of the last generation.

This was brought out during research work by Paramount for the filming of "Daughter of the Dragon," Sax Rohmer story in which Anna May Wong, Warner Oland and Sessue Hayakawa are featured at the Belle Theatre, beginning tomorrow, matinee daily.

Edgar Allen forerunner of modern detective tales, the famous Dupin stories, were written by Edgar Allen Poe over two generations ago. They were the first publication of the mystery stories of the type generally accepted as such by the present mystery fiction readers.

The accepted type of present-day mystery story is credited with having been born as an American type of fiction, with the publishing of Anna Katherine Green's "The Leavenworth Case." In England, Arthur Conan Doyle was the father of originator with "Sherlock Holmes," which was the inauguration of French mystery yarns of the later type some with Gaboriau's police narratives.

Stories of the Dragon" finds Scotland Yard and at least two men of romantic inclination, baffled by the exploits of a beautiful girl, bound by dynastic vow to slay the man she loves. The scheme eventually is frustrated by a heroic admirer who places love above the urgings of his own heart.

MARIE DRESSLER AT BELLE

ON THANKSGIVING DAY

Vote-getting, and the machinations of political cliques, are used to obtain hilarious laughs in Marie Dressler's first picture as a full-fledged star of the screen. This is "Politics," which will open at the Belle Monday, (Thanksgiving Day) for two days, matinee daily.

In the new Metro-Goldwyn-production, Marie is cast as a feminine candidate for mayor in a small town, with the wily Polly Moran as her campaign manager. They run through a series of comical episodes, and, amid these, through some dramatic thrills and pretty love affairs, Miss Dressler to display some of the character and dramatic work that won her plaudits in "Anna Christie" and "Min and Bill" along with the straight comedy element.

RIVER TOWNS ARE PLEASED

Negotiations Over St. Lawrence Arouse Keen Interest

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 8 (C.P.) From towns along the St. Lawrence last night came messages of keen satisfaction on the announcement that negotiations would be initiated at once between Canada and the United States towards a treaty for the development of the deep waterways project.

Mayors and municipal officers of Cornwall, Morrisburg, Prescott and Cardinal were unanimous commend ing the steps being taken to bring about the fruitation of the proposal.

The amount of work to be provided especially and the future effect of the vast undertaking were stressed by the municipal representatives.

MEN AT WORK NEXT WEEK

Second Roads Program Will Open in a Few Days

Toronto, Oct. 8 (C.P.) Men will be at work on the second roads programme of the Provincial government in Northern Ontario early next week, it is hoped, by government authorities here. In the opinion of Hon. George S. Henry, premier, 5,000 or many men will be engaged for labor on new settlement roads and bridges, trunk roads will be at work on the Sudbury-Sault Ste. Marie project.

Hon. William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests and head of the department of northern development, conferred yesterday and today with engineers of the secondary road proposition and, announcement is expected shortly.

Relief programmes of fifty-three municipalities, involving an expenditure of $1,636,000, half of which will be paid by the municipalities, have been passed this week by the special unemployment relief committee of the government headed by Hon. Dr. J. D. Monteith, Minister of Public Works and Labor. Total cost of programs approved to date this fall is $11,200,000.

TOBACCO MEN ARE ALARMED

Buyers Alleged To Have Made Attempts to Cut Prices

Toronto, Oct. 8 (CP)—Western Ontario tobacco growers are alarmed over alleged attempts of buyers to cut prices to levels far below those of last year. The quality of the 1931 crop is considered the highest in the history of tobacco growing in this part of the province.

Top prices of thirty cents a pound are being quoted to Norfolk county growers, some sales of forty cents a pound last year. In Elgin county a pound last year. In Tillsonburg district the average price offered is about twenty cents. At the prices now offered, many growers will lose money, it is contended.

Motorman Urged To "Step On It"

Windsor, Oct. 8.—Speed mania on the part of some of the gas-car joyriding in the ill-fated street car that hurdled a creek at the opening of September 8, causing the death of Mrs. Beatrice Temple, aged 31, of Windsor, and injuries to eighty other persons, was disclosed by evidence at an inquest held here yesterday before Coroner C. V. Mills.

Testimony given at the inquiry which was later adjourned for a week, included that the motorman, William F. Craig, one of the injured, was urged to "step on it" by several passengers, anxious not to be late for the Windsor firemen's field day which was being held that night. Some of the witnesses estimated the car was making between forty and forty miles an hour before it ran into an open switch and was derailed.

Peer Takes Post Vacated By Byng

London, Oct. 8.—Lord Hugh Montague Trenchard, one of the most distinguished members of the British fighting services, and Marshal of the Royal Air Force, today succeeded Lord Byng of Vimy as Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police.

Lord Trenchard is the recipient of a score of war service medals.

Although at the top of Britain's aviation force, Lord Trenchard once declared that the evils of war were so great he would like to abolish all.

Entering the army thirty-eight years ago, when he was 20, he served in South Africa, where he won the Distinguished Service Order and was dangerously wounded. During the Great War he was mentioned in despatches eight times.

It was also during that the appointment of Lord Trenchard reflected the importance placed by the Metropolitan Police Commissioner of existing high standards of discipline. Sir William Horwood, Lord Byng resigned because of ill health.

Fatal Coincidences Revealed at Inquiry

Toronto, Oct. 8—At 1 o'clock yesterday, Coroner G. R. Philp's jury at the Morgue, investigating the death of Pung Kee and Pearl Wallik, at 341 Sherbourne Street on Sept. 18 last, was still deliberating ways and means which they hoped might put an end to the series of Ontario deaths from poisonous fumigating gas fumes.

One Waiting Verdict

Just two new features over and above those presented at the time of the unfortunate girl's death presented themselves at the inquest conducted by Coroner G. R. Philp at the morgue. One was that the red "warning" sign was taken down from the front door by Assistant Fumigator Fred Smith at the request of Fumigator Joseph Hills because it was unorganized and the inmates of the apartment did not desire it taken down, and the other point was that Hills in reality was operating illegally in fumigating the Sherbourne Street premises because he had not complied with Provincial regulations and obtained a license.

Claims Britain Should Be Represented

Paris, Oct. 8—The Paris edition of the London Daily Mail suggests this morning that it may not be too late for United States govt. to send an invitation to Britain to send a representative to Washington for a conference.

"It is wondered in certain quarters," the paper says, "whether it might not be possible at this late hour, because of the urge for concrete co-operation which has grown in importance since President Hoover first invited Premier Laval."

It adds that the French see in Lord Reading, British Foreign Minister, now on a visit here 'an admirable person' to represent Great Britain beside Laval.

PROPERTIES OFFERED FREE FOR BOULEVARD

Out-of-Town Owners Offering City Lands Along Moira River East Bank Point to Advantages of Esplanade

Engineering Survey of Site of Proposed Roadway

WHAT IS VISIONED

Letters Today Announce Gifts To City of Land For Street Purpose

The public-spirited action taken by a number of out-of-town property owners has brought the dream of a riverside boulevard on the east bank of the Moira measurably nearer to realization.

At an already well known, a civic committee has been steadily investigating the proposal for the past weeks past, and, without it from every angle with a view to testing out the possibilities, and arriving at a sane conclusion as to the practicability and desirability of the whole scheme.

The conditions making advisable the opening up of a new street along the river have been in themselves so obvious as scarcely to require mention or elaboration. There has been the intolerable congestion of motor traffic along Front street creating extreme hazards both for drivers and pedestrians and causing the utmost difficulty to merchants in the loading and unloading of goods. Appearances along the river bank in its unsightly succession of barns, shacks, board fences, weeds and rubbish heaps, have long offended the aesthetic sensibilities of all citizens and given an impression of slovenliness where there could and should be beauty, open spaces and impressive development. The back yards, as they have been, have added greatly to the fire risk and helped up many a fire that otherwise scarcely level and have as well left a convenient hiding-place for burglars.

Advantages

The advantages of such a development were also equally obvious. The opening up of a wide and attractive thoroughfare in the heart of the merchandising section would give an additional business street to Bellevilla where it is most needed. It would give to all the stores along the route convenient opportunity for the handling of merchandise from trucks and delivery wagons. An additional wharfage and hydrants at the rear of existing buildings would contribute fire risk and insurance rates throughout the business section. The new driveway would encourage the extension of stores to front on it and two streets of the establishment of new places of business along this broad and important approach would be certain to come about in the immediate future with a resulting immensely to the taxable property in our city. Property values all along the new route would be vastly enhanced by being transformed from wretched back yards to front ages on the most attractive street in the city. Facilities would be afforded for the parking of many cars that now have to be moved about greatly to the convenience of shopping and relieving the continuous jam of vehicles on Front street. The revetment wall would give insurance that the river bank would walk, boulevard and drive along the river, shaded by rows and clumps of trees, shrubbery, flowers and cluster lights could be developed into a feature of which every citizen would be proud. The advant ages and attraction of such a development could be enormously extended if the river bank could be fed upon with the eyes of visitor and the spirit of municipal enterprise.

Survey Made

The civic committee act about its investigations in a thoroughly business-like way. A survey of the properties abutting the river disclosed the fact that there were no buildings of excessive value, the back yards for the most part being free from structures of any kind.

It was decided that the layout for the proposed street should be of sufficient breadth to give shade and space for parking and a speedy driveway, having in view increase of population and of the resultant traffic. The committee has decided on a width of 80 feet as being the most practical and suggested further that there be a revetment or retaining wall along the river bank with a parapet 3 feet high above the sidewalk as a protection from icy jams and flood. A sidewalk immediately inside the revetment wall 5 feet wide, a boulevard 5 feet wide in which to plant trees and shrubbery, a driveway 30 feet wide and paving of macadam 8 inches in depth, double rows of poles at the centre of the driveway 75 feet apart with leaving 20 feet at each side for traffic, a 5-foot sidewalk

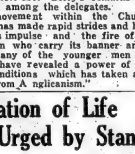
Anglo-Catholicism is Praised for Its Devotion



Manchester, Eng., Oct. 9. — (C.P.Cable), — A strong tribute to Anglo-Catholicism was made by Rev. Sydney M. Berry, General Secretary, at the Centenary Convention of the Congregational Union of England and Wales here today. Rev. Mr. Berry's remarks caused considerable surprise among the delegates.

"The Catholic movement within the Church of England," he said, "has made rapid strides and has behind it great religious impulse and the fire of living conviction. The men who carry its banner are men of high devotion. Many of these younger men among the Anglo-Catholics have revealed a power of adaptability to changed conditions which has taken a good deal of the stiffness from A nglicanism."

Reinterpretation of Life Values Urged by Stanley

New Dalhousie Principal Gives Advice To Students

TWO EXTREMES

MURDER WILL OUT

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 9 (C.P.) — Traditional and classical ideas of education must be given value today by Carleton W. Stanley as he took over the presidency of Dalhousie, in so facing his statement with a caution against too great conservatism — "it is possible to have one's hands full of weakened gods when it is time to be gathering fresh fruits" — the new college head and former assistant professor of history called for a "rebirth of humanism, a reinterpretation of the humane values of present human activities," and declared that "the chief function of a university is to gather together the more gifted minds of the community for an arduous though delightful study of ideas, and principles and fundamental things."

"The reformers must not be allowed to monopolize the function of recognition," he said, remarking that they do not always profit from the schools and academies in Europe. "The men who gave Europe its masterpieces and its science, even that of its medicine, lit more profound philosophy and law, who developed every form of literature which we possess and the loftiest example of art—these men believed that life had an art, which could be learned, and in which some men might become very proficient, to they were not pedants," he added.

President Stanley was installed at a gathering of university delegates and guests. Invocation was pronounced by Rev. Dr. A. H. Moore, president of the University of King's College.

He had been shot through the head by a companion who was found becoming out the bridge of his nose. The boy's appearance anxiety was that his parents be notified where he was. Particulars of the shoot ing could not be learned, as it was believed to have occurred accident ally as a number of boys were at handling a rifle.

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 9 C.P.) —Cyril Mansel of Ingramport, aged 15 years and 4 months, will face a charge of attempting to murder Owen Misener, his 12 year old chum, who is in Victoria, General Hospital with a bullet in his head. Nova Scotia police say Mansel shot Misener after an argument in the woods near their home. The bullet entered Misener's head near the temple and destroyed one eye. British Women To Play Big Part in Campaign

3 PEERESSES

Number of New Candidates of Fair Sex Offer To Run

London, Oct. 9 (GP)— Great Britain's women, as candidates, campaign workers and voters, will play a decisive role in the coming general election to determine the fate of the National government.

All the women members of the last parliament, including Lady Cynthia Mosley are seeking re-election. Besides the three peers, Viscountess Astor, the Duchess of Atholl and Countess Iveagh, all Conservatives, Lady Noel Buxton, returned in a byelection early this year, is also seeking re-election.

Among the new women candidates are Mrs. Ronald Cartland, who hopes to gain Lady Cynthia Mosley's old seat, Stoke, Stoke-on-Trent. Lady Cynthia was elected there as Labor Candidate in 1929, with a majority of 7,850 over a Liberal opponent. Mrs. Copeland is a supporter of the Labor government and has been prominently identified with Staffordshire's social and political life for a considerable time.

Mrs. Massiah Reported in Commons Sixty Years Ago

78-Year-Old Journalist Tells of Her Life In Journalism

Father Was Friend of

To be one of the only two living Journalists, who were members of the Press Gallery at Ottawa in 1880 and to be at seventy-eight years of age, keenly interested and widely versed in world affairs is the distinction of a keen-eyed alert little lady, Mrs. Kate Massiah, who is visiting in the city at the home of Mrs. Conway, 49 St. Charles Street.

"I've been keeping my name out of the papers for years," laughed Mrs. Massiah, when approached by a reporter, "but now that I am seventy-eight I suppose it will do no harm to indulge myself." It is almost impossible to believe that Mrs. Massiah, who hasn't a gray hair in her head, is a great-grandmother or that she is over sixty, but sixty years ago she was reporting in the Commons.

Then no woman was admitted to the Press Gallery and it was through the courtesy of the Speaker, Dr. Blanchet, that Mrs. Massiah was allowed to report, sitting in the Speaker's Gallery. In 1886 Mrs. Massiah was the first woman to receive admittance to the Press Gallery at the Canadian Parliament, this through the Quebec Press Association. At this time the National Policy was the political issue of the day. Mrs. Massiah has reported for the Montreal Herald, Star, Gazette, The Witness, as well as the American Press.

Weddings

LOUGH—WESTFIELD
A very pretty wedding was solemnized in Knox United Church, Peterborough, October 7, at 1 p.m., when Anna Beatrice, second daughter of Mrs. Whitfield and the late Mr. Walter Whitfield, was married to Stewart William Lough, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lough of Marmora.
The bride entered the church on the arm of her uncle, Arthur Whitfield to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Mr. William Potter, organist of the church. She was dressed in a floor length silk crepe beau monde with fox trimming, wearing a corsage of orchids and lily of the valley.
Miss Evelyn Scott, her bridesmaid, was dressed in a navy silk, with corsage of Talisman roses. The groom was supported by the bride's cousin, Donald Devell of Peterborough. Mr. Frank Whitfield of Peterborough and Mr. E. B. Lough of Brantford, brothers of the bride and groom, acted in the capacity of ushers.
Rev. William McDonald, minister of the church, officiated, assisted by Rev. H. G. Whitfield of Northville, Mich., brother of the bride.
During the signing of the register Mrs. Rose Williamson sang sweetly "All Joy Be Thine."
The happy young people received the felicitations of a great number of relatives and friends who witnessed the impressive ceremony and left by motor amidst good wishes for Cobalt, Ont., where the groom will return they will reside at Marmora, Ontario.

when at fifteen she brought to the attention of an editor a mistake in a report or a picture given by Charles Dickens.
"Charles Dickens was a great friend of my father," explained Mrs. Massiah. "Father was publisher of a newspaper in Uttoxeter, England, our home, and he hung my brother and myself to report and observe accurately. We were in Manchester and had heard Dickens speak in the afternoon and at the breakfast table we read the report in the Manchester paper and we printed 'that wasn't what he said.' Father insisted that I tell him where the error was and you can imagine my feelings, when I made my first visit to a newspaper office in connecting an editor. The next day a correct report of Mr. Dickens' was published and Charles Dickens spoke to my father about the matter and thought it very unusual in a boy of sixteen and a girl fifteen to be able to note the inaccuracy of the reported address.
"Dickens not only reported for a newspaper. She and her brother, C. B. Norris, published one. This was in Toronto, where her brother had come to live on the death of her father.
"The paper was called the 'Lakeside Intelligencer' and it was independent to live." Mrs. Massiah related, with a twinkle in her eye never to be subject to the whims of journalists. This was from 1853 to 1862. It was devoted largely to politics and the election campaigns of those years in Canada.
At one exciting point in the life of the Independent, there was dark talk of burning the premises by politicians. Her brother was ill, the only available man in the house was generously treated to liquor and the opposition gloated because there would be no Independent this week. There was an Independent that week, in spite of everything.
That she wrote the news and the editorials, hand-set the type and she made up the forms.
"Oh, those forms!" she said. "I never thought I would ever get them so that they wouldn't jiggle. I managed to take them from the stones to the Washington handpress and I did them well. They were being run off."
When the papers were addressed and in the mails on time and it was all good fun for Mrs. Massiah. Indeed the Lakeside life is one that makes everything good fun for the adventurous little woman. She doesn't let things make her angry but she knows how to deal with people of things, that is gave to show itself sooner or later.

Brief Brief
Even in public speaking, when she has had taunted, she does not let herself be worried. In 1914 she delivered a case for Lachine against the C.P.R. before the Railway Commission. To the amazement and consternation of officials, she showed that the brief submitted to them had been prepared by a lawyer of long experience.
Mrs. Massiah keeps in touch with Parliamentary affairs by attending every session of Parliament. Recently she was interested in the situation Mrs. Massiah thinks this is the time for girls to be trained and prepared for the future. If the present system of "cram" is to come to some centre for a course of instruction in domestic science or other subjects which would be better fitted for taking their place in the home of the future.

Money For Work
"I don't believe in giving money without asking work of the recipient. When you give a meal or money you should ask for a little work in return for the good of the meal. The money is for the work you are helping. This will weed out the shiftless and help those who deserve it."
Mrs. Massiah has a heart as big as herself. During the war she spent her time making magazine booklets, fifty thousand of them for the soldiers. She sent them fifty thousand post cards and wrote hundreds. For this work she received the warmest personal acknowledgement of Sir Douglas Haig and a letter of appreciation he sent her.
Mrs. Massiah, who has travelled and lectured extensively in England, Scotland and Canada, by career has been filled with activity and excitement and she is always ready for new adventures.

If the proper energy of a pound of coal could be released, it would be sufficient to drive a liner across the Atlantic.

Crash at Intersection

About 4.30 o'clock this afternoon on Friday a collision occurred at the intersection of Bridge and Bridge Streets between a car driven by Mr. Freeman Waugh, 106 Wellington Street, and a delivery truck owned by Boyle's Grocery in which was driven by Mr. Maskell Green, 28 Sidney Street, Belleville. The truck was standing on the north on George Street and was about to turn west into Bridge Street and the driver was about to proceed west on Bridge Street. The cars came together with considerable force, the truck being forced from the road and striking a telephone pole. The damages to the Waugh car were to the front bumper, right front fender, headlights and right rear window. The left front fender and front wheel and side of the Boyle truck were badly damaged. Both cars were driven away under their own power.
Mr. Waugh who was accompanied by his wife hopes to be able to continue on their journey early this afternoon. Mr. Green complained this afternoon that his shoulder felt rather sore and went at once to consult a physician. Mr. and Mrs. Waugh appear to have not suffered any ill effects from the accident.

OUT OF TOWN

next to the properties, making a layout 80 feet broad.
The committee then had the route of the proposed driveway staked out by the city engineer and two of Belleville's leading real estate men offered to donate their services in securing options on the property through. Their recognition has been, in the main, most gratifying. There are 32 all twenty property owners. These options with the suggested right-of-way. Five of these are non-residents of Belleville but these outsiders have entered up-on the scheme with such enthusiasm that is most commendable.
C. D. A. Property Needed
Two of the most valuable properties along the river are held by the Canadian Explosives Stores Ltd. and by the S. S. Kresge Co., Detroit. Letters were received from both these organizations this morning that they would donate the required property without any cost whatever to the city. This particularly generous action has been greatly enhanced in the case of the Canadian Department Stores by the fact that the property they are offering to transfer to the city has upon it a most substantial two storey stone building. The Kresge Nation System of Eating has taken similar action and has also made the liberal announcement that its holdings will be placed at the disposal of the city free of charge. The two other property owners have not yet been heard from but it is practically certain that they will generously donate sufficient property for the requirements of the roadway.
Mr. R. J. Wray, president of Wray's Home Furnishers, not to be outdone in public spirit by those living outside the city, has come to the assistance of the board. He donate the required width at the rear of his property. Other holders of real estate have indicated their intention to take similar action.
The outlook for the acquirement of the right-of-way, at surprisingly low cost is becoming exceedingly favorable.
Careful estimates are being prepared as to the cost of revetment wall, filling, sewer and water services, walks, macadam surfacing and other particulars. Not all of these features of construction would need to be carried out the coming year but should be done in future acquirement through several years.
The committee, which has been acting under the capable chairmanship of Mr. W. B. Deacon, has been encouraged by the interest by its work by certain wild and foolish statements that have been freely circulated in the city that they were exaggerating the prospective cost of proposed park improvement. Some of these amateur estimates or guesses ranged by several hundred per cent. any possible figures that will be recommended or required. The probable is earnest requested in await the report of the committee and the presentation of facts before forming opinions and arriving at decisions as to the advisability or inadvisability of the proposition.
Mr. Deacon in discussing problem before the city is the relief of unemployment. Here there is seen immediately rather than deferring. The explanade proposal offers attractive possibilities in regard to the employment of labor. Until there would be the demolition of buildings and clearing the right-of-way. Then would come the section of the retaining wall, the digging of trenches for water main and sewer, filling and levelling the roadway and the getting out of the crushed rock for surfacing. The cement used in the wall would also help out the situation at Point Anne and thereby provide further local employment. No alternative scheme so far proposed has anything like the capacity to absorb unskilled labor of the prospective riverside drive.
The offer of the Ontario government to contribute $50,000, if necessary, towards unemployment relief at Belleville makes available a fund with which a portion may be devoted to covering fifty per cent of the cost of labor and materials for this new national civic enterprise.

DUMPAGE DUTY SAVES WORKER

Canan Says British Goods Are Given Preference

OTTAWA, Oct. 9—Thousands of Canadian workmen and work women in Dundurn would have been thrown out of work before the end of October if no remedial action had been taken. This is one of the declarations made by Hon. C. H. Cahan, Acting Minister of National Revenue in a statement issued Thursday night respecting the anti dumping provisions imposed by order-in-council against imports from Great Britain under prevailing exchange rates. The British products affected are only those of a class or kind made or produced in Canada.

If dire provision had not been made by the Dominion Government customs revenues would have been affected and the country compelled to borrow money to provide for increasing deficiencies in its customs revenues. Mr. Cahan further states.

"Canadian importers and consumers are the Acting-Minister of National Revenue proceeds, entirely to pay the same price for their imported British goods as they paid in Canadian currency prior to the recent depreciation in the pound sterling and before the recent ruling took effect. The British preference, Mr. Cahan states, continues to be maintained British goods as it did before the collapse of the pound sterling.

"The premium now paid in Canadian currency for New York funds and the Agreement to which effect has been taken in respect thereto," the acting Minister of National Revenue further declares, "gives British products in the Canadian market a preference over United States products which the British manufacturer pays the tariffs enjoyed in this country."

BROTHERS ATE TOADSTOOLS

Picked From Land in Belief They Were Mushrooms

TORONTO, Oct. 9—Taken violently ill after eating what they believed to be mushrooms picked from the lawn in front of their home, Harry and Frank Walsh, aged 23 and 25 respectively, at 1 Bellevue Square Avenue, were taken to St. Michael's Hospital in a police ambulance last night. Emergency treatment was sufficient to allow them to return home after several hours, but his brother was kept in hospital as his condition was considered serious.

Suspicion that the toadstools, as they are now believed to be, were not found to a mushroom-like form on

SOME TURKEY!

Proud, stately and arrogant in their carriage, large flocks of turkeys are jealously guarding through the orchards and over the fields of many farms in Hastings and Prince Edward counties growing plump and fat for what purpose they know not—but purpose there is and Thanksgiving time somehow brings that purpose to the minds of those, who hate no preference, except A LEG, A WING and A BIT OF THE BREAST—when they gather around the Festive Board upon which is placed one of these proud fowl, nicely browned and done "to a turn".

The Canadian Thanksgiving comes a little too early in the season for the marketing of turkeys in any large number and consequently they are not so prominently associated with our Thanksgiving as they are with Thanksgiving in the United States, which is celebrated late in November. No doubt, the fact that this fowl occupies the prominent place, which it does, in the United States' Thanksgiving, is the reason why the Canadian Thanksgiving ones Canadians also think of turkey, although it does not fill so popular a place generally in our Thanksgiving menu. Christmas time is when the height of the Turkey's popularity is reached in Canada and being inquisitive as to the outlook for a goodly supply of this fowl for this Christmas and New Year's feast, inquiries were made, and the information obtained that here—there—this way—that—across the fields and through the orchards hundreds of proud turkeys are strutting and gobbling—so we may rest easy in knowing that we shall at least be served with a neck—if we have the price to buy T-U-R-K-E-Y at Christmastide.

MEN WHO COUNT

Sam Rollins, treasurer of the Madoc Agricultural Society, and an indefatigable worker on behalf of agricultural interests, receives credit in Centre and North Hastings for being one of the really active men who by their efforts are benefitting the causes they have so dear at heart.

Mr. Rollins' benefactions to the cause of the fair society are well known. He gave not only energy to the officers and directors, but he donated an entire building to the society.

His influence is felt in every department of the fair. Directors and exhibitors and patrons all know what Madoc fair owes to Mr. Rollins.

In offering a word of praise it must not be forgotten that Madoc possesses in Mr. William J. Hill, brother of Alderman Harry Hill of town, one of the most highly esteemed and most efficient officials in Ontario, and it is a second nature to him and with all his knowledge and experience he knows how to bear his honors lightly and use his gifts to please every one. No one goes to Madoc fair without feeling that Mr. Hill is personally interested in the pleasure and happiness which the fair creates.

These two men with the officers and the directors make an invincible organization. That is what Madoc possesses.

BANKS STABLE

Canadian banks are sound and stable and those who had fears of the collapse of industry through depression were told this—that the banks of Canada in a condition expected as the end of a period of deflation. The Toronto Mail and Empire, discussing the banks, says:

"The Canadian should read with thoughtful carp the address made by Mr. Beaudry Leman, president of the Canadian Bankers Association, at Montreal on Monday. It was a convincing, reassuring statement. It was a message of confidence and even of cheer. It took the line that financial danger existed in this country in 1929 when the prices of everything were too high. Now that the prices are too low the inflation is a thing of the past, and we are down to bed-rock safety. Mr. Leman suggested that people might be interested in reading the annual statements of all the banks of Canada, in 1929 and 1930, covering the years 1928 and 1929.

"If you will read these statements you will find that every single bank in this country advised people to be careful, that excessive credit inevitably bring their reaction, that dangers were ahead.

"Do you imagine that the banks that were giving out to others these warnings did not themselves own sails, seeing that there was a storm ahead? I leave the answer to your own good judgment.

"The bank situation in Canada is sound. We have every reason to be proud of the system established in this country and which has in the past weathered many storms.

"Mr. Leman referred to the crisis of 1895, 1907, 1914, and 1921. These also had brought problems which had to be faced. We have lived through these crisis; they came, they passed, and we are still alive! We recommend this statement to the careful consideration of all Mail and Empire readers, and hope that they will pass it on to fellow-citizens in every part of the country."

LIFE'S DELIGHT

By Alice Michaella

Sometimes love is a rose aglow
In a garden gay with sun,
Where the winds all sweet with perfume go
And song is never done.

As day by day the roses nod
And brighten the garden-place,
So love in a life is the smile of God
And life grows fair by love's grace.

Sometimes love is a lily-bud
As lovely as the moon,
A lily-bud in the star-light's flood
On the still and black lagoon.

As lilies may lift their petals pale
Out of the mud and slime,
So love in a life can never fail
To make that life sublime.

Love may be rose or lily white,
A thing of sun or shade;
But always love has been life's delight,
Since ever the world was made.

PROFESSOR SHAW, who likened whistlers to morons has been bombarded by indignant protests of whistlers who refuse to be classed with morons, it being understood that a moron is a very unpleasant and undesirable person, bats in the belfry, or something like that. However, the professor has created a whole lot of publicity and thousands of people who never heard his name before know now that there is a Professor Shaw, no relation to George Bernard Shaw, inasmuch as Professor Shaw is about to give birth to a book there may have been method in his madness in classing whistlers with morons. Like the immortal Phineas Taylor Barnum, first apostle of the gospel of spectacular advertising, he could say, "I care not what they say about me as long as they say something!"

FAITH IN THE EFFICIENCY OF ADVERTISING, and an intelligent use of the various forms of publicity took the Belleville Rifle Band around the world, under the leadership of the late Tom Power, one of those level-headed citizens who never hesitated to cast his bread upon the advertising waters knowing that it would come back strawberry shortcake, or better. Maybe you think taking a big band around the world is an easy financial problem, like the rule of three? It wasn't, and it isn't. There were many anxious moments on that famous trip. In Australia it looked at one time as if the troupe was stranded, the treasury was empty, and there did not seem any immediate prospect of amassing the large sum needed to take the band to Ceylon. Quite a nut to crack, but Tom cracked it and the troupe, left Australia with flying colors.

WILL POWERS also knew the value of publicity and how to sow silven dollars in advertising fields and reap golden harvests. With a herd of elephants on his hands, all that was left of a circus which folded up owing him money. He took the elephants for his debt and proceeded to make them earn their daily dining expenses, a ton of hay, more or less, besides grain, carrot and tit-bits. Will Powers was a prince of publicity and old P. T. Barnum had a brilliant disciple in him. The Power elephants became so famous that they headed the New York—Hippodrome bill for eighteen seasons—and after that they tramped around the world as the biggest drawing wild animals attraction ever staged, and still going strong, somewhere in Europe, with Mrs. Power directing. Will having returned to the fields hunting grounds long since. How many remember when Will Power brought his elephants to his old home town of Belleville, how they were quartered in the Queen's Hotel yard for several days, and what a bar business the animals did while the pachyderms were there, and the sale of peanuts, oh, boy! Of the show in the old Opera House where they had to strengthen the stage by big timbers before the wise elephants would trust their weight upon it? Member? Tom and Will Power, both Master Showmen of the best type, men who knew the value of advertising and were big a-1 broad enough and progressive enough to use lots of it, not waste their substance in picayune pickings which just make a ripple when a riot is needed.

FINANCIERS MUST LEARN

After all, the business of the world isn't run on gold, is it run on credit. The basis of credit is, of course, confidence. Consequently a return of confidence means the renewal of credit and business as usual.

Unfortunately the bestowal of credit has at the present time passed into the hands of New York, not London, is the issuer of credit, and never having learned the game got things a bit balled up.

But Now it is learning that a dirtpike of gold is a handicap instead of a help unless it is kept working. And it can only be put to work by giving credits.

When New York has fully mastered its lesson gold will flow to various parts of the world and the New York money kings will be transformed from high financiers into international financiers.

It will take a little time but it will come eventually, and the sooner time it takes the worse for the United States.

BATTLE BRAVELY—AND WHISTLE

Whatever may be the merits or demerits of the whistling habit as has been stirred by a publicity-hungry professor's contention that whistlers are men possessed of an inferiority complex, the heavyweight dispute that one cannot whistle and grumble. And as there is a little of the music, however, "Hills and Dales" Thornton pertinently termed it at Vancouver on Tuesday, the whistlers, wherever they are and whoever they are, ought to be applauded and encouraged—not frowned upon. Whistling is the best medicine that could be prescribed for those, who, stampeded with apprehension, are inclined to despondency, and for them, too, who find certain enjoyments in combat that they point to as the country's woes, and seriously overlook the country's blessings.—Montreal Gazette.

THE AUTOGIRO

St. Catharines people were of the performances of the autogiro here on Saturday, were struck with the possibilities of the machine for safe flying. The Woodstock Sentinel-Review reports that the Woodstock man last week made the outlay of $3.50 for gasoline to run with this machine. That is cheap and fast transportation, and the autogiro looks to be a safety first affair. Descending as a helicopter vertically and rising the same way.

The autogiro is no doubt capable of development and improvement. When it alighted on the golf course here Saturday it then went up again, it looked to have solved one of the big problems for the pilot, the limiting of the space necessary for alighting and starting. All for the other type of airplane. It has a good deal in the contention that the autogiro is the type which will fly as they have for a million years. That is the difficulty in many there are no storms and no fog.—St. Catharines Standard.

EXTENDED SCHOOL HOURS

A member of the London Board of Education suggests that the overcrowded school problem might be dealt with by opening the schools at 8 a.m. and continuing the classes to 5 p.m. It is suggested that fifty per cent. increase in enrolment could be cared for in that way without building more schools. The extra time in the morning and a similar period in the afternoon would permit of many more classes being instructed, the only hesitation in outlay being the salaries of extra teachers.

There is an economic problem associated with the non-occupation of schools. Expensive buildings are standing idle for many hours in the twenty-four and projects calculated to find use for the buildings during these non-occupied hours are the subject of discussion, but no thoroughly practical plan has been perfected. The idea of opening the schools at eight in the morning and extending the closing time one hour is no doubt feasible, though it may be found to conflict transportation and household schedules, particularly in the case of the pupils designated to report at eight in the morning. The handicap would be mostly monetary, however, as whose communicates thru the clock forward an hour during the summer months and think nothing of it. The saving of capital outlay is the main consideration in a move of this kind.—Sarnia Canadian Observer.

TITLED VISITOR IS WELL PLEASED WITH PROGRESS

Sir James Woods Visits Belleville and Notes Progressive Spirit

An interesting visitor to Belleville recently was Sir James Woods, president of Gordon Mackay Company, Limited, Toronto. Sir James has a number of friends in Belleville and has been a frequent visitor here, watching it has been interest the progressive advancement of the city during the past years. His visited the Walker Store where he called upon the manager, Mr. Harold Newby, and met Alderman J. D. Macmillan, an old friend, and discussed with the alderman the many visible evidences of a progressive spirit in Belleville which especially interested in the explanation of the project with which his company is concerned being a property building on the river front.

Sir James in his conversation with the writer mentioned that he mentioned a new industry just started in Canada in which he was personally interested, the making of gentleman's fine neckwear. The Thornton establishment opened in Vancouver on Tuesday, the whistlers, wherever they are and whoever they are, ought to be applauded and encouraged—not frowned upon. Whistling is the best medicine that could be prescribed for those, who, stampeded with apprehension, are inclined to despondency, and for them, too, who find certain enjoyments in combat that they point to as the country's woes, and seriously overlook the country's blessings.—Montreal Gazette.

FEW TURKEYS TO BE EATEN

Early Thanksgiving is "Easier" Upon Fowls

A few Bellevillians will probably have an opportunity to taste turkey on Monday, Thanksgiving Day, but most will probably not care for this fine fowl until later in the season, especially at Christmas time.

Thanksgiving round this year almost a month ahead of the accustomed time in the past, and there is no suspension of business from Remembrance or Armistice Day. Consequently the turkey flocks will not suffer to the same extent from the appetites of hungry Bellevillians.

There are the usual turkey flocks in the district, but the season has not been staled today. "But we see it-tle of them this early," Some of the buyers do not even quote the price.

The place to find what turkeys are available will be on the tables of the Belleville market and it is boundless.

People making an early start to business breathed deeply of the clear, invigorating air and those who still walk—stepped out briskly on their way. Conservative Leader Calls For Ottawa Imperial Parley

TARIFF AND TRADE

Samuel Outlines Position of Liberals Supporting MacDonald

London, Oct. 8—The problem of the empire is to secure the economic unity for which we have so long striven. I hope the reasons which led to the suspension of the Ottawa Conference have been overcome and that it will be possible for the Canadian Government to renew its invitation. We shall then have a unique opportunity before us in the fact that it will fail to a National Government to accept this invitation," so declared Rtn. Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader, and Lord President of the Council, in outlining the aims of his party in a general election manifesto Thursday.

"The ideal of Imperial economic unity is widespread today and I am confident the foundation of such unity will be well and truly laid with such a general assent of our people as would have seemed impossible but a few short years ago," the manifesto said.

"A tariff is the quickest and most effective weapon not only to reduce excessive imports, but to enable us to induce other countries to lower their tariff walls."

"I recognize that the situation is altered by the devaluation of the pound, but in my view the effect of that devaluation can be no valid substitute for a tariff carefully designed and adjusted to meet the present situation. I shall therefore continue to press upon the electors that in my view a tariff is the quickest and most effective weapon."

"The National Government," he said, "has, without help, accomplished the first part of its work. We have passed through a severe and difficult times. Our task will be impossible without the support of the nation. For that support I appeal with confidence, and in the winning of that support, I believe the first part will be played by those whom I am proud to lead."

Liberal Wing

London, Oct. 8—Sir Herbert Samuel, leader of the Liberal Free Trade wing, opened his general election campaign last night when he addressed a crowded meeting of Liberals from the west riding at Bradford.

"We are told the Prime Minister is working for a doctor's mandate to give the nation that whatever treatment his condition requires," he declared. "It is proverbial that doctors differ. Our task is to try to arrive at a correct diagnosis and prescribe an agreed cure, or we don't, our only agreement may be as a post-mortem after our only common opinion might be such as to cause death."

Referring to the causes which led to the present crisis, His Herbert said: "Before the balance of trade has been lending more and more to be unfavorable and if the competitory, like the individual, buys more than it sells, sooner or later trouble must ensue.

"I for one, and I think the Liberal party as a whole, wishes the government to go on with its work. That is what the nation desires and expected when the National Government was formed. Where was before it months of activity. Therefore I think there ought to be a new election until we had advanced far with our task. This solution has been shown, however, and it is of little service to go back on the task.

Protection an Issue

"I hold that the fact a general election was decided on was not in itself sufficient reason why I—and my colleagues feel this should be separate from the National Government," he said.

Sir Herbert continued: "Meantime, an issue has been raised apart from, but in some respects connected, with a great financial emergency. A powerful political party which provided by far the greatest volume of support in parliament for the present government had laboured long and no doubt successfully, to establish in the country a system of protection which it was convinced would be to the advantage of the nation. It believes that in normal circumstances those efforts were due to be crowned with success. It is not unnaturally, it was unwilling to see the opportunity slip."

Sir Herbert said a new aspect had become apparent in the tariff controversy due to the serious fall in export trade in recent years. "There is strong expert opinion, that during this year we had to provide exchange to the amount of about $10,000,000 each week in order to overcome the unfavorable balance of trade."

GANDHI FEARS U.S. CURIOSITY

Would Visit States if He Would Not Be Misunderstood

London, Oct. 8—(AP)—Mahatma Gandhi is willing to go to the United States at the conclusion of the Round Table Conference if his friends can convince John Haynes Holmes, New York pastor, that the Mahatma would not be made a laughing-stock.

Pressed to make the trip by a number of visitors, Gandhi said today, "Holmes, in private opinion I place the greatest reliance, tells me my visit would be misunderstood, that I would be exploited, ridiculed and misinterpreted. On the other hand I've had pressing invitations signed by leading Americans.

"If those latter can convince Holmes I ought to go to America I shall be glad to reconsider my decision. I have a great affection for the American people and feel keen that I have a great many friends across the Atlantic and I don't want to sacrifice that friendship.

"Einstein, after visiting America, said it was the greatest mistake of his life, because most Americans regarded him only as a spectacle. I'm not as sensitive as Einstein but I ought not to go to America unless the American people are willing to listen to my message rather than regard me as a curiosity."

John St. W. M. S.

The October meeting of the W.M.S. of John Street United church was held in the church hall on Wednesday afternoon and was in charge of Mrs. Archibald and her group, the opening hymn was "O for a Thousand Tongues to Sing." Mrs. Archibald then gave a beautiful prayer for the missionary theme "Meekness or Humility," emphasizing that Christ's example to the world was service, closing with prayer. Mrs. Moore then sang a lovely hymn "O for a Heart to Praise My God." Mrs. Crook, secretary of Temperance education, gave a short and earnest talk on the terrible narcotic menace. Reports were then received from the secretary and treasurer and in report of the executive meeting and of the various other departments. The hymn "O for a Faith that will Not Shrink" was then sung and the subject for the afternoon taken up, "Educational and Industrial Missions" on which a very interesting paper was given by Miss Connor. Mrs. Kinnear followed with a splendid paper on the "Work of Missionaries in India," after which Mrs. Donaldson read a short paper on the "Needs of the Field" calling on the group to respond to the meeting closed with the hymn "Jesus Saves" and "Bless Be the Tie that Binds" and the repeating of the Lord's Prayer in unison.

COBEQUID BAY HOLDS BODIES

No Trace of Lost German Fliers and Their Plane

Parrsboro, N.S., Oct. 8 (C.P.) Mysterious Cobequid Bay, with her sweeping tides and narrow channels still is guarding jealously the bodies of two German fliers and their ill-fated plane which crashed on the bay early Tuesday in the course of an attempt to rush trans-Atlantic mail from the liner Bremen in mid-ocean to New York.

Lieut. Louis Leigh, of the Maritime and Newfoundland Airways, who flighted the wrecked "New York" yesterday, and could not sight because of the high floats we "damaged," was detained this morning by bad weather, but he expected to return to the scene of the tragedy as soon as the skies cleared. The steam tug Almaco, which returned to port last night with a broken pontoon of the German plane, bits of a smashed wing, a container marked and two sodden passenger lists, sailed again this morning to continue the search.

FISH SWIM ON STREETS

Follow Heavy Rainstorm In Western City

Kitchener, Ont., Oct. 8 — Fish swam on the streets of Kitchener yesterday. Two of them were discovered in puddles on the sidewalk following a heavy rainstorm. Both were about two and a half inches long.

Where they came from and how they got so far away from their natural environment remains an unsolved mystery. Some residents believe they may have been sucked out of nearby creeks by a high wind and dropped from the clouds.

There were no overflowing manholes in the district where they were seen.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY OF CANADA

THE GAY BANDIT OF THE BORDER

by TOM GILL

Again Mendoza sank into a deep sitting silence. These lords of the land were so difficult, one was one must somehow please them. Meanwhile the low, incisive voice went on:

"I am interested in a woman here in Largo. They call her Lola Montez."

"Ah, si. The American. Her real name—"

"Why should we seek real names? The name I speak serves. I want to talk to this woman—now."

"I shall tell her you are here, señor. Yet it is very late. Perhaps early, she may not be up, for kings until early dawn. If you will wait but a momentito, señor."

And scarcely more than a momentito later Mendoza returned. "The señorita will receive you within ten minutes. Meanwhile accept a glass of wine as un favor," he hiccupped old Spanish courtesy. "Entonces Morales sipped his wine and downed the fiery liquid halfway to a closed door. There, with a nod the Spaniard disclaimed guide. He knocked softly and the door opened. A woman in a red kimona stood before him.

It may have been the velvet darkness of her hair, or the marble whiteness of her neck, or again it may have been the two great black eyes that looked incuriously into Morales. Whatever the cause, the tall bandit with his own eyes brightened with pleasure for a brief second, then very coldly he waited.

"I am Paco Morales."

"Come in, senor."

He noticed with an artist's satisfaction how low and full the voice was. He watched her walk to the shaded lounge and curl up comfortably, and noticed with a little smile the jade slippers and the bare, slender ankles. At last he seated himself near the window.

"Perhaps," Morales suggested, "you have heard of me?"

She smiled. "Who has not? She looked him for a moment with those calm eyes that to him seemed veiled mirrors in sadness or weariness. "They even tell me men fear you, Senor Morales."

"Men, yes—and some women."

"I wonder why?" Again their eyes met.

"It may be they have sufficient reason. But never a beautiful woman—as you are," he added, "May I smoke?"

She held the match for him then asked, "I am wondering if you came here as bandit or as friend, that?"

"By no means. It has been long since I first sent you word asking if I might come, and it has been some weeks since you wrote me that I might. Many things have prevented. But chiefly I wished to learn about you before I trusted you too far. Today I came certain that I may find you alone and my reason for coming at all is to ask you certain questions. I expect to pay for these answers, always pay. Both loyalty and disloyalty. I pay, but in different coin. Senorita, you are intelligent, so we can put aside formalities. I am a very powerful, a very rich man. You are a singer at Mendoza's. You do not always sing there. You have a strong afaill and a cactus. It may be you dream already of Paris, New York, or Vienna—but to sing there does not come true without money and money, no?" He paused, and his cold eyes passed over her. "I could perhaps help you both."

"The senor is a lover of art?" Her words had just the faintest suggestion of mockery.

"You mean that in jest, senorita, and yet, in a way of speaking, I am. But it is not art, or if you will permit, it is not only art. It is admiration for you that prompts this offer. Yourself, I can pay practical like you Americans."

Again the girl smiled. "Neither my voice nor my body. What else have I to offer?"

Information and aid."

"What do you want to know?" She reached for a cigarette.

"Who is El Coyote?"

Her heart jumped, but the hand that held the cigarette never wavered. In contemplation she carefully blew over the match and laid it down. She nodded. "Yes, you would be willing to pay for that knowledge, wouldn't you?"

"Negotiable," he said rather carelessly. "Is it true, then, as I have heard that El Coyote has lost even destroy this power and wealth of years?"

"It is conceivable: Why should I deny it? Meanwhile you are here, me. He annoys me. He has killed some of my people."

"And you think I know who he is?"

"I know nothing. I merely ask. At best I trust you may find out. You see, senorita, even those men who know many things. And these things may tell about wine-runs through their blood, and a pretty woman smiles in a certain manner and at a certain time. We know that members of the allied band come here. Perhaps he is one of them. Buenos. You are quite beautiful, you know the game of life, and if you will, who have lived many years, am not insensible to your charms, ought it be difficult to get these facts to talk—if you choose?"

She seemed to consider. At last. "It might be done. Meanwhile, tell me what you know and what you suspect. Tell me everything that may help me. First, is he a Mexican, this Coyote?"

"I doubt it. I have fair reason to doubt it."

"Do you suspect who he is?"

"If I do, senorita, those suspicions could not help you greatly."

"Where is he most likely to be found?"

The Spaniard shrugged. "He may live out in the foothills and perhaps come into Verdi. He may live in Verdi itself. He may—and here a shadowy smile crept over the man's face—"he may, let us say, be a rancher living somewhere near Verdi."

It was as if a cold hand clutched her heart. "And if he is an American, what will you do?"

"I shall have him shot. His nationality—what difference? Certainly if I shall never trust him to your slow, unreliable Yankee justice, where anything might happen." Paco Morales rose and sailed the length of the room. "There is one thing more," he added, "and in this too, I shall have need of you, with your beauty it should be an easy thing.

"There is a man staying with the rancher they call Don Rob. Hardly more than a boy he is, but very strong and very big, and, I regret to say, very sincere in his prejudiced discriminating sex. His name is Senor Redcliffe. Mr. Miles, who knows little of men is I think, about to love this American. Only the good God knows the way of women. As for me, I should rather see her dead."

"Why?"

"Why? Because he is not of my world. He is not my choice. I could not die in peace knowing that all my talents have built up should fall to his grimy hands."

His hands twitched as he lighted a cigarette. It was a time the girl's eyes seemed to ponder what he had said. She frowned. "When one is so powerful as Paco Morales, what need is there to ask a woman to rid him of a less man?"

Morales nodded. "Si. I, too, had thought of that. At any time within a day I could say the word that would cause Senor Redcliffe to disappear. But that would not fill my niece's love, and it is her love of him I hate—not the miserable boy. I want that she will turn again to the old Spanish ways and to me. I would have her hate him."

"And you want him entangled—with me."Her low voice had grown languid.

"Senorita, you are direct and, as I say, intelligent. I leave you to set the stage. When you are ready I might even let my niece see with her own eyes what kind of man she cares for. It is not a new trap—but effective, no? And so much more subtle than killing." Again he smiled. "Have I not said I, too, am an artist?"

"In the meantime"—he reached for his wallet and drew out five one-hundred-dollar bills—"this may make fast our alliance. And remember, this is nothing afraid and a cactus. It may be you dream already of Paris, New York, or Vienna—but to sing there does not come true without money and money, no?" He paused, and his cold eyes passed over her. "I could perhaps help you both."

"The senor is a lover of art?" Her words had just the faintest suggestion of mockery.

FRENCH VIEWS ON SITUATION

Lord Reading Makes Statement at Close of Conversation

Paris, Oct. 8 (AP)—Lord Reading, British Foreign Secretary, concluded his discussions of world financial problems with Premier Laval and other French statesmen today, after which he said no understanding had been reached since "we do not know what will happen in the future."

"I have explained to Premier Laval," Baron Reading, Leader and Minister of Finance Plandin the situation in which Britain finds the direction in which we hope things will develop and how touched the British public is over the material aid the French have given us," Lord Reading said.

"The French gave me an equally frank and full exposition of their views of the situation."

The British government, he said, is exceedingly happy at the impending visit to Great Britain of Premier Herriot to Washington. The part United States can play in world reconstruction is enormous, he added, and he wished the French Premier Laval well.

Lord Reading said he was unaware of any plan for Great Britain to be represented at the conversations between Premier Laval and President Hoover, and that in his opinion the United States should arrange for an English representative to be present.

Whole Wheat MUFFETS

give sun vitamin D...

Nourishing biscuits of whole wheat, with all its bran, plus the Sunshine Vitamin D—that's a Muffet.

All the sunnul flavour . . . all the goodness. For Muffets are just plump whole wheat in delicious form. The cooked grains are rolled into a ribbon of open texture and wound round and round to Muffet size and shape. Then baked in huge electric ovens and tossed through and through.

Muffets contain the Sunshine Vitamin D. No other whole wheat biscuit has it. This is the vitamin which nature needs to help you use precious mineral in your food. Without this mineral, bones and teeth of children can not grow sound and hard, nor can adults repair daily wastage.

Serve Muffets with milk or cream, or with fruit. Or heat, pour on hot milk and eat, if you will, like cereal. Eat at breakfast or any other meal. All grocers have Muffets.

RAIL CHIEFS NOT ON PROBE

British and U. S. Interests To Be Represented, Report

Ottawa, Oct. 8—Whether or not Sir Henry Thornton and E. W. Beatty, presidents of the two railways, should be included in the investigation into railway matters to be appointed to report on the transportation problem, is a matter which is now under consideration by the government, it was stated in the Mail and Empire.

As yet, the Government has reached no decision, it is understood, regarding the number of men who shall comprise the commission or who they shall be. The powers to be granted the body have received only informal consideration though it seems pretty clearly decided that the commissioners will be authorized to go east and broad, into the whole carrier business, both steam and gasoline.

When the commission idea was first broached, it was conceded in many quarters that the commission and calling them as witnesses. If they were commissioners, it is argued, they would be placed in the position of sitting as judges, along with their colleagues, on the suggestions they themselves might make. This is regarded as a circumstance which in event of criticism of the commission's report, might reflect unfavorably to the two presidents, it was stated.

If on the other hand, they are limited to the role of witnesses, their suggestions will be given the attached consideration of a wholly independent commission. Such proposals, if passed on as recommendations by the commission would not be open to it is declared to any attack on partisan grounds by the particular supporters of opposite of either road.

Because of the similarity of railway operating conditions in the United States, it is altogether probable that an expert from across the line will be included in the commission. The large financial interests of United States investors in both roads is given as another reason for such representation similarity, the investments of British stock and bond holders will also be given similar votes by an expert from the United Kingdom.

Canada's apple crop is estimated at 3,827,000 barrels, and is slightly above the average.

IN MEMORIAM

HALL—In loving memory of my dear mother, Adelaide Hall, who departed this life, Oct. 12, 1930. She shall sleep but not forever, There is an awaking morn, We shall meet to part no never, On the resurrection morn.

Whom we see our brad beloved out of sight, We tender with such care, Ruddy taken from our home, How our aching hearts despair.

Around her resting place we linger When the setting sun is low, Feeling sad our hopes have perished With the one we cherished so

In the bright eternal city Death can never, never come Where in sweet peace we shall unite To our mother's home sweet home.

By some you were soon forgotten But never dear mother by me, —Sadly missed by son Clarence and Family. oc-1t

The blaze, which was unwarranted, started in the betting sheds and swept through the building before the firemen could arrive. The grandstand was built in 1922.

GOAT STARTS SOMETHING

Over Streets, Walks and Lawns Gambols Creature

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 9.—A goat went on the rampage here yesterday and caused a series of mishaps before it was finally subdued and captured by a police patrol wagon.

Imbued, apparently with the spirit of sport, the goat was first seen gambolling playfully across lawns near Melrose Avenue and Main Street, dragging a tether behind it. Then it sighted a milk wagon, and the fun began.

The goat took a sally at the horse which reared on the unwelcome aggressor and upset the wagon. A motorcycle policeman, Bert Irvin, who appeared on the scene, helped the milkman to right his vehicle and then set off in pursuit of the nimble goat.

It led him a wild chase through alleys and sidewalks until finally cornered and captured. Irwin tethered the creature to the handlebars, placed him in the sidecar and set off for the police station. The incorrigible goat, however, resuming the fun of freedom, leaped to the road and all but upset the officers and his machine. In despair Irwin called a patrol wagon and the recalcitrant goat was at last taken in the "lock-up."

It is liable to be charged with wilful damage.

SENIOR AND JUNIOR GRID TEAMS FROM COLLEGIATE WON IN NAPANEE HANDILY

Seniors Won in Last Quarter By Score of 9-2

JUNIORS STRONG

Plastered a 19-0 Count on the Napanee Squad in Junior Tussle

Belleville Collegiate football teams enjoyed a field day at the expense of the Napanee Collegiate, when both the junior and senior teams were successful on foreign fields. The junior ran up a 19-0 score against Napanee and thus have kept their goal line intact for the season so far. The senior team did not ever, but so fortunate, and they had to be content to come out on the long end of a 9-2 score. The senior game was probably the best that has been played in the interscholastic series for some time and the Napanee squad is far from being beaten for the silverware.

Hesketon Make Journey

A large number accompanied the teams to the eastern town and made their presence felt by lusty cheering. Both teams had the student body were entertained by the Napanee Collegiate in the evening when a dance was held in the auditorium of the school. All the students reported a good time after the game. The returns games will be played in Belleville next week and the football fans of the city will see the clever Napanee team. Coach Shiels has a stronger junior and senior team than last year. The juniors have their group pretty well cinched, while the senior squad will be out to win the title. If they can get now it is and Napanee will have to be content with their own field to make that possible.

The senior squad is heavier than last year by pounds, but they are still far from finished in their training. Many times in the game on Thursday, the line did not open the hole for the ball carrier and they had to go around the outside, a fault that cost them many yards when it was not necessary. Some of the players at critical points forgot their signals and the play went to blooey. The backfield is stronger in one department, that being the back field. The speed in doing the kicking and backwardly can hold true, while the two fleet-footed boys for the end were in Philips and Graves. Incidentally the speed of Philips was sufficient for the scoring of a touch to put the game on the line in the fourth quarter. The outside and flying wings were well covered and they missed wide open tackles in the first field. There is no doubt Mr. Shiels will improve this condition as well as the fact the boys were given a smart talk at half time and their play was generally better in the last half.

The Game

The first quarter of the senior game opened slow and Belleville was put on the defensive by the good Napanee team. Incidentally this team is husky and strong and they have been well drilled and are a credit. Reynolds secured the first point for Belleville, when he lifted one over the dead line and shortly after added another, when he did the same play. Near the end of the quarter, Robinson, who looked for Napanee kicked one to make for some time. Up till this time the forward pass was not used and it looks as if the play is only a threat and not a consistent ground gainer. In the second quarter there was no score although both teams had chances to get into the scoring column.

Shortly after the third quarter started, Robinson put his team on even terms with a kick to the dead line, but Reynolds put his team in front with a pretty run. The fourth quarter was nearly over when Philips was handed a beautiful kick and he rounded the end to place the ball behind the line for the first major score of the game. The convert was added to get the extra point from Scrimmage and this was successfully completed. The boys fought hard but their goal line was not crossed. Shiels, who handled the game kept the play moving and at the same time checked up on every infringement.

The teams:

Belleville C.I.—Flying wing, Miller; halves, Philips, Graves, Reynolds; quarter, Catzoni; snap, Rogers; guards, Hollingsworth, Reidmiddies, Wrose, Rigby; outsides, Bowler, Scott; subs, Marshall, Fraser, Embury Dolan, Twiddy, Scrimgeour.

Napanee C.I.—Flying wing, Moore; halves, Robinson, Oliver, Thompson; quarter, Devey; snap, Diamond; guards, Daley, Richardson; middles, Donaghue, Howell; outsides, Moffat, Rogers; subs, Aylesworth, Martin and Jackson.

Referee—Harvey, Queen's University.

Umpire—Cy Williams.

Jessie Game

The juniors simply smothered the Napanee squad with their kicking and reeling gainign plays. Jimmy Fidnell was the star point in the game and he was a hard man to stop. In the early part of the game he got knocked out in a fine play but after a short rest came back to dominate the whole situation. In the first quarter he kicked a point and Napanee shortly after made yards on a forward pass. In the second quarter Fidnell made a touch and the setumpage failed, making the final count 19-0.

The Belleville team was no heavy for the Napanee squad and their plays had a most telling effect in the final analysis. Andrews directed the team well while Reid and Fidnell worked well together on the back field. Often the chief had to respond a forward pass but fell in behind the line and his run and kick is the only thing that stopped him from a major score. The teams:

Belleville—Flying wing, Countryman; halves, Fidnell, Loughlin and Reid; quarter, Andrews; snap, Carruthers; insides, Cole and Kinney; outsides, McBrath and McAndrew; subs, Bradford, Graham, Carruthers, Wood, Hutchinson and Angel.

Napanee C. I.—Flying wing, Faulkner, Garret, Roe, Hearns; snap, Sutherland; quarter, Embury; insides, Guthrie and Cowle; middles, Wilkins and Taylor; outsides, Murphy and Reid; subs, McCracken.

Referee—G. S. Shiels.

Umpire—Cy Williams.

Head Linesman—Cy Williams.

FREDENBERGER GOUGH DEAD

London, Oct. 9.—Fredenberger Alfred W. Gough, well known to many Canadians, died yesterday after a long illness. He was 68 years of age and had been pre-Sunday at St. Paul's Cathedral since 1916.

He was vice-president of the British Workers' League during the war and later a member of the executive of the National Citizens' Union. He also widened his interest to include the chairmanship of the Fellowship of the Maple Leaf in 1921, a post he still holds.

SAINTS STILL HAVE CHANCE

Defeat Rochester to Make the Count 4-3 Against Them

Rochester, N.Y., Oct. 9.—The team that defeated the St. Paul baseball still were in a tough spot today but their chances of winning or at least prolonging their Little World's Series were considerably better as they were into the eighth game against the Rochester Red Wings, International League Champions.

The American Association title-holders, facing elimination for two days, were only one game behind the Red Birds after yesterday's 9-5 victory. The triumphs had cut Rochester's margin from four games to one to 4-3.

With chilly weather holding the crowd down to 2,000, the Saints stepped out behind the steady pitching of Burleigh Grimes and pounded four Rochester pitchers for 15 hits, scoring six in the nine innings. Betts pounded the Red Wings with his smart change of pace and kept his mates under control until the ninth inning when Paul Florence walloped a homer with two on base. Betts also hit a double in the fifth.

Ray Moss, making his second start, was driven from the hill for Rochester in the fifth and Hall, Hines and Judd who followed him, failed to stem the tide. Hall, Betts and Red Wings also contributed to their own downfall by making four errors.

WOLF STOLEN IS ALLEGATION

Reputed Bald Battler Lands in Police Toils

Mattawa, Ont., Oct. 9.—The ghost of an Algonquin park poaching with fiendish glee over this district, Nemesis has struck.

Milton Smith, formerly of Toronto, and a resident here for a couple of days was with a blood-curdling yell, upon the witness stand, armed only with a charred tree-limb, against a pack of wolves, evidently collected to smitten him the rest of the pack was off in another part of the bush and the howl of wolf, now dead, was dragging a trap.

He added these details provincial police here after he had been arrested in the Trans-Canada highway sunny at Deux Rivieres on a charge of stealing a wolf from such a trap. He had been lodged in the local jail here pending his trial today.

Smith's tale and subsequent interview in which he advised "get in the first" was given to the world by the Canadian Press and sent to numerous papers throughout the country. He stated that he was on route from Mattawa to Snake Creek and suddenly came upon a pocket of wolves in the woods. Napoleon-like, he decided that his an offensive was the best defence. Seizing a club he dashed into their midst, all except one scattered. He flew it.

Men of the north who know the bush were reluctant to believe that he could get that close to the wild creatures with a club. Pelt or no pelt they couldn't swallow that.

Yesterday Joe Beaudry, trapper, hit the trail and decided that

Try a New Souffle For A Fall Supper Dish

By Hannah Wing

The souffle has several attributes to justify its popularity. It offers another way of serving vegetables, cheese, and fish. It is also another way of putting more milk into the diet of the family. Not the least important is the fact that it is one of the simplest dishes to prepare and is satisfying on cool Fall nights. It also makes an attractive main dish.

One mother whose little son for some unknown reason was prejudiced against tomatoes found that she could conceal this important vegetable in an individual tomato souffle for him. He was very proud of know, too, that his taste was influencing the family's favor for tomato souffle when he saw it served to each member in individual ramekins. The mother was gaining another point in the tomato souffle the child was also getting milk and eggs.

This is the oyster season again and if our family is fond of the shell fish you can dress up the oysters in a delicious souffle which can be given increased richness if it is made with evaporated milk:

Tomato Souffle

2 eggs.
1 1-2 tbsp. flour.
3-4 tsp. salt
1 tbsp. tomato pulp
3-4 cup evaporated milk

Make cream sauce of milk, flour and salt. Add beaten egg yolks and tomato pulp. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into buttered ramekins. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (375 Degrees F.) until set and delicately browned, about 30 minutes. (Yield 6 servings.

Bean Souffle

2 tbsp. butter.
2 tbsp. flour.
1-2 tsp. salt.
Few grating onion
Pepper.
2-3 cup evaporated milk
2 eggs
2-3 cup bean pulp.

Prepare a white sauce of the butter, flour, salt, pepper, onion and milk. Add egg yolks and continue cooking for 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Cool slightly. Add bean pulp and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into buttered ramekins, set in a shallow pan of hot water, and bake until set and delicately browned in a moderate oven (375 Degrees F.) about 30 minutes. Yield 6 servings.

Oyster Souffle

1 pt oysters
2 tbsp butter.
1-4 cup flour
1-3 cup evaporated milk
1-2 cup liquid drained oysters
1 tsp. salt
Dash pepper
1 tsp Worcestershire sauce
2 eggs, separated
2 tbsp. buttered bread crumbs

Heat oysters in own liquid until edges curl. Drain, saving liquid to use in white sauce. Chop oysters fine. Make a thick white sauce of the butter, flour, salt, pepper, milk and oyster liquid. Add Worcestershire sauce. Chopped oysters and yolks of eggs well beaten Cool. Cut and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into oiled baking dish. Sprinkle with crumbs and bake in a slow oven (300 Degrees F.) 35 to 40 minutes. Yield 8 servings.

The Toddler Feeds Himself

By Constance Cameron

There are arguments for and against having the toddler dine with the family. Personally, the very little fellow, I feel, gets along better when he eats alone at his own little table. First, he can take his time, and he can have his meals at hours which fit into his own routine. Too, he can have a chair and table which fit him, and learn to use his utensils for food without the antics family watching him. And watch him they will if he's at the family table. In fact a meal which includes the baby, usually gets to centering entirely around him, which doesn't hook up with his best welfare at all.

Remember, when your very little child begins to eat solids, and to feed himself, that he is just beginning a new and somewhat difficult feat. You handle a knife and fork automatically, but the little child has to think when he does so. And he may not always do it right. You pour coffee, milk, water, etc., from one container to another dozens of times a day but baby is undertaking a big job when he does so. He is very likely to spill things to use, and it is important that you do not build up a wall of disgrace and self-feeding, or in fact the very act of eating, by emphasis "now, see what you've done" or other scoldings for untidiness.

The little, low porcelain-topped tables with a baby's size chair are excellent. Place the table in a sunny corner of the kitchen or the breakfast room. Keep a potted plant of his own, will serve as a centre of interest in the child's own table, and do give him the responsibility of caring for it. The small pitcher of cream should be a comfortable drinking cup will add materially in the quantity of this beverage to be consumed.

Let the child take his dishes to the sink, even giving him his own small dish-pan and cloths when old enough. A damp cloth to wipe his very own table always interests him. There are various ways such as these—each involving the doing of something like mother does —to excite a child's interest in learning to eat properly.

A dinner with the family may be effective if it sometimes is a diversion, but take care not to centre too much attention on the small guest.

Gold Not Alone Sufficient As Basis

Toronto, Oct. 8.—(CP).— Gold alone as a basis for domestic currency and international settlements is unsufficient, said Hon. H. H. Stevens, Dominion Minister of Trade and Commerce, in an address to the Empire Club on Thursday. Mr. Stevens said he was convinced that a fiduciary currency, while highly convenient for internal trade in times of peaceful stability is subject to extreme fluctuations in periods of social or economic disturbance and consequently could not be considered as a reliable means of values. Silver was a most vital element in trade structure and still played an important part in the activities of a large portion o the world's population. Given more attention to the fact the money of the Orient is silver, changes in the metallic money people and the fall in the price of silver had a terrific effect on their ability to buy.

SAVED IMPORTED DRESS

"After a little wearing, a lovely green taffeta—an imported dress—lost color so completely that it was not wearable. A friend who had admired it asked me why I wasn't wearing it any more. On hearing the reason she advised dyeing it and recommended Diamond Dyes To make a long story short, it turned out beautifully. I have a lovely new dress that really cost just 10c—the price of one package of Diamond Dyes."

"I have since used Diamond Dyes for both linings and dyeing. They do either equally well. I am not an expert dyer but I never have a failure with Diamond Dyes. They seem so to speak, to just always go on smoothly and evenly. They never spot, streak or run. My friends never know the things I dye with Diamond Dyes are redyed at home."

of obvious personable points, who surrenders to her dying father's firmament to project a program of vengeance. With all his fiendish application of chemistry and psychology, Fu Manchu was not a more reculsive menace than the pretty daughter proves to be. Loved by an exalted gentleman of her own race, loving an English nobleman, she allows her heart dictates no chance to defeat the accomplishment of her oath.

The scene of action spins from Limehouse, London's gay white way and murky Thames River, to luxurious estates of the titled. There are plenty of secret panels and passage ways, ominous shadows and a climax that will grasp your heart tight or thaw it by hands can take hold of a proffered finger or doo-dad.

"POLITICS" RIB-TICKLING DRESSLER-MORAN COMEDY

Belle Thanksgiving Offering

"Politics," which introduces Marie Dressler in her first picture as a full-fledged Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, is the attraction at the Belle Monday (Thanksgiving Day) and Tuesday.

A satire on political life, it discloses the famous comedienne as a woman candidate for mayor, running on a "clean up the town" ticket, and, with Polly Moran as her campaign manager, defying the racketeers, routing the crooked city political system, and riding to power amid a whirlwind of laughable complications.

Amid the comedy lee, are some tense dramatic situations, so that, beside getting laughs Miss Dressler is able to give the audience a taste of each of the other character work as she did in "Anna Christie" and "Min and Bill." Skeets Gallagher, who filmed "Reducing" and "Caught Short," directed the new production.

The story gets fast and furious when Miss Dressler discovers that the male politicians are implicated in the spankeasy murder of her neighbor's daughter. She organizes the women to go on strike against their husbands until the town's cleaned up—and her political meetings are among the funniest things ever placed on the screen.

SEAWAY PACT BY CHRISTMAS

By Ken Clark, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, D.C., Oct. 9 — President Hoover is gratified by Ottawa's announcement that the Canadian government is prepared to proceed immediately to diplomatic discussion of a St. Lawrence waterway treaty, Official Washington expressed satisfaction.

Optimists here saw the dirt flying in the international section by next summer, pointing out in consideration of the comprehensive engineering reports available it was conceivable an agreement on an instrument might be arrived at before Christmas. It is believed a treaty would be ratified by the Senate quickly and funds for the work offering employment to a considerable number of men would be obtained without trouble from an unemployment relief Congress.

The major problems to be settled concern division of costs and whether the development shall be made in one or two stages. The cost of building the international section between Prescott and Cornwall, a distance of 46 miles, was estimated by President Hoover as roughly $100,000,000 if it were the only one built. A single-stage development would be somewhat cheaper. Of the $100,000,000 about $35,251,000 would be charged against making the river navigable.

Suspended Sentence On Toronto Man

Oshawa, Ont., Oct. 9.—Eddie MacDonald, local unemployed leader, who pleaded guilty Tuesday to theft of ties from the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks, was yesterday placed on suspended sentence. A number of unemployed men who were implicated with MacDonald in the theft charges were placed on suspended sentence earlier in the week. The court room was crowded with unemployed men who clamored for the release of MacDonald.

Recreation and Town Planning Allied

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 9.—The relationship of town planning and recreation was discussed last night by A. G. Dalzell, Toronto, President of the Town Planning Institute of Canada, addressing the Recreation Congress of the United States and Canada here last night. Scientific city planning will facilitate recreation because it will prevent waste of land in unnecessary streets and street development, he said. The future of healthy recreation in Canada is bound up with city planning, he asserted.

There is hardly a proverb that has not figured for ages past in every language; and there is hardly one of them all that is not flatly contradicted by some other proverb.

ORAL WORK IN JUNIOR GRADE

Literature in Schools Theme of Dr. Bannister

Important factors in the teaching of literature in the public schools was the subject of the very valuable address given by Dr. J. A. Bannister, of the Normal School, Peterborough, at the meeting of the Teachers' Institute in the Collegiate Auditorium this morning. The address was a feature of the morning's programme, with the acting president, Mr. Kells, in the chair.

Devotional exercises were in charge of Rev. Robert Hall and were followed by a short speech by Mr. Kells, whose topic was oral composition in the junior grades. He urged the teachers to strive more diligently for this phase of public speaking in the students' own words. Too often orations were labelled as "oratorical" competitions when they should be referred to as public speaking contests. In oratory the soul of the speaker sways the audience, and orators are few. Public speaking is enlarged conversation and its art can be acquired by long and arduous training.

A talk by Mr. J. D. Bannister was greatly enjoyed during the morning session, and was followed by the address on the teaching of Literature by Dr. Bannister. Dr. Bannister gave good advice on the teaching of this important subject. He began by suggesting that the selection of the literature studied should be of universal appeal but not so mature that it would upset the emotional child. In its preparation the teacher must study the historicalo or geographical back ground of the poem and then make the children familiar with such terms and allusions before the actual presentation of the lesson. In the presentation the piece of liter ature under study should be read aloud in classroom first by the teacher as the beauty of the words and their significance can be caught better when heard from the lips of an appreciative reader.

Those teaching the primary classes should know child literature. They should learn to love the fables, fairy stories and the heroes of childhood. Then, too, they must know children. In this way they are well prepared to teach literature to the young.

Inspector H. J. Clarke expressed the appreciation of the teachers for the splendid address, pointing out that Dr. Bannister was well prepared by experience in public school teaching to talk on the problems of the teaching profession.

Mr. Gordon Anderson, Mr. N. O. Walkom and Mr. Kenneth Bird spoke briefly on academic advance ment, explaining the courses of study for teachers and the value of increasing their standing.

An address of much interest was that given by Mr. John Elliott who spoke on "South America." His recent visit to this country gave him first hand knowledge of conditions there, and his interesting comments showed keen insight into South American life.

Glimpses into the school systems of British Columbia and Alberta were seen in the addresses by Miss Park and Miss O. Tucker and the meeting closed with election of officers and presentation of resolutions.

Thursday Sessions

Mrs. G. Anderson brought impressions of the annual meeting of the Ontario Educational Association at which she was delegate to the convention Thursday in her report of the proceedings. Mrs. Anderson put paragraphs the main theme of the outstanding addresses and provided much food for thought to the teachers. Inspector H. J. Clarke in his address to the teachers, had many helpful hints for them in administration and in the record work of their schools.

In the afternoon Mr. Bannister gave a splendid address on the teaching of composition after which the convention divided into grade meetings of which the following were chairmen: Primary, Rev. Sister Mary Madeline; First Book, Miss Mary Wilson; Second Book, Miss M. A. Fleming; Third Book, Miss Vera Sheffield; Fourth Book, E. A. Bell; Rural Mr. Carman Snider.

Percy Deline Held On Charge of Theft From Farmer

Harry Haines, a farmer living in Sidney township near Trenton, reported to the Belleville district office of the Ontario Provincial Police on Wednesday that a gold watch, a gold signet ring and and a sweater coat had been stolen from his home. Constables Hammer and Campbell immediately commenced investigations which resulted in Percy Deline being arrested by them Thursday night and placed in custody at the Belleville police station. Deline is a young man who lives in the neighborhood where the theft was committed. The Provincial Police have received word from the Kingston officials stating that the stolen watch was found Friday in one of their constables in a second hand store there.

Percy Deline, who allegedly confessed to the theft from the home of Sidney Townsend, will appear Friday afternoon in police court at Trenton before Magistrate O'Rourke.

WAR DEBTS DISCUSSION AT WASHINGTON

Scaling Down of War Debts Due United States Expected to be Subject of Washington Gathering

France Asks For Statement Regarding Moratorium Agreement From U. S. Re-

BANK DILEMMA

Entire Outlook Suggests Immediate Discussion of Issue

Washington, Oct. 10—(by Ken Clark, Canadian Press staff writer) —A move for the revision of war debts or failing that an extension of the moratorium of inter-governmental debts will probably be made by the United States government within a few months. Washington sees no alternative to the scaling down of European debts to the country. Simultaneously, it is reported France has demanded of this government there should be no repetition of the incident of last June when without the knowledge of the Quai D'Orsay, Washington suddenly announced a year's moratorium on inter-governmental debts. France is said to have demanded a definite agreement. These reports added to the situation in Europe produce the deduction: President Hoover will scale down war debts.

Legislators Called

This opinion continues to grow here the second and not less important development of this week's drama—the summoning to Washington by airplane of legislators of both parties for a White House conference—was a general agreement upon the 1-year-old revision of debts. The president, who last June enacted the moratorium, was understood by a long distance telephone to obtain full support of both Republicans and Democrats on this year's moratorium opposition, this time with a view to bring the Senators and Representatives to the White House in an attempt, by tying before them the whole financial position both national and international, to get unanimity.

Plan Is Complex

The importance of his plan for breaking the vicious financial circle in this country is not minimized. In brief, he proposed by liberalizing credit in sound banks to prevent the necessity of their throwing collateral in the open market thereby, further depressing prices, and to restore the confidence of the depositor, stopping withdrawals of currency. It is apparent also the formation of a federal credit pool by the big banks was only an immediate part of the President's scheme. Behind the pool lies the prospect of formation of a government corporation which, like the war industries board would support the business structure by means of the unlimited financial resources of the nation. Such an organization would be called into being only if the national emergency warranted it, the President and his advisers, in the meantime, to bring about a normal working of the domestic plan and action on the war debts are interdependent.

Banking Problems

The banking basis of this inter-national banks with perhaps twenty billion dollars owing them to collect until the European situation is rehabilitated. Such a rehabilitation established in Germany, with Great Britain facing a general election and the imminent return of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald the defeat of his government would result in political overtures elsewhere, the observers believe, particularly as countries go off the gold standard and no economist will guarantee the outcome.

The international banks are willing to assist the United States institutions by lending a billion dollars but fear the ever increasing influence of an extended moratorium in Europe or a revisioned debts.

Political View

The political angle is this: The Republicans face an election next year with the prospect of some improvement in the economic position. Therefore, without rehabilitation in Europe the United States cannot expect a complete business recovery. President Hoover's problem is to make the electorate understand they must pay their own creditors. A lot of gold has come through the country this week. President Coolidge said: "Well, they hired the money, didn't they?" At this week's conference President Hoover failed to convince Democratic floor leaders of the necessity of an extension of the moratorium.

Preceded by French banking authorities Premier Pierre Laval of France sails for the United States. France is the most prosperous and firmly stabilized power in Europe. She seeks no security and no fidelity to obligations. Laval's visit symbolizes the French character in the words of a statesman: "I am satisfied, they have given me a campaign fund." The shift of events this week has changed the aspect of the forthcoming visit of M. Laval from "a courtesy call" to that of a conference of supreme importance. M. Laval, described by those who know him as the London Naval Conference as a courageous man of his word, is a Frenchman. President Hoover wants a liberal interpretation of the war debts "paper" and disarmament.

PROMINENT 1 NEBITAIN'S POLITICAL HAPPENINGS

At least two prominent young members of the House of Commons will now go to the polls in their old constituencies to fight for re-election in the present General Election campaign. William Henderson (left) second son of Right Hon. Arthur Henderson, is seeking re-election to the seat which he won (lower right) as one of the Right Hon. Stanley Baldwin's followers in the 1929 election, but dropped out. Major G. Lloyd George, son of Right Hon. David Lloyd George (top, right) has resigned from his former ministerial post owing to lack of sympathy with the MacDonald National Government scheme.

Aged Man Struck by Car Forgets Where His Home Is

Thomas Fitzgerald Walking in Centre of Road When Struck

IS GIVEN AID

Thomas Fitzgerald, a real old man, is in the General Hospital, Belleville, and can not tell the authorities where his home is. He was struck by a car Friday evening apparently his only injuries are not very serious as Dr. Morgan, who attended him at the hospital, discovered only a bad bruise on the left cheek. The old man's condition is considered good.

The accident occurred about sixfifty o'clock Friday evening about five miles east of Belleville on the highway. Mrs. Norma Dowell, 249 Dufferin Avenue, Kingston, driving west, in rounding a sharp curve, suddenly saw a man a short distance ahead walking in the centre of the road. She swung the car to the left but was unable to avoid striking him, but fortunately not straight on. He was placed in the car and hurried to the general hospital, where immediate medical attention was given to him. The old man says he has relatives named Dillon, living near Enterprise, Ont. To Constable Pirak, of the Ontario Provincial Police, the old man said that he had left a train at Camden East Friday morning but this seems impossible for him to have done so and have covered the distance to within a few miles of Belleville, which is the point he received a ride most of the way. The authorities are endeavoring to locate the old man's friends. Mrs. Revell, who reported very much the aged resident, was accompanied by four ladies en route to Toronto.

Setting a good example in fire prevention week, which is now on, no fires are reported to the fire department for the past 24 hours.

Queen's Girls To Bed Early

Kingston, Oct. 10—At Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., the authorities are on strike against the rule which sends them to bed at 10:30 p.m., but Queen's protectors don't mind getting in by that hour. A reporter who made inquiries as to the curfew rules for the women's first-year girl students found that with a few exceptions all the Presidents live at Ban Righ Hall or other approved lodgings. Most of them all be in the building by 10.15 p.m. but there is no regulation as to when they have to be in bed. Each week they can have one late night and that night they may stay out until 12.30 a.m. Women students in their second, third and fourth years do not have to be in their lodgings till 11 each evening, and they can have three late-leaves up to 12.30 a week. In addition to this there is extended late leaves for dances which allows the students to be out till 2.30 a.m. There is said to be no discontent whatsoever with these arrangements.

Cody's Appointment to University of Toronto

GOVERNMENT VOTE SPLIT BY NATIONALISTS

Liberals and Conservatives To Oppose One Another

EFFORTS MADE

Difficulty Experienced in Preventing of Split

(By THOMAS T. CHAMPION, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 10.—An example of how combined Nationalists Conservatives and Liberal nationalists are unanimously in many constituencies contesting the government vote when polling takes place on October 27, is afforded at Epping, Essex. Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, former Conservative Chancellor of the Exchequer, will be opposed there by the well known labor man, Comyns Carr, Liberal candidate. The local Labor party is also nominating a candidate. Both Mr. Churchill and Mr. Carr are supporters of the national government.

Efforts are still continuing over the country to avoid running two "nationalists," but party preferences are making it difficult to complete such arrangements.

The Conservatives have completed a list of candidates for all ten Manchester seats, of which Labor held five. Conservatives have and Liberals two in the last House. The Manchester Liberals so far have only two candidates, P. M. Oliver in Black ley and Philip Stanley, historical and political writer, in Withington. Mrs. C. F. G. Masterman, widow of the well-known Liberal cabinet minister, may be the Liberal candidate in Manchester Rusholme.

Kinderes Samsai

The Scottish Liberal Federation has endorsed the action of Sir Herbert Samuel, leader of the Liberal Nationalists, in supporting Prime Minister Macdonald, and urges all Liberals to do likewise. Sir Herbert, Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, the only member of the old Labour Cabinet campaigning for a House of Commons seat along with Prime Minister Macdonald, opened his campaign for re-election in Derby last night to an audience of 5,000, escorted by special ticket. Mr. Thomas had a good reception for the resolution supporting him was carried with only 20 dissentients. Mr. Thomas has two seats in the House, and the members for the other, Sir J. H. Thomas and W. R. Rayner, another Laborite who is seeking re-election, is also a supporter of the National Government.

In Central Leeds

In Central Leeds Sir Edward Grigg, Conservative Nationalist, will stand aside in favor of Hon. R. D. Denman, Liberal Nationalist who have been repudiated by the local Labor Party. Mr. Denman was the member for the Central Huddersfield. Full Liberal and Conservative support is given Sir William Mabane, unsuccessful Liberal candidate in the last election. Huddersfield returned J. H. Hudson, Laborite, in 1929.

CANON CODY'S APPOINTMENT IS ACCLAIMED

Has Been Rector of St. Paul's For 32 Years

6th PRESIDENT

President To Be Junior Graduate of Year 1889

Toronto, Oct. 10 (CP)—Announcement Hon. Canon Cody to the presidency of Toronto University has been hailed with enthusiasm on all sides. Premier George S. Henry is of the opinion that no appointment could be better fitted to assume the presidency of the university. "I think it was quite the obvious thing to do," declared Provost H. Cosgrave of Trinity College, a Brother - Cleric, and this view is general in education al circles.

Dr. Cody stated last night that he accepted the post with deep humility and a sense of overwhelming responsibility, which I can say is that I hope to maintain the traditions of the university.

Government Probe Is Favored By M.P.

Toronto, Oct. 10—Stressing that Canada will emerge first and best out of the economic depression, Dr. John R. MacNicol, member of Parliament for Toronto Northwest, told a large meeting last night that any Governmental investigation should be launched to safeguard labor against the competition of machinery and to study the five-day week. The meeting was held in the Gothic Theatre at Dundas Street Avenue and Queen Street West.

After reviewing the causes which may have brought about the present economic conditions, Mr. MacNicol declared that "this depression will be a failure if some good does not come out of it." In his opinion, the use of machinery by industry had created a new problem to the latter's disadvantage, and was a factor in present conditions.

Alderman MacGregor was submitted to Mr. MacNicol by the discussion the proposed street-car project on Lansdowne Avenue and Dupont and port road. The hecklers assured him that the straightening of the tracks in the area in question would benefit the residents very little as they used the cars to get to the levy asked by the city. The Alderman said in reply that "they did not want the work they can sell a statement which comes from a supported by Fred McBrien, M.P.P.

Other speakers were Alderman Duckworth; Dr. Gordon W. Bailey, School Board representative; Aldermen Hamilton and ex-Alderman Boland.

REVIEW

"DUST OF GOLD"

being the popular report of "The Poems of Ethelwyn Wetherald" 1831, by the Rev. Edwin W. Smith, Literary Superintendent.

The poems of Ethelwyn are eagerly looked forward to by all friends of the British and Canadian Bible Society throughout the world, in this year entitled "Dust of Gold." A phrase taken from the famous 28th Chapter of the Book of Job.

As usual, the editor shows an literary treasures "old and new" in the arrangement of the subject. In the prologue which deals with the history of "Dust of Gold" the chapters have significant titles: "Treasures sought and found"—"Channels of Gold"—"Gold tried in the furnace bound"; "Breaking open a shaft"; "Gold Dust"—"Nuggets"—"Golden Grains." Each of the twenty chapters Mr. Smith weaves examples of the "Dust of Gold" and daring shown by those who translate and circulate the Scriptures, and in a very wonderful way finds a parallel for gold with the outstanding features of Ethelwyn's report. He also illustrates the principles laid down by Wild examples unrivalled in the Society's annals for the year; urgin instead of a dole statement of fact, the whole is lit up by beauty of language, felicity of phrase, and a command of words. There are several references throughout the book to Hebrew and Greek words. Emphasis is laid on the difficult translations through which Bible Society workers here, but their spirit is summed up as follows: "Where there did not exist to lead our workers to despair, but to the contrary, a most splendid spirit that animated them is revealed in a statement which comes from South Saskatchewan: 'The policy of the Auxiliary was that of the intrepid explorer who would not believe that an occasional crop failure indicates the end of agriculture.' We gathered the harvest wherever available, and encouraged the human soil where the crop failed, in preparation for the crop that will not fail." There is reference to the work of Dr. Heine, the Society's colporteur, who speaks at least 36 languages and acts as port worker at Saint John, N.B., and also visits lumber and mining camps in Quebec and Ontario. Colportage reports from Canada also receives honourable mention.

A new feature has been adopted before each chapter, and an apt quotation from Karl Barth's famous book "The Word of God and the Word of Man" prefaces each section.

In the closing pages, reference is made to the twenty-five Gaelic and English Bible—the cheapest obtainable—made possible by generous birthday gift from Canada and Newfoundland. Which gratitude is expressed by generous gifts the the reading of the report hears testimony to the generosity the Society is always in need of funds to carry on its work.

This brilliant piece of work ends with a reference to the symbolic use of gold in the Holy Scriptures: "It was among the gifts offered to the Infant Saviour. The Seer of Patmos saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming out of heaven from God, the city was as pure gold—as if God had used the golden prayers and golden devotion of His people."

The whole report emphasizes the world service of the Society in the translation and distribution of the Scriptures, and gives abundant evidence of the never-ceasing activities of a Society that is not only the auxiliary of all missionary societies at home and abroad, willing to avail themselves of its translations, but also one of the great agencies for the evangelization of the world.

The book is tastefully produced and illustrated by photographs and dealing with gold mining and also with photographs of colporteurs at work officers, etc. Copies may be written Scriptures—"More to be desired than gold, yea than much fine gold."

Tall castor oil plants are to be seen in the garden at 259 St. Clair avenue, Toronto, some of them being over 10 feet high.

ABOLITION OF COUNTY URGED

Dr. Brittain Says Canada Has Too Much Government

Hamilton, Oct. 10.—Abolition of county councils, Public Buildings and a general overhauling of the administrative machinery of the country were urged at the meeting of the Citizens' Research Institute by Dr. Horace L. Brittain of Toronto, a director.

He spoke on the subject "The Relation of Personnel Administration to Public Expenditure," and emphasized that, as a country grows, the possibility of enormous waste and extravagance in administrative offices also increases. He cited figures to show that the army of government employees, municipal councils and staffs, school teachers and other public employees. The entire Dominion, he said, is estimated, included 186,861 employees, receiving a total annual payroll of $300,000,000. Also paid to 94,043 persons by various governments during 1930 amounted to $60,800,620. The National Railways employed 111,288 persons with a salary and wage roll of $179,770,868 a year. School teachers in Ontario numbered about 69,000, and received a combined salary of $70,860,114.

"Is this too much personnel?

A study of the figures, said Dr. Brittain, will convince the average person that Canada had more government than is needed. The West managed to get along without counties and he saw no reason why the east could not do the same. He ventured that it was the people who bore the brunt of the taxes and who must work for economy in public expenditure. Dr. Brittain also expressed the hope that the day would come soon when the federal government, the provincial governments and the municipal councils would each have a competent business manager, with adequate staff, to control personnel and effect economy.

Canon Cody Appointed Toronto University Head

Chairman of Board of Governors Elected By Colleagues

BEGINS IN JULY

Toronto, Oct. 10—Hon. and Rev. Henry John Cody has been appointed President of the University of Toronto, in succession to Sir Robert Falconer.

A bulletin to this effect was issued yesterday evening by the Board of Governors of the University at the close of their meeting, which had been adjourned from the previous day.

Canon Cody, himself a graduate of the University of Toronto, and noted as a divine and as an educationalist, will commence his new duties on July 1 of next year — 1932—when Dr. Falconer's retirement becomes effective, or earlier if need should arise.

President Falconer's resignation, on account of ill health, was announced last June.

Excluding from the list of Presidents Dr. Maurice Hutton, who was Acting President and also Principal of University College from 1906 to 1907, Dr. Cody will be the sixth President of the University.

Interested in College Affairs

The man which Canon Cody, or as he will be next summer, President Cody, sets by the University of Toronto is patent, not only in his words, but in his actions, almost from the day of his graduation. He was a member of the Royal Commission instituted at the beginning of Sir James Whitney's premiership to reorganize the University of Toronto, and had he not at that time been barred by statute on account of being a teacher in theology at a federated college, Wycliffe—he would certainly have been a member of the first Board of Governors. As it is, he has been a member of the board since the first vacancy occurred, and he has been Chairman of the Board of Governors since 1923.

Canon Cody is not the first graduate of the university to rise to the position of President, for that honor was held by Dr. James Loudon, who was President from 1892 to 1905.

But, the newly appointed occupant of the Presidential offices in Simcoe Hall is, without doubt, the first to hold that position who has pictured the Archbishop of Melbourne, and to have previously been Chairman of the Board of Governors.

Canon and Mrs. Cody, by a strange coincidence, had already arranged to have dinner last night with Premier and Mrs. Henry at their home at Oriole long, before he knew that the appointment was made yesterday afternoon.

Distinguished Career.

Hon. and Rev. Henry John Cody M.A., LL.D., D.D., has earned many positions of distinction in the life of the community. He is an ex-Minister of Education for Ontario, rector of one of the largest churches in Toronto, Canon of the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto and was recently appointed Chairman of the Provincial Government's Cancer mission.

He was born in Embro, Ont., in 1868, and received his education at Galt Collegiate Institute, He received degrees from Queen's University, the University of Manitoba, Trinity, Wycliffe and King's Colleges, and was ordered in the Church of England in 1892, and became rector of St. Paul's Church in 1899. He was appointed Canon in 1904, was an Archdeacon of York, 1909 to 1918. His activities in the field of education have been lengthy. He helped to found Bishop Cosley's School, Lloydminster, and Havergal College, Toronto, and was for some years Professor of Systematic Theology, Wycliffe College. He was a member of the Royal Commission of 1905 and 1906 to help reorganize the University of Toronto.

In addition to many other public services in which he participated, Canon Cody accepted the position of Director of Education in the Hearst Administration in May of 1918, and retired in the following year when the Government was defeated. Canon Cody was ordained in 1921, Archbishopric of Melbourne, Australia, but decided to remain in Canada. In 1926 he preached a sermon in connection with the seventh Assembly of the League of Nations in the Cathedral at Geneva.

He has been a close personal friend of Hon. J. Howard Ferguson, High Commissioner for Canada in Britain, since his student days, and spoke over the radio on behalf of his Government in 1926 and 1929 elections.

Sir Robert's Career.

Sir Robert Alexander Falconer, who was appointed to the Presidency of the University of Toronto in 1907 as successor of President Loudon, was born in Prince Edward Island in 1867. Under his guidance the principle of federation of religious colleges with the university was brought to fruition. During his regime, also, the fine and decent body grew by leaps and bounds and many new buildings were erected.

Ontario Will Get One Million H. P. For $100 a Horse Power

Toronto, Oct., Oct. 10 (By The Canadian Press)—An Ottawa despatch to the Mail says:

"A proposal by which Ontario will be asked to spend possibly $100,000,000 to develop its full quota of power from the St. Lawrence waterway development was represented here yesterday as the view of the Beauharnois government.

"Large as it may seem to the uninitiated, $100,000,000 is really a cheap price, according to experts, for the power which will be had in the upper St. Lawrence rapids. About 1,000,000 horsepower is going to waste there now, and if New York can't take half of this as must be the case if Ontario is built, the government would get a 1,000,000 H.P. development for one-tenth that amount in horsepower. Compared to the capital costs of nearly all private power companies, this is an extraordinarily cheap proposition, it is claimed."

After provision of an annuity for Mrs. Stanfield, the will divides the estate equally among the five children.

RESCUERS TOO LATE TO SAVE

German Flier Had Kept Alive for Several Days

Parrsboro', N.S., Oct. 10.—Fritz Simon, German mail-flier, whose lifeless body was found floating in Cobequid Bay yesterday afternoon, lived for two or three days after his mail plane, New York, crashed on the bay early Tuesday morning, in the opinion of Dr. C. S. Henderson of Parrsboro', who conducted an autopsy last night at the direction of Nova Scotia police.

"He certainly lived for some time after the accident," Dr. Henderson said. "Death, however, could not have been dead very long when they found him, and it is my opinion that he died during the last 24 hours." The exact pronounced death due to exposure. An inquest will be held.

Simon's body was found shortly after noon Friday by Lieutenant Leigh Marlton and Newfoundland Airways pilot, who had been making search parties from the air. Flying low over a channel where he had found wreckage of the ill-fated plane on Wednesday, he saw first a piece of broken pontoon. A few minutes later he sighted Simon, who was kept upright in the water by an inflated life-belt. Leigh signalled the tug Almac, which picked up the body and another piece of the pontoon that had been missed by the flier as the boat approached.

Overhaul Machinery of Gov't Directors Advise

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 10 (CP)— Abolition of counties, fewer parliament buildings, and a general overhauling of the administrative machinery of the county were recommended at yesterday's meeting of the Citizen's Research Institute by Dorance L. Brittain of Toronto, a director.

He spoke on the subject of "The Relation of Personnel Administration to Public Expenditure," and emphasized that, as a country grows, the possibility of enormous waste and extravagance in administrative offices also increases. He cited figures to show the large army of persons employed, municipal councils and staffs, school teachers and other public employees.

U. S. Police Will Carry On Probe

Cornwall, Ont., Oct. 10 (By The Canadian Press)—Owing to the fact New York State Troopers have secured proof that Angus Thompson met his death in the United States section of the St. Lawrence River, further investigation into the death of the Canadian Indian will be carried out by U.S. authorities. Five Indians of the St. Regis Reservation were being held in jail in Malone, N. Y., in connection with the case, pending the arrival of a Federal District Attorney to take over the investigation.

Royal Canadian mounted Police and Ontario Provincial Police, who have been co-operating with United States officials in probing claims that Thompson was slain during a quarrel in a row boat on the St. Lawrence on the night of September 29, returned to Cornwall yesterday.

STILL SEARCH FOR BODIES

Moncton, N.B., Oct. 8.—(CP)—Search for the bodies of two German flyers whose plane "New York" crashed on Cobequid Bay early Tuesday morning was continued today when Lieut. Louis Leigh of the Maritime and Newfoundland Airways renewed flights over the bay and a squad of Nova Scotia police set out in a motor boat.

NEW ZEALAND POLITICS

Wellington, New Zealand, Oct. 10—(C.P. via Reuters)—New Zealand has been strongly influenced by the dissolution of the British Parliament and the forthcoming election and there is said to be a growing feeling in Cabinet circles that an early general election is inevitable.

The latest survey shows that on January 1, 1930, there were 34,536,629 telephones in the world.

THANKSGIVING

Canadians this year observe Thanksgiving in the old style. It seems a long time since the holiday was marked so early in the autumn for a decade or more it has been held on Armistice Day. This year the event is free from direct association with the war and war's sacrifice.

Many recall the oldstyle Thanksgiving with its turkeys and other fowl and endeavor to mark the day in ancient manner.

Despite depression Thanksgiving will be Thanksgiving for in spite of submerging of values of farm produce and manufactured products and of the unemployment of men and women, the human mind is optimistic and elastic and naturally takes advantage of such a day as finds when men and women may be thankful.

There is warrant for thanksgiving in these days though the burden is heavy on many. Thanksgiving is a return of thanks to Providence for food, and raiment, and the blessings of life and surely in these days men and women and children too must be grateful for these things however trying conditions brought about by man may be. While there is life there will be gratitude to the Giver of All.

Slumps being the one extreme shows up the other extreme of reckless pyramiding of prices and many persons now realize that the middle away is the way of life and happiness. They become more grateful for the realities of life, because they realize that life is not all in money and lands. There are values which depression helps men to realize.

Thanksgiving gives expression to this realization by man of his dependence on God and of the true things in life.

SPEED LIMITS

Mr. Justice Logie is the latest to add his name to the long list of those who advocate the abolition of speed limits. Eventually, it is indicated, the provincial department of highways, intent upon bringing a greater measure of safety to Ontario's traffic lanes, will hearken to this growing public demand and make the experiment. The distinguished jurist, in his journeying around the province, presides over many civil and criminal actions arising from motor car mishaps. None is better qualified to express an opinion and when he says that speed limits "lead to more perjury of record than any other thing," those whose responsibility it is to fashion the laws will be expected to lend attentive ears. Mr. Justice Logie is the advocate of the English system of speed regulation, which, instead of defining speed limits, puts the onus on the driver of motor vehicles to exercise reasonable caution. Under that system, a driver may be charged with driving recklessly though he be proceeding only at a rate of 10 or 15 miles an hour. Too, a motorist on an open, uncongested road may be allowed to be driving safely at speeds in excess of the 35 miles an hour which the Ontario department of highways fixes as the limit of safety. It must be generally recognized that the 35-mile-an-hour speed limit on highways and 20-mile limit in cities invite perjury, when court actions are the aftermath of mishaps. Ordinary traffic pace on provincial highways is in excess of 35 miles an hour, in fact settled. The highways department does not instruct its motorcycle patrolmen rigidly to enforce the 35-mile limit, but when accidents occur and civil or criminal action is taken it is most unusual to have either plaintiff or defendant driver admit that he was driving in excess of the speed limit, because he feels that such admission would be fatal to his chances of getting redress or escaping penalty. Hence the perjury which Mr. Justice Logie declares is rampant in the courts and which he feels can best be checked by abolition of the law which is observed chiefly in the breach and which invites deviation from the truth.—Hamilton Spectator.

Hard times do not exist for a Belleville boy, Howard Sager, who, out of the most insignificant of creatures, has piled up a wee fortune of eighty-four dollars—collecting dew worms. That is real business ability—to see an opportunity and to work for its realization. Fishermen will pay for the lowly worm, and Howard knows that.

The first frost has come and so has the second, but the second was more severe than the first. After the delightful summer, hard it is to acclimatize to the severe days ahead. But whatever comes the year will go down in history as one of the finest in respect of favorable weather.

IMMORTALITY
By Alice Michaelis

These are enough to prove to me
The fact of immortality;
The long-desired goal ungained
The lofty purpose unattained,
The hopes that never came to flower,
The rank injustice, clothed with power,
The plan that perished, incomplete,
The youth that passed when life was sweet.

These are enough to show Earth's days
Are but a swiftly-passing phase;
Earth's hours, with all their change and strife,
Are part, but not the whole of life,
One room of the vast house, maybe,
Through which the soul moves, proud and free.

EDWARD BOK, the little Dutch boy who arrived in the United States in 1870, with a large capital of confidence, good sense and ambition, later to become the guiding star of the very successful Ladies' Home Journal, states in his reminiscences that the greatest lesson he learned in life was to remain silent under fire. Several times the guns of writers were trained on Bok unjustly, too, and he found his best weapon in remaining silent, letting his enemies blaze away until they got tired firing without making any visible hits. Bok's first task on arrival on this continent was to learn the language, and he started to attend public school before he knew a word of the English language. His next important task was to earn a living for himself and help support the family. He was kept so busy digging that he had no time to find out when he had been so inclined, which he was not. Satan finds work for idle hands to do, he certainly lost money on Edward Bok who seemed to be so busy night and day that it is a puzzle when he found time to sleep. As a boy he had a flair for newspaper work and through his fad of autograph and letter collecting was interviewing great men before he was twenty. Presidents, poets and authors became his friends and he obtained a liberal education to supplement the meagre knowledge required in public school which was to stand him in good stead when he became editor of a magazine with the greatest circulation of all time. No one can read "The Americanization of Edward Bok" without being the better for the infusion of optimism communicated from his pen descriptions of the conquests made possible by thewill to succeed, and he claims that he found the road to success easy and that the competition and opposition which he expected to find. Any young man or young woman pausing discouraged on the threshold of life should get this book and read it for a tonic and inspiration. Corby Library carries it.

Other Papers' Opinions

ALAS! 'TIS TRUE

Most newspapers, the News-Argus included, are reminded of their mistakes. A newspaper can pursue its happy course inviting praise to local organizations and individuals, encouraging the living, speaking well of the dead, giving many columns of free publicity to clubs and that cause, and boosting the community and its interests generally, but let one inadvertent mistake occur, and the paper hears of it, in some cases before the ink is dry. It was ever thus. A newspaper must ever be ready to use freely the columns of publicity for good and weal of its readers and community, but otherwise must it have always handy the clear of charity—the supreme virtue in a newspaper, in the eyes of many, was intended to give service only—free or otherwise—not to make mistakes that he who runs may read. To pursue an arrival on the News-Argus and most newspapers strives hard to obtain the element of human weakness enters in and mistakes are made. Despite this fact, however, the newspaper continues to be a powerful instrument for good in the world, and without boasting, that most people are fairly and justly will admit this.—Stirling News-Argus.

"THE CAKE THAT MOTHER USED TO MAKE"

A sorrowful question was made by the Bread and Cake Bakers' Association of Canada, in session at their annual convention here, when they asked why it was that "mother" said—and discussed means of effecting an improvement, so that it will be generally agreed that careless use of vanilla and other flavouring is the principal cause of the lack of distinctive taste.

Whatever the explanation, of the fact there is unfortunately little doubt. Most people will be inclined to think that it is due to the standardized methods of cooking now employed in cake-making institutions, as in most restaurants. You get the same standard sweetness and flavour and when you by chance happen in a home-made restaurant that does distinctive cooking, the difference is so marked that you notice it at once.

Why not the same with cakes? The cake-maker has taken a personal pride in his work ought not to be content to turn out the best he can, rest. The evils of standardization affect, perhaps more conspicuously than any other form of product. Even if the bakers of the country only cook ten per cent. of the cake consumed by the public at large, that ten per cent. would be marked by individual flavour. Otherwise the eaters would be more and more inclined to bemoan the days of their childhood when "the cake that mother used to make." A few expert cake-making women with large followings might teach the baking fraternity a lot—and still be pleased to know—about cakes.—Montreal Star.

WHAT HISTORY TEACHES

Believe it or not, this depression is about over.

Even if it were only technically and superficially over, the fact remain that the present cycle of business lethargy was not about so long as it can without change, and betterment is a positive and inescapable part of every business cycle.

It behooves every person to realize, therefore, that the time is here when replenishment, replacement, repair, rejuvenation, revival and forward looking expansion must commence if for no other reason than that these normal and healthy actions have been so long delayed.

Merchants in every line are finding it now "darkest before dawn" and their human natures call out loudly demanding immediate constraint, further conservation and continued over-caution. That history has often proved (and we have no guide to the future other than the past, which is good enough) that this tendency must be fought off. Even at the expense of momentary business profit, selling ahead of needs is not the right line must be continuously brought into the store, the warehouse, or the manufactured line. The basic appeals to the public must be continued. The maximum effort to awake the public to normal appreciation of opportunities must be used.

If this is done, both dealer and consumer will profit, for both need the economic services of the other and both are humanly suffering more from the malady of Mental Depression than anything else.

If there is a sovereign panacea, then this same sense of confidence and will go forward on nerves of necessary, will do for geese and gander.—Oshawa Times.

THE SLAUGHTER CONTINUES

In a recent editorial the Ottawa Citizen drew attention to the fact that typhoid fever, scarlet fever and diphtheria are being largely eliminated by medical science, were it not for the carelessness of the population, but that during recent years the motor car is the new terror. The Citizen declares that more lives were taken by the motor car during the first eight days of the present year than were taken by all three of the three once dreaded diseases.

Official figures for the first quarter of 1931 show that 146 persons were killed by automobile accidents as against 94 deaths from typhoid fever, 83 from scarlet fever and 53 from smallpox. There is considerable force in the Journal's remark that "it will be a strange commentary on the age that the progress of science of the death toll of the contagious diseases, whereas the automobile, is to continue to take its toll as one of the three great scourges which medical science has considerably eliminated," — Owen Sound Sun-Times.

RADIO AND THE NEWSPAPER

(Frank E. Gannett, Rochester, N.Y. Publisher)

The radio may have its place in the dissemination of some forms of news. But I am sure that the public will never be satisfied with the presentation of news except in "cold" type. Hence it must be studied at the pleasure of the reader, rather than at the convenience of the disseminator.

Here I want to quote Owen D. Young, who said: "If you want to impart an idea to someone else, speech is a rather limited method. You can only talk so fast and you can only tell one story at a time. Or, if you are distributing news to many people, it is like asking them to read their newspaper through a hole which covers only one sentence at a time. You have to wait until one reads his paper. He scans the entire sheet, reads the headlines of many stories and their relative importance and then reads these he chooses to him. Compared with a simple picture, he becomes impatient with the slow distribution which it would take many minutes to read a column."

When you consider Owen D. Young's great interest in radio, this statement is very significant and should reassure those publishers who fear the radio as a rival to newspaper, by own great objection to the radio is the element of advertising on the air. This has hurt radio and unless reform comes in the States, it will kill the industry. We are watching with interest and approval, Britain's attempt to legislate this same evil. Recently the publishers of Radio Times agreed to eliminate radio publicity; this should have been done long ago.

Poet's Corner

YOUTH IN THESE DAYS

Behold this mighty host that has no might!
That bears the heat and burden of no day!
An army? This disorderly array?
An army is a noble, heartening sight.
These have no battered weapons, no bold cry!
They move, not march, each man in his own way.
Are any wars afoot They cannot say;
They've heard of none; their knowledge no watch at night.
Leaderless, listless, creeps this sorry host.
Never had soldiers fewer scars to show;
Never had army lesser cause to boast
Of hard-fought fields, of given or taken foe.
Trophies have they neither won nor lost.
Embattled Youth? Today? Who calls it so?

Letters to the Editor

Belleville, Oct. 9, 1931.

To The Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,
Dear Sir:—

Will we too many Protestant Churches

Our Catholic citizens have one magnificent church and school building and plenty of money for church purposes—so much money that they are able to purchase valuable buildings, and have them torn down for the purpose of improving the surroundings of their church and school buildings.

The Presbyterian churches are burdened with debts, our Methodist congregations are overcrowded, no more than sufficient to accommodate all the congregations of Methodists.

Our Anglican citizens have two large and three small churches; one is more than enough to accommodate all the church-going Anglicans.

Our Presbyterian citizens had their church union recently the name of one was changed; one church is more than sufficient to accommodate all the church going Presbyterians.

The mission of Christ is presumably preached in all those Churches. The church going citizens are professed Christians. Why do they not all attend one church, namely Christ Church?

Christ Church with its spacious galleries is large enough to accommodate them all. I would suggest that all Protestant Churches in Belleville attend one Church. Christ Church, Belleville, Ont., renamed "Christ's Church, Bridge St."

The Pastors and Deputies of the unnecessary church properties could arrange among themselves to conduct religious services in turns to suit their convenience.

Should the morning service in the aforesaid Christ's Church from 9 to 10 a.m. Sunday, Oct. 11, and other from 11 to 12, another from 1 to 2 and another from 3 to 4. No church service after 4 o'clock.

The unnecessary church buildings have first class valuable buildings which could be sold, and be sufficient to pay all their church debts, and have a considerable surplus.

Besides, the expense of the upkeep of these churches would be one-twentieth of what is required under the present system.

The Pastors and Deputies of these unnecessary church properties could be transferred to more populous districts as vacancies occur.

Yours faithfully,
ROBERT BOGLE.

GROUP VISITS

outh Ontario Teachers Also Visit at School

Every year for several sessions past, the teachers of some Inspectorate in Eastern Ontario have spent one da yof their annual convention at the Ontario School for the Deaf to gain an insight into the work carried on there. This year the visitation was enlarged and the Dundas County Teachers' Association held its whole two days' convention there. They married by car and bus, to the number of over eighty, about noon, and after lunch held their regular afternoon session in the capacious sewing room at the school.

The evening program was a mixed one. Superintendent Ritchey presided and extended a most hearty welcome to his guests—all the more hearty because, before coming to Belleville, he was Inspector of that county, so this was a happy reunion with his former friends and associates. He alluded in felicitous terms to Dundas County from which have come some of Ontario's most noted men, conspicuous among whom was Premier Whitney. He then briefly sketched the development of the education of the deaf and described the rival methods employed, and enlarged upon some of the problems involved. This was followed by several demonstrations of class-room work, illustrating the development of the work during the first four years. This was varied by some rhythm exercises and some of the beautiful dances in which these pupils are so expert. The last item was a very interesting address on Sir Walter Scott, given by Mrs. Clifford of Ottawa Normal School, illustrated by a number of colored slides. The rest of the evening was spent in social enjoyment concluding with dancing, the music being furnished by an orchestra.

On Friday forenoon the teachers were divided into groups and under the guidance of members of the staff, visited some of the classrooms.

About noon some eighty teachers from the South Ontario Inspectorate which includes Oshawa and Whitby arrived, and the two Associations and the O.S.D. Staff had lunch together, at the conclusion of which Mr. Stewart, Inspector of Dundas County, gave expression to the gratitude of the Association to Mr. Petterly and his staff for their most hearty welcome and for the many courtesies accorded them, and their great delight with what they had seen of the splendid work done at the Ontario School for the Deaf. He was sure that every teacher present had got many helpful ideas that would enable them to become more enthusiastic and proficient in their work.

Inspector Hutchinson, of South Ontario, also expressed his appreciation of the hearty welcome extended to him and his teachers. Soon after lunch the Dundas teachers left for home, and the Ontario County teachers spent a very enjoyable afternoon, inspecting the class-room work and the shops. Of particular interest to all of the visitors was the rhythm work and the radio-ear demonstration, both of which are features of educational work quite distinct from the work carried on in hearing schools.

HALF MILLION IN PETTICOAT

Little Old Lady of 93 Has Total of $900,000

New York, Oct. 10 — Mrs. Ida Mayfield Wood, the little old lady of the Herald Square Hotel who tearfully surrendered $400,000 to her guardians early this week had another $500,000 in cash concealed in her petticoats, it was revealed.

The 93-year old recluse accidentally dropped a leather pouch on the floor of the hotel room where she is being attended by a nurse. The nurse picked it up and handed it to her.

"Let me show you what's in it," said Mrs. Wood. She drew the strings of the pouch and spread fifty $10,000 bills on the table. The money was promptly turned over to the guardians.

There was no great fuss and hoo-hawtion about it this time, as last Tuesday, when Mrs. Wood wept bitterly at having to hand over the $400,000. Or like the scene about two weeks ago when she went to her bed, pulled a sugar bag containing $50,000 in bonds from under a mattress and flung it in the face of a lawyer, appointed as temporary guardian.

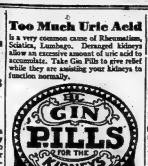
Nor was it like the occasion when she pulled out $5,000 in faded currency, from a pocket in her dress, threw it on the floor, stamped on it and kicked it all over the room.

But when they asked her to give them all the money she was prepared for them. With the cunning of old age, she hidden half a million dollars beneath the bulk of her half-dozen petticoats; she gave them the $400,000 and told them that that was all she had.

Most of the money found in the leather sack today and in the paper bag she gave them yesterday were faded, many of them being more than 50 years old.

It had been known that Mrs. Wood, once the belle of New York, had sufficient money to take care of herself. But no one imagined she had nearly a million dollars hidden in her room and about her person.

She was held to be incompetent recently, and the courts appointed relatives to be her guardians. She insists that she is still young, mentally alert, and able to take care of herself.



For years she lived at the old hotel, cooking her own meals in her room on a tiny electric stove. Few persons ever came to see her and she did not go out.

LLOYD GEORGE IS CRITICAL

Claims Conservatives Are Seeking to Exploit Emergency

London, Oct. 10—The "Sphinx of Court" spoke last night. Breaking his long silence by a public statement from his invalid's chair at Churt, in which he described the impending general election as "the most serious and important issue on which the country has ever been plunged," Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George, Liberal leader, strongly attacked the Conservatives.

Mr. Lloyd George's confession of faith took the form of an address to his constituents in Wales. When the Conservative leaders in the cabinet ought to have been discussing the national emergency, he says, they were in fact plotting an unwanted election with the view of forcing tariffs on the nation.

"In that event I shall stand for free trade and were it possible for me to do so I would spend whole-hearted support to every free trade candidate without reference to party," he declares.

"I shall be happy to do all in my power in the next Parliament to assist any government or any party which is striving faithfully to get us through our troubles, but I decline to assist a mere Tory ramp (swindle) to exploit the national emergency for Tory ends."

"This extraordinary election," he continues, "finds me incapacitated by illness from taking any part in the struggle. Although my doctors assure me I am making a good recovery, they also warn me it will be some weeks before I can resume my normal activities." Mr. Lloyd George is recovering from a major operation.

CANADA OFFERS PARADISE TO HUNTERS

With the fall of the leaf and the tang of autumn in the air the call of the wild is held anathema to the Nimrods lock, to their rifles and shotgunz, as the hunting season is ushered in. True to her reputation as one of the world's greatest playgrounds, Canada offers a wide range of sport, furred, feathered and horned, to the care to penetrate its far-flung hinterlands. From coast to coast, all along the vast system of the Canadian Pacific Railway, there are countless established points of entry into the woods and mountains, readily accessible to those in search of game. The shores of countless lakes, rivers, and creeks, abound with all varieties of duck and goose and are not infrequently the scene of the termination of successful expeditions after moose, elk and deer of all kinds. New Brunswick rivals Ontario and Quebec as moose territory, while further west, the towering Rockies offer their tribute of bear; mountain sheep and mountain goat. Bear are also plentiful in the Ontario northland and in certain parts of Quebec. With a view to preserving, various changes have been made this year in the game laws of all Canadian provinces, but even with the new restrictions a broad period of hunting is offered and the invading army from Canadian centres, as well as from the United States, is already starting on its expeditions.

THE GAY BANDIT OF THE BORDER

by TOM GILL

CHAPTER XXVI.

Verdi, hearing of Don Bob's stranded back, had expressed polite regret, and went on busily with more important things.

Meanwhile, after a fretful week, Don Bob limped out to the porch and spent his time rolling cigarettes and gazing over the desert. Twice at sunset Manuel rode up and the two talked in undertones for an hour. And always after these half-whispered conversations, Don Bob remained silent and preoccupied.

So it was Adela and Aunt Clara found him toward the end of a sunny afternoon.

"Men," said Aunt Clara, singling out the most comfortable chair, "make such interesting invalids. They become so helplessly human at that time."

"Don't let your maternal instincts overcome you," Bob cautioned. "I'm well enough to think about riding out to the range tomorrow. Ted's been carrying on the ranch single-handed. How's the major?"

"Very wrathy, but still playing the faithful watchdog on El Coyote's trail. Always sniffing out impossible clues. Yesterday he brought in a lone sheep herder. Good Lord, even an army dog should have known the fellow couldn't have been a bandit chief. They frightened him out of eleven years' living, got no information, and finally realized they were on a wild goose chase. When I suggested that they round up the wailers over at Mendoza's or atop the Pullman porters on their way through, the major got shadvie. Told me he believed I didn't want the Coyote caught, and I admitted in my light-hearted fashion that I certainly didn't. After that, deep silence gathered about our family hearth. Today he has indigestion."

"Bob," asked Adela, "if El Coyote's cause is just, why does he plunder like a bandit?"

"He uses the best tools and methods he finds, like any other wise leader. If the law cannot uphold him in what he does, he must do so outside the law. Don't forget that every great revolutionist was first a bandit. It is only when he wins that he becomes patriot and liberator. Here, where Morales is law, every enemy of his becomes an outlaw."

"That means, then, there will be open war?"

Bob nodded silently.

The major's wife was showing signs of impatience. "Nobody asks me for my opinion, and that's a great mistake, for here it is. The trouble with this border country is that it has too many saviors. Off and on, between transfers, I've been here thirty-five years. I know I don't look that old, thank you all very much. Well, every year I've spent here has been overrun-pulled with saviors of one kind or another. Morales thinks he's one; the government thinks it's one; perhaps El Coyote does. What they need, these people, is to be left alone. Give them peace from ideas. Drop it all! Let them cultivate their lands, herd their animals, and have their babies, although God knows they do very well in that last matter. But let them alone."

Bob smiled. "Dear lady, I think that is exactly what El Coyote would like to do—to see them left alone."

"But if he breaks Morales's power will he let them alone, or will it be just an exchange of slave drivers?"

"I think in that event El Coyote would be will content to disappear."

"You're so conversant with his plans, if you weren't so lazy, I'd suspect you of being El Coyote."

Bob's amused eyes never changed. "I wonder just what kind of a bad man I'd make. First of all I'd kidnap the major and hold him for ransom."

Aunt Clara gave her baritone chuckle. "Who do you think would pay for him? Mc—after the atrocious bridge that man has foisted on me for thirty years? You tell your kidnapping band to come over any time. Bob. I'll leave the door unlocked. I'll even turn the major's bag packed."

Bob looked at Adela. "This, young lady, should be a warning and a lesson. See to what depths the habit passion of young men must come at last."

Adela smiled. "I'm terribly frightened, but I know that if anyone threatened the major, Aunt Clara would be the first to scratch."

"Hear, hear," applauded that lady, in high derision.

Bob's eyes softened. "I'm just wondering, Adela, how you couldn't give to be just your age and have the dreams of years to give, and perhaps to know again what love is like."

Aunt Clara dropped her cigarette. "That settles it. We've got to go before he gets in the music, love and dreams and everything. I can stand cavalry brutality and mechanistic painting, but middle-aged poetic sighs make me rise and dust the ash from her dress." Adela, smiling, got out of this influence."

Adela laid her hand against the rancher's cheek. "Get well, soon, old friend, and I'll tell you another story—perhaps a love story. And I'll leave you to find for me the happy ending."

"There'll be a happy ending, somehow, never doubt it, Adela mia."

But before that night was over, the hope of any happy ending was farther away than ever before.

For it was on that evening Bob had sent Ted over to Mendoza's to bring Ann Reed out to the hacienda.

"Ann has some information," he told Ted. "She won't trust it even to Manuel. I've sent word that you would come for her."

In the little rancher Ted came for her just before sunset. As he circled the driveway at a canter a Mexican stood eagerly watching from among the palms in the patio. He waited in patient immobility among the shadows until Ted and Ann, after exclaiming at length, he drove rapidly out toward the hacienda of Don Morales.

Not until she was seated on Bob's porch and the cigarettes lighted did the girl begin. Then, as Bob and there smoking, Ann told them of the visit of Morales and of his seeking for information of El Coyote. Through it all Bob smiled silently.

"I think the old devil suspects," Bob said at last. "Well, unless he moves quickly, his suspicions won't help him. Manuel and I are laying plans of our own. What else is new, little oracle of the border?"

She turned toward Radcliffe. "There was something I learned that may interest you. You know they talk much of you over at Mendoza's. Some tale of your strength and of the time you threw Jito, and always they talk as if something you and he are bound to fight again. One night there was a man, a lawyer, over from Sonora. He sat with two others at our table, and for a time Mendoza was with them. When they spoke your name this man from Sonora remembered something about you. I made him talk. It's never very hard to make you men talk. He told me that some years ago a piece of land had been transferred from father to son, and the records of it were entered with his law firm. He said that the land was in your name."

Bob leaned forward. "What did he call the land?"

"He called it the Esperanza property."

"Esperanza!" Bob's gray eyes sparkled. "Good Lord, that holds two of the best waterholes in this part of the country." He drummed with his fingers on the porch rail. "It would be too good," he murmured.

Ted's own eyes were bright with excitement. "That was the name," he cried. "That was the name dad used the last night we talked. He how would it get transferred to me?"

"I can only guess," Bob replied. "Your father must have transferred it before the crash came. He must have bought that tract when he was laying plans to irrigate the valley, and Morales never knew. That's the best of it, Morales, of course, thought it went up in smoke with the rest of these commitments. We'll that 'old octopus squirms when he learns that one hundred thousand acres of the best range land he has been using belongs to you!"

FOWL SUPPER AT CENTRE P.E.

Many From City Attended Function Monday Evening

"Oh, what a banquet—what a feast"—this was the comment heard Friday morning from numerous Belleville citizens who attended the annual fowl supper given under the auspices of Centre Church, Prince Edward County, Thursday night. The congregation of this church is famous far and wide for the sumptuous suppers they serve, consequently the attendance last night was exceedingly large.

The welcome given was genuine and hearty, everything possible being done to ensure a happy time to all. The supper was a revelation in the art of good cooking—the tables, which were nicely arranged, were laden with the most tempting food. The members of this congregation are generous in the support they give to the work of the church and as an example of this, said they gave to the supper last night, that which was supplied by one family in particular may be taxed as a standard applying to all the willing workers. This family as an example, supplied four cooked chickens, two roasted chickens, cake, cream, sugar, bread, butter, pickles and pickles and jelly. This certainly indicates most generous and enthusiastic support. After the supper a very enjoyable concert was given in the church the programme being arranged and conducted by Mrs. Towers of Brockville.

"SICK HEADACHE?"

It is not necessary to give in to headaches. It is just a bit old-fashioned! The modern woman who feels a headache coming on at any time, takes some tablets of Aspirin and heads it off.

Keep Aspirin handy, and keep your appointments. Headaches, systemic pains, come at inconvenient times. So do colds. You can end them before they're fairly started if you'll only remember this handy, harmless form of relief. Carry it in your purse and insure your comfort while shopping; your evening's pleasure at the theatre. Those lifelagging aches that bring a case of "nerves" by day are ended in a jiffy. Pains that once kept people home are forgotten half an hour after taking Aspirin! You'll find these tablets always help. In every package of Aspirin tablets are proven directions which cover colds, headaches, sore throat, toothache, neuralgia, neuritis, sciatica, and even rheumatism.

The tablets stamped Bayer won't fail you, and can't harm you. They don't depress the heart. They don't upset the stomach. So take them whenever you need them, and take enough to end the pain. Aspirin is made in Canada.

PARTY PLATFORMS IN BRITISH CAMPAIGN

London, Oct. 9.—Labor's manifesto is out. Premier Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson. But the Labor Party's platform is well known. Along it the party has brought the Party Conference at Scarborough for this election.

Of the three Governmen: platforms undoubtedly greatest interest is taken in the Conservative one. They might be jotted down in this form:

Prime Minister MacDonald: "As it is impossible to foresee in the changing conditions of today what may arise no one can set out a programme of detail on which specific pledges can be given. The Government must be free to consider every proposal likely to help, such as tariffs, expansion of exports, contraction of imports, commercial treaties and mutual economic arrangements with the Dominions."

Conservative View

Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin: "It is imperative the Government should have a national mandate giving it freedom to use whatever means may be found necessary. At home the adverse balance of trade is the paramount problem. I shall continue to press upon the electors that in my view a tariff is the quickest and most effective weapon not only to reduce excessive imports but to enable us to induce other countries to lower their tariff walls. The problem of the Empire is to secure economic unity for which we have so long striven. The hope that which led to the suspension of the Ottawa Conference have been overcome and that it will be possible for the Canadian Government to renew its invitation. The ideal of Imperial economic unity is widespread today and I am confident that the foundation of such unity will be well and truly laid."

Liberal View

Sir Herbert Samuel: "I for one, and I think the Liberal Party as a whole, wish the Government to go on with the emergency proposal of permanent tariffs is not directly related in our view to the present emergency. However, it might be found there was a need for some emergency duties in order to restrict certain imports. For nearly 60 years I have served this great political cause (Liberalism) and I have never betrayed it yet and shall not betray it now on this issue of adverse balance of trade, it may be on other aspects of the present emergency my mind is open to any argument."

That the Conservatives, most dominant factor in the National Government, will seek to overwhelm the Free Trade Liberal wing is the conviction of observers. Sir Herbert Samuel himself will be opposed by a protectionist Conservative in Darwen, Lancashire. This aspect of the battle is expressed by Major Oswald Lloyd George, son of the Liberal chief, who is resigning a junior post in the National Ministry vacate to the Prime Minister:

"It (the Election) was willed only by Conservative politicians who hope thereby to snatch at any cost an unworthy party advantage out of the national trouble and acquire power to carry into effect their policy of protective tariffs. Your decision in favor of immediate dissolution can mean nothing else than that the Conservatives have been successful in stampeding the country into a rash, ill-timed election from which they hope to snatch a party majority. This would enable them to compel the Government in the national name to enact a full Tory programme of protectionist tariffs, including taxation of food and, to maintain through the action of the new Parliament a policy of general reaction."

Major Lloyd George's resignation was accompanied by the resignation of Major Gwynne Owen, controller of the household, on the same grounds.

Developed "Snow" Apple, Dies at 69

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—Charles Hammett Snow, inspector in the fruit branch of the Department of Agriculture, and well known in the fruit growing industry throughout Canada, died here yesterday after a short illness. He was 69 years old.

Mr. Snow developed the "Snow" apple which attained wide popularity in Central Canada. He was born near Hull, Quebec, and on completion of his education took up fruit cultivation. His farm and orchards were located near Ottawa on the Montreal road and remained a place of much interest to agriculturists and flower lovers.

CHINESE ARE CONGREGATING

Japanese Account For Bombing By Planes

Tokyo, Oct. 9 (A.P.)—Japanese authorities declared today the bombing of Chinchow, Manchuria, by Japanese airplanes was in retaliation for an attack upon the planes by Chinese troops.

Mukden headquarters of the Japanese army asserted in a statement that Chinese troops had fired upon the planes when they were on a reconnaissance tour, whereupon the Japanese replied yesterday with bombs.

Other than slight, "considerable damage was inflicted," Japanese communiques gave no intimation of casualties. Foreign dispatches in Peiping and elsewhere, however, placed the total dead at 30 to 50 dead.

University buildings, the temporary seat of the Manchurian government, were damaged, other accounts reported. The Japanese contingent had the incident under consideration.

The Tokyo war office estimated that more than 30,000 Chinese troops were concentrated at Chinchow, where Chang Hsueh-liang, youthful governor of Manchuria, planned to set up his headquarters. Mukden, the capital of Manchuria is Japanese troops. Chinchow is 225 miles southwest of Mukden.

"I Would Have Been Prostrated"

"He's over the line for a touchdown," exclaimed the enthusiastic group of schoolboys as they watched the play of a forward on the home team.

When the dust had cleared it was seen that the player had failed to rise.

Two Bell Telephone linemen working nearby saw that something was wrong and hurried to render aid. The boy in his plunge had struck his head on the hard ground and was unconscious.

Trailed for the count by the Bell Telephone men and a boy or two, Mrs. Mills hey dressed the boy's friends to call his mother, tell her that he was not badly hurt and that they would bring him home in a few minutes.

Mrs. Hackst said afterwards "the telephone saved me a dreadful shock. I would have been prostrated but for that timely call."

FORTIFICATION OF VINTAGE

Grimsby, Ont., Oct. 10.—(By The Canadian Press) — Announcement was made here last night that the Federal Government had extended to October 24 the time limit for distillation of old wine into fruit spirits for fortification of this year's vintage. Originally the limit had been set at today. As a result of the Government's new order, it is expected, wineries will have the opportunity of using practically all the old stock for fortification.

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 10 (CP) — Representatives of two Protestant denominations yesterday requested Hon. George S. Rev. A. L. Richards and Rev. Dr. Frank Langford, representing the United Church of Canada, and Rev. E. Ralph Adye and Rev. Canon Sawyers of the Church of England in Canada composed the delegation.

SEES NO FINER APPOINTMENT

Appointment of Canon Cody to Varsity Post

Col. W. N. Ponton speaking of the appointment of Canon H. J. Cody as the presidency of Toronto University, succeeding Sir Robert Falconer, declared: "No better appointment could have been made." Col. Ponton returned to the city last night after attending a session of the Senate of the University, of which he is a member. Sir Robert Falconer presided at that meeting and no mention was made of the appointment.

"I do not think all the details have been completed for the successor and until that time would not like to say anything," said Col. Ponton. "No one could have been more successful in conciliating the four great branches of the University, St. Michaels, Trinity, Victoria and University College than Sir Robert Falconer and credit must be given him for his wonderful foresight."

The Toronto University is now with the exception of the University of London, one of the largest universities in the world, having over 7,000 undergraduates. Of course the University at Bombay in India is larger than either of the other two, but it is not a while university.

LETTER DATE IS BAFFLING

Court Gives Up Attempt To Solve Riddle in Bonter Case

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 10.—(By The Canadian Press)—Attempting to decipher the date of a letter engaged the attention of non-jury court in the continued hearing of the claim of W. R. Bonter against the Bank of Montreal, Bonter suing for recovery of securities worth $300,000 which he says were deposited in the Bank's Branch at Trenton, Ontario. The bank denies knowledge of the securities.

A. J. Park, handwriting expert, Mr. Justice Nesbitt, K.C., M.P., K.C., Bank counsel, and W. R. Willard, counsel for Bonter, were sought to make out the date and each came to a different conclusion.

"It is the 21st," declared Mr. Tilley.

"It is the 26th," asserted Mr. Willard. The expert examined the letter through a microscope and reminded there was an 'a' in the date.

After a further scrutiny, Mr. Justice Nesbitt declared he saw an 'n' in it.

Finally the court gave up the attempt to solve the riddle.

BRINGING UP FATHER, By George McManus

Women's Interests in the Home

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beckman
Entertaining the Fiance's Family

Dear Mrs. Beckman:

Within the next few weeks' time I am to welcome to my home my fiance who has been on a pleasure trip with his parents for the last couple of years. They met either of his parents, but I am to have that pleasure very shortly when I meet him at the station.

What I've been puzzled about is whether it is my duty to extend my invitation to come to my home directly from the station, to his parents also. Every one concerned is aware of the fact that he is to stay at my home for a short period, but I wish I knew what to do about his parents and brother. They have no relatives or friends here in this city, nor anywhere near here, in fact.

Please tell me if it would be proper for me to invite his parents to my home also, although it would be a trifle embarrassing to give ample enough sleeping quarters.

B. When I am introduced to my future mother-in-law, should I extend my hand for the handshake that she is sure to offer, and say, in a most pleasant voice, "I am pleased to meet you," or should I just extend my hand to show respect? Should I kiss her, or is that considered a bit too familiar?

Thanking you in advance for your kindness in this matter, I am

Sincerely,
E.D.

1. This is entirely a matter of first, whether your family wishes to extend this hospitality, and second, whether it is convenient for them to do so. Of course it would be a charitable thing to do, gracious and friendly, and it would be nice, but, of course, if they were to stop over in your city only a few hours, the inconvenience might easily be bridged over especially if the spirit of real hospitality makes the inconvenience seem small, but if they are to be in your city for a long time, then perhaps it would be easier for all concerned to allow them to go to a hotel. Then you might plan some occasion for a dinner party, a dinner or two in their honor, and other functions, if you wish.

2. When you are introduced to your future mother-in-law extend your hand for the handshake that she is sure to offer, and say, in a most pleasant voice, "I am pleased to meet you." How do you do, Mrs. Ward. It is such a pleasure to meet you at last. I have looked forward to this meeting for a long time."

If she greets you with a kiss, and probably she will, that is different, but you should not make this overture first.

It would be charming of you to take her a corsage when you go to meet her, but if you are a stranger, you might send it later, either by your home, if she is not there, or to her hotel.

Eating Sandwiches

Dear Mrs. Beckman:

How can one eat toasted and open wiches, such as toasted cheese, and so forth? Are they eaten with a fork, and if so, are they cut with the knife, or is it proper to pick them up in one of fingers and eat them?

E.D.

Try better it to be a knife and fork to eat a sandwich if we are given the convenience of these pieces. These utensils are especially necessary when we are served loaded sandwiches, such as the delicacher sandwiches now so popular. With the knife and fork we can easily convey it to the mouth with the fork, and cut it with the knife, or one another piece of the sandwich.

Wedding Gift

Dear Mrs. Beecktwayn:

Will you please tell me what is the proper gift for a twentieth anniversary?

Mrs. B.

The twentieth anniversary is the China Anniversary. We may give a present of china for this anni versary or we may give a gift of anything done nowadays, not pay such strict attention to the traditional symbol, and give any kind of present for the home.

The story of Charlotte Corday, as recorded by her collateral descendant, Josephine Mackenzie Bacon, is now available in book form in a new meaning. Little has been remembered of her history but the fact that she stabbed Jean Marat, that fiery leader of the Parisian mobs during the days of the French Revolution. The career of this young Normandy girl who was born one since she lived and died in such a period of violence, of cruelty, of patriotism in whishing to free her revolutionary comrades from the tyrannical hands of Marat, the cause of her tragic death at the guillotine; Charlotte Corday's historical adventure will enjoy reading by young people.

"Red Rust" by Donald Black, son of the late Conrad Black, will have so far come from the Austrian soldiers(is the story of an Australian soldier, who was killed in Palestine. The author's memories of days and nights of fighting and marching, of interludes in camps, and the final pathetic sweep and collapse of the Turk ish defenders in the victory of the campaign. Many pictures taken on the battlefield serve to add to the interest of the book.

Two new studies of Shakespearean drama are among the new books this week. The Women in Shakespeare's Plays", by Margaret MacKenzie is the study, from a modern viewpoint, of the women in Shakespeare's plays. Shakespeare and the growth and change of his characters toward them, and toward their share in the actions and enforcements of life. The author shows that so far from being a conventional figure, as in the Victorian fathers, as an interpreter of human nature he was more highly than many of our moderists. The style of the book is not prosaic but lively and interesting.

"All's Well that Ends Well, Shakespeare's Problem Play, Measure and Cressida" and parts of "Cymbeline" and "Winter's Tale" are clearly interpreted by William Witherington Lawrence from the point of view of their medieval background in his book, "Shakespeare's Problem Comedies." The author has been student of medievalism and writer of many books on the subject. Columbia University, tries to discover the spirit and the final problem in terms of medieval codes, customs, and traditions of the men who were shaped Shakespeare's contemporaries. The conclusion is cogently become clear and more considered when explained by Professor Laurence.

PREPAREDNESS

Love may come like a thief at night,
Love may come like a king at noon,
But be it wrong or be it right
Or be it late or soon.
There is no fast or close but he
Can capture its security.

There'll never be so little a lid
But he will close on what is hid;
There'll never be a room so high
But he will find it by and by.

My heart, though shut in a secret place,
Wears while by night, wears rose by day,
And scents her hair and tints her face.
For love comes late—or soon.

IS EVERYBODY HAPPY?
NOT SO YOUNG NOTICE

Friends:

It would be so easy to make this happy world that I wonder why we don't do it. I have talked to a number of people lately, who were festered about something or other, and I've found the right way to fix things right away.

Let the woman who says that all the officials are crooks have built on that old shop and work, marry the man who does nothing but sit around the house all day.

Let the children who are ashamed of their father live in the orphan asylums, where they will have to be ashamed of parents, and let the orphans know what it is to have a dad.

Let the man who says that all public officials are crooks have built on that old shop and work, marry the man who does nothing but sit around the house all day.

Let the children who are ashamed of their father live in the orphan asylums, where they will have to be ashamed of parents, and let the orphans know what it is to have a dad.

Let the man who says that all public officials are crooks have built on that old shop and work, marry the man who does nothing but sit around the house all day.

Let the children who are ashamed of their father live in the orphan asylums, where they will have to be ashamed of parents, and let the orphans know what it is to have a dad.

Let the wets live in the Dismal Swamp and the drys in the Sahara Desert, and let the rest of the people who aren't darned fools either way, have the rest of the earth.

Let the book-keeper, who never can get his accounts to balance, never see his folks, and let the travelling salesman live at home all the time.

Let the wife have a home that she can be happy in, a kind husband which she can be proud when company comes, and a husband who will keep the house comfortable all the time, remember she spends most of her time trying to please him.

Don't give her any chance to worry, keep up the home, make the wife happy, and the satisfaction of it all is to yourself as well. You get back all the money expended. A little talk with Dad Dearborn and the rest of the Corner will start the ball rolling.

Yours for happiness,
Dad Dearborn.

DEW WORMS MAKE SMALL FORTUNE FOR HOWARD SAGER

Belleville Boy Makes $84 Out of Unsuspecting Worms

A WILL AND A WAY

Howard Sager, the fourteen-year-old son of Mrs. A. Sager, 170 South Front Street, has found an industrious boy and his enterprise is indeed commendable. Not being content with loafing away his summer vacation fishing, he went to work and sold bait to others to go athishing. Every night he gathered and he could not find a well watered their lawns. Howard would patrol the grounds and with dim light stealthily move about, quickly and skilfully, catching the unsuspecting worms. For this work he was often occupied from early in the morning until midnight when he returned home a little richer. Customers would be waiting for him and being sold out he would have to go again to the lawns for a further catch. The owners of the lawns soon became acquainted with Howard and allowed him the privileges of searching their lawns for worms. For this kindness the boy feels very grateful. Having found the source of revenue, large numbers being captured in the swampy places along the bay shore and in the Belleville Hospital. As a result of the season's operations, Howard has a respectable bank account—all his own. The amount received from the sale of bait was $84.00. Howard is in the Collegiate and Vocational School, this being his first year in studying motor mechanics. He is proud to be able to buy with his own money the school books which he required as other text and stationary articles. Worms may and not have caught fish and Howard's patrons—but there is no doubting that these same worms are a source of profit to many dollars during the holidays.

VIVID WORLD SERIES DRAMA NEARLY ENDED

Cards and A's Have Each Won Three Games—Final Today

BARNSHAW - GRIMES

Pitchers To Be Used Have Each Hurled Two-Hit Performances

(By Edward J. Neil, Associated Press Sports Writer)

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 10.—The curtain that flashed back ten days ago on a vivid World Series drama started fluttering down today, the play all but ended, the audience hoarse and thrill-scarred, the black moustached villain and the blonde hero right back where they started in the battle for the hand of the fair heroine.

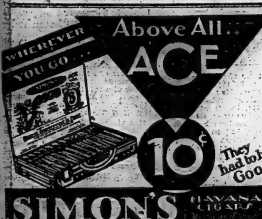
Six games the world champion Philadelphia Athletics and the St. Louis Cardinals have played to capacity in run of the play, a sensational presentation, yet today the question of conquerer, and conquered rested solely on the decision of one ball game, the seventh and last of the World Series of 1931. It came to an end as it began, one of the most exciting struggles in the history of the annual Fall battles and as it has, and befitting the time-honored course of all true drama, one of the outstanding characters in the play locked in a final duel for right and justice.

Grover Cleveland Alexander and Jesse Haines, the latter a veteran of seven years service with the Cardinals, will be the pitchers to be used in the final contest. Alexander, who pitched the first game of the series, a 2 to 0 victory, and Haines, who hurled the fifth game, a 4 to 0 triumph, each limited the opposition to two hits.

Alexander, who was purchased by the Cardinals from the Chicago Cubs in mid-season, was the second pitcher to be used by Manager Gabby Street of the Cardinals in the series. Burleigh Grimes, who pitched the first game for the Cardinals, was relieved after the first inning by Alexander, who pitched the remainder of the game.

Haines, who was purchased by the Cardinals from the Cincinnati Reds in mid-season, was the first pitcher used by Street in the series. He relieved Bill Hallahan, who pitched the second game, after the latter had been knocked out of the box in the fifth inning.

Haines pitched the fourth game, which was won by the Cardinals, 5 to 1, and Alexander pitched the sixth game, which was won by the Athletics, 7 to 0.



Grimes, who pitched the first game for the Cardinals, was relieved by Alexander in the first inning after the Athletics had scored three runs on two hits, a walk and a hit batsman. Grimes was charged with the defeat.

Hallahan, who pitched the second game for the Cardinals, was relieved by Haines in the fifth inning after the Athletics had scored four runs on five hits and a base on balls. Hallahan was charged with the defeat.

Lefty Grove, who pitched the third game for the Athletics, was relieved by George Earnshaw in the seventh inning after the Cardinals had scored two runs on two hits and a base on balls. Grove was charged with the defeat.

Earnshaw, who pitched the fifth game for the Athletics, was relieved by Grove in the ninth inning after the Cardinals had scored two runs on two hits and a base on balls. Earnshaw was charged with the defeat.

Grove, who pitched the third game for the Athletics, was relieved by

MARIE DRESSLER AND POLLY MORAN AT BELLE MONDAY

"Politics" Voted Their Funniest

"Politics," which brings Marie Dressler to the Bells Theatre Monday and Tuesday, matinee daily, as her first picture as a full-fledged star, is unique in that it gives her equal opportunity as a comedienne and as a dramatic actress. In it she makes laughs as in "Reducing" and "Caught Short"; and at the same time rises to dramatic heights as in "Anna Christie" or "Min and Bill."

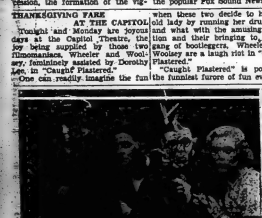
The new picture is a comedy drama of political life. Miss Dressler plays a housewife who, goaded to action by conditions in her town, runs for mayor, organizes the women's vote and drives out the gangster rule. Polly Moran plays her political manager and aide in the battle.

Charles F. Riesner, who filmed "Caught Short," and "Reducing," directed the new picture, in which a notable cast appears. Ricco Alan is seen as the comic barber, Karen Morley, recently seen in "Never the Twain Shall Meet," and

MARIE DRESSLER and POLLY MORAN at The Belle MONDAY (Thanksgiving Day) and Tuesday. Matinee daily, in the comedy you'll vote their funniest, "POLITICS".

William Bakewell, of "All Quiet on the Western Front" and other films, are the romantic leads, and John Miljan, noted in "The Secret Six," is the gangster ruler.

The story is an original by Zelda Sears and Malcolm Stuart Boylan. It was adapted by Wells Root with dialogue by Robert E. Hopkins.



High spots include Miss Dressler's dramatic denunciation of the crooked mayor in the political rally before defiance to the gang leader; the attempt of the husbands to break up the women's rally which opens Marie's speech, her retaliation by calling the women of the town up on strike against their husbands, the comical torchlight procession, the formation of the vigilance committee, and the arguments between herself and Miss Moran.

While most of the story is screamingly funny, the tense dramatic moments disclose Miss Dressler as a character actress of compelling force. The picture was produced lavishly with one of the largest exterior sets ever built and hundreds of people engaged in the torchlight procession, political rallies and other dramatic high spots.

Four selected Junior Features have been arranged for exhibition on the same program and include a funny Vanity comedy, "The Signer They Are", "Exciting Events in Seems", revealing interesting freaks of nature; "Crazy Composition", a clever melody-studded offering, and the popular Fox Sound News.

THANKSGIVING AT THE CAPITOL

Tonight and Monday are joyous days at the Capitol Theatre, the joy being supplied by those two filmomaniacs, Wheeler and Woolsey, feministic assistant by Dorothy Lee, in "Caught Plastered." One can readily imagine the fun that ensued by farceurs of filmdom, in Manager Holmes' opinion, and those who saw it at last night's Midnight Frolic laughed loud and long.

NEWSPAPER MEN'S VIEW PAPER PLAY

All the employees of the Ontario Intelligencer have been invited to be the guests of Manager Holmes at the Midnight Frolic of "Five Star Final," the sensational newspaper drama at the Capitol on Monday at 11.15 p.m. This Midnight Frolic is of course, open to all the public and usual evening prices of admission will be in vogue. "Five Star Final" has aroused great interest and much controversy on newspaper ethics, the play will be reviewed in Tuesday's Ontario Intelligencer from a local angle.

Cross breeding of brown trout and the Atlantic salmon by Canadian fish culturists is enlivening developing a hybrid both larger and gamier than the brown trout.

"Caught Plastered" with Wheeler and Woolsey at the Capitol today and Monday and that means crowds. Prolic laughed loud and long.

"FIVE STAR FINAL"

IS DYNAMIC PLAY!

'Five Star Final' after a sensational run in Toronto, and still running on Broadway after seven weeks is coming to the Capitol for the Midnight Frolic on Monday at 11.15 p.m. Manager Holmes is to expose the "muck-rake" methods of some U.S. newspapers, then Edward G. Robinson.

Mr. Robinson who was lately the gunning go-getter of "Little Caesar" and the gambling fool of "Smart Money" is seen in "Five Star Final" as the ruthless managing editor of an American tabloid scandal sheet—which thrives on the strength of its slogan: "The worse the news, the better we like it."

"Five Star Final" deals especially with the ways in which the unscrupulous staff of the "Gazette" ruins the reputation of the Townsends. Michael Townsend had married Nancy Voorhees twenty years before, fully aware of the fact that self defense she had killed a man. Their daughter Jenny has never known the dark secret and is about to marry Phillip Weston, son of a well-to-do family.

Mr. Robinson has never been so dynamic—so human—or so passionately convincing as in the role of Randall. His excellent support includes the lovely Marian Marsh, screen discovery of the year.

Edward G. Robinson in "Little Caesar" directed "Five Star Final."

"Five Star Final" will also be shown at the Capitol on Tuesday to Wednesday at the usual times with no advance in prices.

"AL" CAPONE WAS GAMBLER

Business Cleaning and Pressing Is Mostly Gambling

By Victor Hackler.

Federal Building, Chicago, Oct. 10.—A former Miami prosecutor who participated in the drive to drive "Scarface Al" Capone out of Florida, yesterday quoted the gang leader as saying his business was cleaning and pressing, but mostly gambling—mostly gambling.

Vernon Hawthorne, who was the state's attorney of the 11th Florida district in 1929, the first witness of the day in Capone's income tax trial, related ad interview between Capone and Miami officials in the summer of that year. The authorities, he said, objected to Capone's presence there and wanted to know "what he proposed to do in Miami."

"He said he was in the cleaning and pressing business in Chicago," Hawthorne said. "I asked him what else, and he replied 'real estate.' Then I said, 'As a matter of fact aren't you in the gambling business?' and he replied, 'Well, there an interest in a dog track in Cicero, Ill.'"

The witness said he finally asked Capone if gambling was not his principal business. He quoted the "public enemy" as saying, "Well, yes."

Work For Everyone Will Certainly Increase Taxes

Edmonton, Alta. Oct. 10.—Taxation will increase if it is demanded that the Government provide work for everyone, and before three months pass the Governments of Canada will learn that "we cannot go on as we have done in the past," Premier J. E. Brownlee declared in a speech at the "produced in Alberta" exhibition yesterday.

"How could Great Britain have arranged to take care of its three or four million men out of employment by providing work at fair wages?" he asked. "It just will not continue in Canada this way. How far can we go in providing food and clothing and fuel for our unemployed in the present way? We will probably learn in the near future that we can do it much better and at only one-quarter of the expense as at the present time."

GERMAN FOREIGN POLICY IS UNCHANGED

League Council Hears Sino-Japanese Clash Adjourns to Tomorrow

Dr. Alfred Sze Charges Military Oppression By Japan

READY FOR PARLEY

Japan's First Problem To Know With Whom to Negotiate

Geneva, Oct. 12 (AP)—The League of Nations council met again this afternoon to discuss the Sino-Japanese conflict in Manchuria and adjourned until tomorrow or later without taking action.

Dr. Alfred Sze, representing China demanded that the League at least safeguard what he called Japanese military aggression, not only in the interests of peace in the Orient, but on the grounds that "unless we can co-operate in this grave emergency we shall fail to instill any confidence in international security and agreement."

Kenkichi Yoshizawa, the Japanese spokesman, insisted on continuing direct negotiations with China, and disavowed his government's responsibility for the Manchurian troubles.

Japan still insists on direct negotiations with China, he told his colleagues, and meanwhile an official note from his government indicates that its military operations in Manchuria will be brief.

Evans Gen By Japanese

Nankow, China, Oct. 13 (AP)—The wholesale withdrawal of Japanese from Shenyang province continued today without the hostile demonstrations.

The Japanese consulate at Chengtu, provincial capital, was closed and the staff, men and other Japanese residents were en route to Chungking, a river port 15 hour City six days' journey away.

Japanese residents also are advising Changsha, Hunan province Japanese residents took refuge on steam ers from their country's gunboats.

China's Reply

Nanking, Oct. 13 (AP)—Pinning its hopes on possible action by the League of Nations, China today departs with Japan over the occupation of Manchuria, China today drafted a note to be warning Premier Tokyo against anti-Japanese demonstrations.

It was learned from a high official quarter that the reply, to be delivered tomorrow, would reiterate that the Japanese invasion of northeastern Manchuria was a violation of international agreements and would confront Japan with responsibility constituted a state of war.

Tokyo, Oct. 13 (AP)—Announcement was made here today that the Japanese Foreign Office, would "take perfect accord with military authorities." Both agreed upon "various of principles upon which, Japan stands ready to effect a settlement of the Manchurian controversy."

The first question considered was with whom to negotiate. It was definitely stated at the beginning that she was willing to talk peace with the responsible Chinese authorities, whoever they might be.

Nanking's Answer

Nanking, Oct. 13 (AP)—Pending action by the League of Nations Council on the Sino-Japanese dispute, China answered Japan's Tokyo government's recent demand for the suppression of anti-Japanese demonstrations in this country.

The reply was handed to Japanese Consul Uyemura in the absence of Minister Hidaka, who left here this morning for Shanghai on a Japanese warship.

The agreement with which Washington and London view the crisis is expected to be made known soon by Secretary Nelson T. Johnson and British Minister Sir Miles Lampson, returning to Nanking in the next two days.

Martial Law in Canton

Canton, China, Oct. 12 (AP)—Canton was placed under martial law today after issuance of a police proclamation declaring that Communists were taking advantage of anti-Japanese agitation to cause trouble.

A police precinct captain and a gendarme captain were placed on trial on murder charges today growing out of the clash between police and student last Saturday in which ten were killed and many injured when the students selected six of their number to act as representatives of Japanese.

The rioting started following a student meeting at which speakers demanded a nationwide boycott of Japanese made goods.

BRINGS BEAUTY INTO CHURCH

Rev. C. E. Clarke Speaks On Anglo-Catholic Movement

Anglo-Catholicism was the third great religious movement to originate within Oxford University, said Rev. Charles E. Clarke, rector, at Christ Church on Sunday evening in the third of a series of sermons on Anglo-Catholicism and Anglo-Catholicism was more scholarly and less active than the other movements, the Puritanic and the Evangelical.

Rev. Mr. Clarke spoke of some of the manifestations of the Anglo-Catholic movement which had brought candles, incense and the confessional to a number of churches in England. "But let us remember," he remarked, "these men were trying to find out for themselves what was the position of the Church of God and its ministry. Was it merely a question of authority? Was the church of God a sect, or was it in the very body of Christ. It is by the latter that we find it is the means of the spreading of the knowledge of Christ to the world."

The preacher pointed out that Protestantism attempted to make personal element in religion and there was forgetfulness of the church.

Unity was not to be found in the church because of certain of its members. Unity was found in an event those who attend is sinning by their presence. No reason should women should sit in the seat of the apostles and men sit in the church. If one does one is a low churchman in the worst sense of the term. The ideal of the Anglo-Catholic movement saw the church as the visible continuation of Christ on earth. In that respect it is the High Church and not the High Churchmen.

Rev. Mr. Clarke referred to the efforts put forth by the Church of England to endeavour to reunite Christendom from a world torn into many sects.

The Anglo-Catholic movement brought beauty into the church from the severe lines of the older days. Its effects were seen in Christ Church, which had been made a place of beauty and worthy of the worship of God.

Motorists Soon to Use Air Instead of Gasoline

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 13.—Roy J. Mayers, inventor, predicts that within soon may refill their tanks with air instead of gasoline.

Meyers demonstrated an automobile engine, using the usual carburetor and ignition and cooling systems, but equipped with a compressed air tank filled to five hundred pounds pressure.

He pulled a lever and the car pick ed up speed quickly and smoothly with a slight hiss of air from the exhaust vents. The motor was geared so the maximum speed reached was thirty-five miles per hour, but Meyers said that, with a gear shift and a higher lowered engine, it would be equal to or higher than those of gasoline-driven cars may be attained.

As the air goes through the engine, forcing pistons up and down, much of it is recaptured and recompressed, Meyers said. The cooled air returns to the pressure tank. Extra air is supplied from batteries and a generator.

Meyers said he has demonstrated, he ands the air in the tank, increasing the pressure. He did not make clear how much additional air could be required per mile.

GERMAN POLICY IS UNCHANGED REICH IS TOLD

Unsolved Problems Have Been Increasing Distress

PRACTICAL DEEDS

Salvation Does Not Rest Entirely in Negotiations

Berlin, Oct. 13 (AP)—Germany's foreign policy of reconciliation remains unchanged, Chancellor Heinrich Bruening told Reichstag immediately after presenting his new cabinet to the representatives of the people today.

"I shall continue the foreign policy in the spirit of the previous cabinet and the last two councils, especially the most recent Franco-German conference," he declared at the opening of the Reichstag session.

"The Reich's government does not expect salvation solely through international negotiations, or with the aid of foreign countries, but Germany during the past decade has experienced more than all her neighbors how the unsolved problems of the world have increased domestic distress to such limits as what is bearable and have nourished a growing despair in all sections of our people.

"That is why Germany has a right to demand that the whole people of the world at last to translate their efforts from an indispensable common effort into practical deeds."

Uncertainty

However great the significance of the Hoover moratorium and however grateful the German people are for it, the chancellor said, nevertheless the uncertainty regarding the question of political payments alone constitutes a grave international economic and financial disturbance.

The members of the Nationalist opposition waited until after Chancellor Bruening had finished his address before they entered the Reichstag chamber.

Economic Problem

On the economic side, the Chancellor characterized the "government's task as that of eliminating measures to the changing manifestations of the economic world thereby preventing an upheaval of the basis of Germany's economic life. For instance," he said, it was possible to reduce the budget by 300,000,000 marks (approximately $6,000,000) which could be used for relief purposes.

To help the Government during the present crisis, he announced, President Paul Von Hindenburg had appointed the representatives of an economic advisory body which is to work out a economic program for Stability

"Under no circumstances must the stability of Germany's exchange be menaced," he said.

"Of decisive importance is the extension of a plan for meeting short term indebtedness and the solution of the reparations questions."

The Chancellor urged big industries with having embarked upon organizations which have resulted in cuts of prices and the expense of middle classes and smaller industries.

Among the government's economic and financial tasks of the immediate future, he enumerated labor problems, settlement by banks, especially to smaller undertakings; continuation of social services such as pensions and the dole, but their limitation to the necessary and economic necessities, continued maintenance of the policy of collective bargaining by labor, although greater elasticity than hitherto, and the forcing of a back-to-the-farms movement.

IS WELCOMED AT BRANTFORD

Lord Trenchard, New Head of Scotland Yard Will Officiate

Kitchener, Ont., Oct. 13 (CP)—Lord Trenchard will be extended here this afternoon to Lord Trenchard, Marshal of the British Air Force, newly appointed to succeed Lord Byng of Vimy as Commissioner of the London Metropolitan Police at Scotland Yard. Lord Trenchard, as Colonel of the Royal Scots Fusiliers, is on his first official visit to Scots Fusiliers of Canada which is known as the famous regiment.

After the civic welcome Mayor M. Bensau and civic officials will entertain the distinguished visitor on a tour of the city.

The railways received a very large share of business at this city over the week end and Thanksgiving. Hundreds of visitors were in town renewing acquaintances and numerous boys and girls were home from school and college for the short holiday. Monday evening the greater part of the visitors returned and the trains east and west were well filled with passengers. One large section of the C. N. R. yards at the north station was crowded with motor cars and more arrived Monday evening—citizens were there also in numbers bidding good-bye to their friends and members of their families, who were leaving for western points on the famous fast train of the C. N. R.

Seized As Baby Killers

Sought for months for his part in the atrocious Harlem "baby massacre" of last July, Vincent Coll, notorious 21-year-old gang leader, was captured, together with some of his ruthless bench men, and identified as one of the gunmen who participated in the wanton slaying of little Michael Vengali (inset). Coll is on the right of the picture.

Peter Sharbot Remembered As He Eats Chief's Food

Interrogated in Regard to Theft at Sharbot Lake

Two principal assets of a police detective are a remembering face and also to remember the certain peculiarities of individuals with which they have to deal. These tests were put into practice on Monday by Chief Constable Kidd and the result of his investigation has probably lead to the apprehension of a man wanted by the Provincial Police for some time.

On Monday as the Chief and his family were enjoying a Thanksgiving dinner, a knock came at the door and a man enquired if it would be possible to get a bite to eat. The chief constable has many such calls at his home each day as every other resident has but the man in and gave him "bread." He was then interrogated to be familiar, the Chief searching his memory and finally the fact flashed before him in all clearness. Not so many years ago the man had stood in the police docket in this city and charged with breaking into the C.P.R. freight shed and stealing guilty he was sent to the Kingston penitentiary for a time.

Enquiring of the man his business and it being given as Peter Sharbot, the chief again went into conference with his memory on another matter connected with this man and being questioned the man would not admit the charge. He was sentenced on a charge of vagrancy and the Chief further urged big industries with having embarked upon organizations which have resulted in cuts of prices and the expense of middle classes and smaller industries.

Among the government's economic and financial tasks of the immediate future, he enumerated labor problems, settlement by banks, especially to smaller undertakings; continuation of social services such as pensions and the dole, but their limitation to the necessary and economic necessities, continued maintenance of the policy of collective bargaining by labor, although greater elasticity than hitherto, and the forcing of a back-to-the-farms movement.

3 MONTH TERM FOR STEALING

Andrew Colden Sentenced For Thefts of Chickens

Probably a deterrent to chicken thieving will be effected by the sentencing of Andrew Colden to 3 months in the County Jail on police court on Tuesday before Magistrate Mikel Colden was charged with stealing forty hens the property of Mr. H. White, Tyendinaga township, some time ago. It appears that there were two other charges against the man, that of stealing chickens from William Preston and Alex. Chisholm in Hungerford and Tyendinaga townships but that the owner in this case did not proceeded with, when Colden pleaded guilty to the first charge. The Crown Attorney, D. L. McCuaig spoke against the practice and recommended a jail sentence be imposed in order that some deterrent could be put to this form of despicable practice. Magistrate Mikel also expressed his displeasure at this means of gaining a livelihood and hoped the sentence would be sufficient to stamp out the practice was not to be countenanced.

Many Thanksgiving Visitors In Town

Would Eliminate Unethical Lawyer

St. Petersburg, Fla., Oct. 13.—The International Association of police chiefs has authorized appointment of a committee to co-operate with attorneys in working out legal procedure to speed criminal cases to conviction.

An aim of co-operation between police and lawyers should be, he said elimination of the unethical lawyer and his legal technicalities. An American public that demands convictions and then turns sentimental in the individual case is another impediment of justice, Professor Miller said.

He silenced his hecklers with forth right language and when a young blade insinuated he was getting too old for his business he retorted:

"Perhaps you would be willing to take over the job. My youth is being perhaps wasted in preparation. During the last few weeks I have worked long hours and I have exhausted a half dozen assistants and am still on the job."

Over in Seaham, Cozon, fat and jolly, sat before his fireplace in carpet slippers and carpet slippers and told how he would be victorious and how the "unjust" magistrate would be fired MacDonald a safe constituency to administer in.

"MacDonald's mantle will fall on me," he said. "That pygmy would dethrone the leacher, who has grown fat on the money of others."

London, Oct. 13 (CP)—Another changing picture of this most contrasted of British constituencies with two clear issues are emerging:

1. Whether the establishment of protective tariffs.

2. The "danger" of the return of the socialists rings from the Conservative government platforms up and down the country.

Is Confident

Easington, Durham, Eng., Oct. 13 (AP) — The reception he got last night has quickened Ramsay MacDonald's confidence in his campaign today.

His job now, he explained, is to clear up the nation's complicated problems in the next few years, and who live in this Seaham Harbor constituency and he began his speech introducing the phrases of high finance in the plain language of making both ends meet as the government as well as in the home.

MacDONALD STUMPING IN COAL FIELDS

Tells People in Durham That They Don't "Eat Pounds"

NOT TOO OLD

Coxon, Premier's Rival, Says He Will Dethrone His Teacher

London, Oct. 13 (AP)—Rt. Hon. J. Ramsay MacDonald, three times Premier of Great Britain, stumped the coal mining region of Durham today, continuing his three-day campaign for re-election as "national coalitionary" against a 47-year-old school-master.

He spoke to 2,000 miners and their families at Easington last night in an effort to justify his leadership, of the national government and his economy measures against the attacks of William Coxon, secretary of the Labor party who is opposing him and his only opponent for re-election.

House Keeping

Reducing complex problems of national and international import to "simple problems of housekeeping—a government housekeeping," he pleaded his hearers to return him to the House of Commons so that he might finish the job of "keeping Great Britain in her place in the sun."

He told the miners that world confidence in the British financial structure means world confidence in the British citizen, that the inflation of British currency means a deflation in the individual's standard of living, that if the government did not make ends meet the people could not make ends meet.

"You don't eat pounds," he said at one point, "you don't wear pounds. Housekeeping means getting what you buy."

Apostles vs Coal Pits

"Men and women of humble circumstances," he said, "have never been forced to deal with these grave problems, I want you to go out as apostles to the coal pits, the street corners and home fireplaces to explain the situation."

Alex Reddick, 17, Trenton problably owes his life today to Wilfrid Fecteau as the young man strived just about the time Reddick was giving up clinging to an upturned canoe in the Bay of Quinte, between Trenton wharf, last Sunday afternoon.

MOTORCYCLE RIDER HURT

Russell Moodie Is Returning From English Tour

Russell Moodie, Toronto, sustained a fractured leg, when the motorcycle on which he was riding crashed into a car ahead near Tyendinaga road driven by Arthur Hodgson of Toronto, and which were proceeding at a moderate rate of speed due to the slippery condition of the pavement from the heavy rain. The car was travelling in an eastward direction, when the driver noticed that the car of the eastbound cars pulled out to pass the car in front and caused Mr. Hodgson to stop suddenly. In the accident that followed Moodie was following close behind and his cycle crashed into the rear of the Hodgson car doing a little damage to the cycle but throwing the rider in such a manner as to fracture his leg. Mr. Everett Lidstone, proceeding in a car at the same time, stopped at the scene and placing the man in the car brought him to the Belleville hospital where the fracture was reduced by Dr. Fraser after an X-ray had been taken.

HUGE 'LUNGE HOOKED IN BAY

Thanksgiving Day Catch Made By G. C. Brickman

It was a glorious Thanksgiving day—a day long to be remembered and talked of by Mr. G. C. Brickman, 64 Charlotte Street, as it brought to him great pleasure and most absorbing excitement. A fish—a huge 'lunge—became attached to Mr. Brickman's trolling line while he and his father, Mr. George E. Brickman, 189 Porter Ave., were fishing in the Bay shortly after noon on Monday. They had been out for some little time in a six-board motor boat—it was cold and they had decided to return home, when suddenly Mr. C. C. Brickman felt a terrific tug on his line, which caused him to forget all about time and Thanksgiving dinner. Fighting—that fish did struggle and strife—it come to the top of the water, stood erect on its tail, then plunged beneath the surface, struggling with great strength. Thirty minutes of this thrilling excitement elapsed before the fish was subdued and landed. On reaching town the 'lunge' was weighed and found to scale at twenty-six and a half pounds. It was a fine fish indeed—and one which proves that the waters of the beautiful Bay of Quinte are still inhabited by the finny tribe after the frost only known when and where to cast the line. Tuesday the big fish was on exhibition in the show window of Brickman and Sons, new building shop on Front Street, and attracted much envious attention.

Mr. Johnston was a student at the College thirty years ago and was much interested in the buildings now occupied by the school of which he has been a prominent friend since he graduated. The boarding house in which he lived while in Belleville would have been of interest to Mr. Johnston, but he could not locate it. Mr. Johnston, who is on a motor trip with Mrs. Johnston, thinks that Belleville has made wonderful advancement since he lived here and that it is a very beautiful place.

CAR OVERTURNS IN DITCH

Allegedly losing control of his car while proceeding westerly, three miles east of Napanee on Sunday morning, Patrick Quigley, his wife and three small children, were injured, when the car careened into the ditch and turned over. The car was badly wrecked, while all of the children were more or less cut with flying glass. Mr. and Mrs. Quigley were pinned beneath the wreckage and only after some difficulty freed. The injured were taken to the home of Mr. Bonnerville near the scene while a physician from Napanee was in attendance. Traffic Officer Summerfield of Napanee was quickly on the scene to investigate the accident.

HALF JOURNEY OVER

Mrs. David Moran, Crofton, who at ninety-seven years of age, left a few weeks ago on a three thousand mile motor trip to the coast, has completed half the journey and is enjoying every minute of the trip. A letter received by Mrs. Spencer, Bonnerville, from Mrs. J. E. Moran, who is accompanying her mother-in-law on the journey tells of the interesting trip. The motorists have reached Lake City, Iowa, and Mrs. Moran had traveled four hundred miles that day. She was looking forward with eagerness to the remainder of the trip and arrival in Vancouver where she will spend the winter.

MOTOR TRAFFIC HEAVY.

Motor traffic on the highways over the week-end and Thanksgiving day was considerably heavier. District Inspector Lougheed, who motored to Niagara Falls on Thanksgiving holiday, said Tuesday, that where seemed to be as many people travelling as there were at the height of the tourist season. All accidents so far as came under his observation, obeyed the rules of the road and no reports of accidents were received at the district headquarters. Belleville, from the attendants viewpoint supervised by his office, extending, as it does, west to Bowmanville and to Kingsto hand the Petcrboro district.

CITADEL BAND HEARD IN FINE PROGRAMME

Welcomed My Mayor and Banqueted at Quinte

FEAST OF MUSIC

Montreal Citadel Band of the Salvation Army, one of the finest of the leading musical organizations of the Dominion to the satisfaction of a large assembly of Salvationists and other Belleville citizens on Monday evening at the collegiate auditorium. The rapt attention to the numbers of the band was tribute enough even with out the applause that followed the applause which greeted each and every number of the fine performance.

Dedicated to the glory of God and to the service of man, music can be put to no higher use than that which the Citadel organization pley. Here were hymns played in the style of nakedness of primitive Christianity which has never failed to find the heart of man, and singing, playing organization, the Montreal Citadel band is one of the finest religious bodies of musicians in the world.

Some Salvation Army band stands on a somewhat different plane than the ordinary organization. It rests on the confessed faith of the individual members, one of which is an avowed follower of Christ, and that foundation they use their talents in music to the praise of God and the betterment of man.

For tonal quality, for fine attacking, for volume and precision the organization could not be improved upon. The high quality of the music, singing the best in life, was evidenced throughout, and an ensemble the band was a unit of tonal beauty. The many different divisions of the band played with supreme artistry. Indeed the trio numbers were so manly in their singing of hymns.

The program showed how music with the true ideal of goodness and sanctity can please the souls and hearts of men and women.

Bandmaster Audoire came in for great praise for the performance of his organization and for his magnificent solo on the pianoforte.

Mayor Reid occupied the chair and bespoke the interest of the people of Belleville in the band. He asked Mr. Leo B. Riggs to express appreciation of the work of the band which Mr. Riggs did with a fine criticism of the work of the organization, Ensign Calvert who introduced the mayor and led in the devotional exercises told of the warmth of the welcome given by Belleville to the visiting band of which he was once a member.

The program was in part as follows:

1. The Soldier's Chorus—Montreal Band.
2. Song "A Gladsome Song" — Miss Yoles Perry.
3. Instrumental Quartette "Selected"—Quartette Party.
4. Selection "Gems from Haydn No. 3"—Montreal Band.
5. Euphonium Solo "Selected"—Bandsman Haitzn.
6. Descriptive Selection "My Fortress"—Montreal Band.
7. Instrumental Sextette "Over Jordan"—Sextette Party.
8. Air Varie "Hardy Norseman" —Montreal Band.
10. Pianoforte Solo "Stand up for Jesus"—Bandmaster Audoire.
11. Song "Sometime Somewhere" —Miss Yoles Perry.
12. Meditation "Rock of Ages"—Montreal Band.

The Citadel Band on their way here from Toronto were given a hearty welcome in front of the City Hall at four-thirty on Monday afternoon when they arrived on the march from the north G.W. depot. Mayor Reid read an address of welcome which was responded to by the band leader and others.

At five-thirty at Hotel Quinte a banquet was tendered the band by the Belleville corps and Mayor Reid spoke at some length on the work of the Army" especially as it related to the citizenship of Belleville. Bandmaster Audoire, Ensign Calvert and others spoke.

The mayor's address of welcome read at the City Hall steps was as follows:

"Bandmaster J. N. Audoire, L.T.C. L., Commandant Speller, Commanding Officer of the Montreal Citadel Corps; Col. McAmmond Provincial Secretary for Canada, and gentlemen of the Montreal Citadel Army Band:—

"I wish to express my pleasure in having a visit from you, holding the honorable position you do in the Salvation Army.

"Looking over the history of the Salvation Army, I notice that in 1865, Commandant William Booth and his good wife formed the First Christian Mission and again in 1879 the Salvation Army and 1882 saw the commencement of the Salvation Army in Canada and in 1885 you came to Belleville.

"You are a body of men and women, banded together for God and the right not knowing colour and creed—a work of love — uplifting and caring for the fallen, until now your now numbers by he hundreds of thousands carrying on the work of the Master in eighty-five countries.

A. OF C. WINS MCFEE TROPHY

Teams Battle 'Till Dark in Order That Winner Be Declared

Yesterday was Thanksgiving Day and the Belleville City Men's Softball League was given a base of glory at Queen Mary School grounds when all four teams had gently unthatched and the Knights of Columbus nine were declared champions after three hectic battles. The Knights are therefore the holders of a beautiful trophy presented by Angus McFee, jeweller, with no strings attached. Eddie Logan, the Judge Landis of the League, gracefully presented the cup to Frank Domenico, captain and pitcher of the lodgemen at the conclusion of the third game.

When the league starter earlier in the season the heavy schedule was not considered seriously and many thought that the team would tire of the sport and it would fall through.

But would you believe it the boys took to the heavy schedule like ducks to water and when the regular season was closed all four teams were in the play-off, following nicely reducing exercises throughout the season.

The K. of C. finished first, Oddfellows second and the Firemen and Rotarians third and fourth place. What a slim finish, and the holiday saw the last three teams in the fight it out.

Two games were played in the morning. The first game brought the Firemen and Rotarians together. A big 11-run rally in the last inning for the Rotarians practically kicked the exit sign to the Firefighters, who finally succumbed by 17 to 15. And that's no disgrace by any means. Last year, when the teams started so many takeovers were mixed in, with heavy hitting and some sparkling plays.

The line-up:

Firemen—Weaver, 1st; B. J. McDonald, F. Greatrix, 2nd; O'Brien, p; Canning, field; Reid, field; F. Jackson, c; Carter, as.; Pomeroy, field; J. Canning, c.

Rotarians—R. Smith, 3rd; R. Shapley, as.; Wannamaker, 2nd; Bourcier Holway, 1st; E. Logan, c; J. McIntosh, rf; Ab Woonacott, p; Art McConnell, lf; Al Young, field.

Umpires—Meagher, Woodley.

In the second game the Oddfellows went to work and simply smothered the Rotarians, who appeared to be leg weary after their base circling exhibition in the first set-to. Harry Wray was the only Rotarian able to get in the game. The Oddfellows had a perfect day as the fixture and hit the old apple to all corners of the lot, winning 20-6. So the Kiwanis pushed out of the picture leaving the Knights and Oddfellows to fight it out for the silverware. From this exhibition it looked like the Oddfellows would be in. The Oddfellows lined up as Moxam, 3rd; Adams, field; Palmer, ss.; Miller, c; Goodfellow, p.; Symons, field; Pollitt, field; Arnott, 1st; P. Belnap, 2nd. Umpires—Canning and Meagher.

The afternoon final game between Oddfellows and the K. of C. was the best. It was snappy, in other words, the nine innings going over in one hour. The final score of 17-6 was the margin of victory for the winners who were: Harold Domenico, p; Bennett, 1st; Garvin, 2nd; Hogan, 3rd; Bowen, ss; Callaghan, field; Doran, as.

Umpires—Canning and Logan.

Highlights On Softball Finals

Wow; what a bunch of base hits the Knights boys punished their Thanksgiving turkeys to chase the quints in yesterday in the Men's Softball play offs.

Frank Domenico and Bill Harris scouted the teams in the morning game, since the Knights battery got the correct dope, anyway they came out on top in the little world series.

Art McConnell was a casualty, but he should recover. He was replaced and came back for more in an effort to help the Kiwanis win.

Dick Goodfellow, Ab. Wannacott and the Firemen's Ace, O'Brien —all went the way of Geo. Earnshaw, so don't be discouraged fellows.

Henry Ranson, Past Grand of the Oddfellows was a notable at the games and in the morning chased many foul balls, which went to show that the left field foul line, his favorite spot for watching the game.

Lee McIntosh's bobnailed shoes carried him on several sprints around the path while his throwing was a reminder of Max Bisenger.

"Shorty" Miller did not gain any surplus flesh toiling at the battery job—but with the glove on the right hand night has been called a "Mickey" Cochrane.

"Josh" Canning of the Fire fighters would continue using the motor for base circling—at least it looked that way, on the way he waded around the park on his...

"Pete" Belnap will now be able to settle down to clipping the long ones short—while Doc Edwards will probably call his fellow brothers for an 8p. m. visit.

In the meantime what will Eddie Shapiro the "Pepper" Martin (?)—that's he has red hair) will have plenty of explaining to do at the next Kiwanian luncheon. Jack McIntosh and Smith and Young can assist Eddie.

Probably Chief Lynch should have started a fire to warm the boys up for the morning game.

Webb Carter probably asked his daughter Lois for a few pointers, Lois pitches better than Webb fields.

Bill Hogan, Murray Black, Dinny Bowen and Steve Garvin will probably be telling you "We did it".

Whether or not "Bouncer" Holway was able to explain to his better half why he was absent at dinner hour remains to be known.

Well the curtain is down—congratulations to all the teams and those that made the league this season. Players and fans enjoyed it, alike.

JACK SHARKEY WINS CONTEST FROM CARNERA

Boston Gob Battled His Way To Brilliant Win

CARNERA FLOORED

Man Mountain On Verge of Knockout On Six Occasions

(By Herbert W. Barker, A. P. Sports Writer)

New York, N.Y., Oct. 13.—The bigger they come the better Jack Sharkey likes it and Primo Carnera, for one, won't venture to deny it.

In the game ring, where he found 170-pound Mickey Walker so tough in a 15-round battle two weeks ago, Sharkey blasted his way to a decisive victory on points over the 260-pound Carnera in Yankee Field last night and bounced himself right back to the forefront of challengers for Max Schmeling's heavyweight crown.

While a surprisingly large crowd of 50,000 looked on, Sharkey went to work methodically on the big Venetian and relentlessly cut him down to size. Before the Boston sailor's hand was raised in token of victory after 15 rounds of gruelling mauling, Sharkey had flogged Carnera for one nine count, closed one of the latter's eyes and given him no savage a beating that Primo was in dire peril of a knockout on a half dozen occasions.

But if the fight reinstated Sharkey to his position as a leading contender it served also to remove any lingering doubts as to Carnera's courage and stamina. The huge Italian failed to exhibit his vaunted punch but he demonstrated all through the fight. Subjected to punishment severe enough to have finished almost any other heavyweight the Italian man mountain still was in there offering what resistance he could when the final bell sounded.

Carnera won only one round, the third, and held Sharkey even in another, the thirteenth. The others all went to the Boston sailor, whose excellent showing was especially surprising in view of his draw with Walker recently. Carnera weighed 261 pounds; Sharkey 202½.

CANADA'S HOPE FOR FUTURE TOURNAMENTS

By her magnificent play in the Canadian Ladies' Golf Championship, Miss Margery Kirkham of Mount Forest Club, Montreal, took her place as the foremost feminine golfer in Canada. A little more international golfing experience, and she certainly would have downed Maureen Orcutt in the finals, and the fact that she lost 6 and 4, is no disgrace by any means. Last year, Miss Kirkham first sprang into prominence when she won the Canadian Close Championship; since then her golfing has been remarkable: she has Ladies' title, year on Quebec and Montreal Championships and to reach the finals in the Canadian open she was forced to turn back Miss Kerr, a leading English player, and Mrs. W. G. Fraser, the famous Ottawa star, who had previously defeated Enid Wilson, the English champion. Surely some day a nineteen-year-old girl who has not had a lenth the experience her elder opponents have had in international play. No better prospect for the woman's gold crown has appeared in Canada for many years.

Current Sport

By The Observer

The series of Athletics vs. Pepper Martin has been a one-sided affair in favor of Martin. The St. Louis Cardinals are on the wing and the member of the team by this time is flying south to paint, fish and loll about. The Cards under Gabby Street's management have come through as expected by the minority and are now champions of the world. In the series just finished no one can deny that they played the best ball especially in the pinches and generally hit better, when hits meant runs. The greatest money player of them all was more than half responsible for the win on Saturday. Andy High let off with three hits and scored two runs. The series proved that Mickey Cochrane is not a better catcher than Jimmy Wilson and that the great second staff of Earnshaw and Grove are not invincible. Of course Pepper Martin emerged as the hero of the series in no uncertain manner and it was only fitting that he take the last out of the game. The ball he caught will always be one of his prized possessions.

Toll Cafe, the sensational pacer of J. M. Roddy of Kingston, proved on Thanksgiving Day that he is the class of the horses in Canada today and in fact one of the best that ever campaigned through the United States. Toll Cafe was driven an exhibition mile against time on the half mile track at Kingston and he succeeded in lasting a mile in 2.06. This takes a quarter of a second off his time, when he won in Toronto and at Ottawa last year. The horse was driven by Vic. Fleming of Syracuse who has teamed him in all his starts on the Grand Circuit this year and they make a perfect combination. There were many horsemen from all over Ontario to watch the tawny son of Peter G. turn the racing strip, while many went to the barns to inspect him at close range. The horse has stayed in good flesh despite his strenuous campaign and he acted just like a colt in his performance on Monday.

The rugby games went as about expected on Saturday with all the thrills of the pastime packed into the game at Varsity between the Blue and White and the Trevior of Kingston. Harry Balstone's grid team came through in the last minute of play to snatch victory, after they had been outplayed during the entire game. Red Gilmour is the hero of the hour around the Limestone school of learning today, he kicking a field goal with players dragged all around him. Hamilton Tigers took the second game from Argos after the double blue had led for some time in the game. The sensational wheelers from Montreal simply swamped Ottawa and they are the team to beat for all the money this year. They should handily win the Dominion championship.

—o—o—

"Buck" McKenna can now go back to football and in his spare moments figure out a way to bring a setback baseball championship to Toronto. On Monday St. Georges had the defeat at the hands of Galt, the Scotchmen winning their second straight title in a sudden death game in Hamilton by a score of 2-1. Wilbur Kress, who starred for the St. Georges in their first meeting in Toronto, was the star pitcher for McKenna's crew. When this old veteran is right there is none better in the business and on Monday he had all the Georges team swinging from their heels and hitting for one. It was certainly a nice win for Galt and they are to be congratulated on their splendid showing all through the season. They are worthy champions.

Football Comes to Sing Sing Prison

Ossining, N.Y., Oct. 13.—Football has come to Sing Sing, but the teams won't meet on the gridiron.

Warden Lawes thinks the game will do the prisoners good. "Train them to play according to rules," he explained.

Two dozen football outfits have been organized. The warden said the teams would be named after famous High School and College men among the prisoners.

One advantage Warden Lawes sees in prison football is that the college kind is that the alumni is hardly likely to squawk about the way the team is handled.

Smith's Falls, Oct. 13.—Jim's "Irish" Rasson buried a no-hit-no-run game here yesterday, scoring his thirteenth consecutive win when the Smith's Falls team downed Timiskaming 9 to 0, thereby winning the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association title for the Ottawa Journal trophy in the intermediate series.

It was announced after the game that the manager, Harry O'Neil, would give a dance to celebrate the Galt team, O.B.A.A. champions, for a week with the Ontario title hanging in the balance.

One-Lamp Car-Driver Taken By Police

Motorcars must not be driven with only one head light—the city police are determined to enforce this precise. Sunday night shortly after ten o'clock Constable Evans saw a car approaching Bridge and Bridge Street with a monocle light. He hailed the driver, but the motorist thinking that he could make a get away, zipped on and Evans disappeared, not, however, before the number of the car was obtained by the constable. The guilty motorist will shortly hear from the police department regarding his action.

SCHOONER IN DISTRESS

New York, Oct. 13.—The coastguard reported last night that the Norwegian liner Manhattan was standing by a schooner off Cape Cod, from which the sails had been blown away and which was leaking badly. Two coastguard boats from Boston were sent to the vessel's assistance. The coastguard also reported that the S. S. Jefferson had picked up a fishing yacht two miles off Ashbury Park at 2 p.m. and taken it in the coastguard station there.

OIL STATION BROKEN INTO

Safe Opened With Cold Chisel and Coppers Taken

When John Lloyd opened the office of his service station at the corner of west Bridge and Coleman streets shortly before seven o'clock this Tuesday morning, he at once recognized that thieves had visited the place during the night. The city police were at once notified and Sergeant Booth hastened to the police car to the scene of the 'break in'. The sergeant found that entrance had been gained by breaking the glass in a window on the north side of the building. A hole of which was a small one cut into the wall, had been smashed open with a cold chisel the property of Mr. Lloyd. The safe was obtained by the thieves amounting to about $5.00. Several rolls of coppers amounting, it is said, to about $2.00 were not taken, although it was quite impossible to even look them. Entrance was made by the cast door of the office, which was forced open by raising the door open as they passed out.

THE LOST IS FOUND

A long lost drama of Bjornson, the Norwegian dramatist is reported found. Scandinavian readers are keen with excitement at the find and await opportunity to read the hidden work of the great playwright.

Theirs must be something of the zeal and fire which would startle the English speaking world should a new song, by Robert Burns or an ode by Keats or a number of hitherto unknown plays by Shakespeare be yielded from the dust of time. Should an old Greek play by Aeschylus, or Sophocles or Euripides turn up, what excitement there would be in cultured circles'.

Bernard Shaw ought to write a play and then lose it for a couple of generations and then let lives shake a hand in the game and bring it to light towards the close of the twentieth century.' It would be a sensation too.

Bjornson's drama will probably be published, and translated into every civilized tongue. Great is the appeal of the written word and the pen.

THE SLAUGHTER GOES ON

Several persons are dead as the result of a motor accident on the highway in eastern Ontario where it is said the driver of a car was making forty five miles per hour and when he saw he could not get through traffic he tried to "brake" with the result that the car skidded three times across the wet road and broke itself to pieces against a truck, the driver of which tried to avoid collision.

It seems that all the advice that has been given could be given drivers of cars goes at times for nothing when one reads of accidents taking place daily and nightly with a toll that would shock were the nations not hardened to it.

The time has come for people to evince a reaction to the shock when a calamity like this occurs. It is a type of many others.

This sort of thing will probably go on until the death list on the highways reaches something like the prices before the market crash. Then something will be done and done in a hurry to end this slaying of people by scores in the innocent pastime of motoring.

CANADA AND GOLD

Canadians must take new pride in their country's vast resources as they read of mounting gold production and of new discoveries of probable gold fields. With the United States ousted from second place now taken by Canada and with gold the topic of conversation anywhere and everywhere since the gold standard was dropped for the time being by Britain, more than usual interest centres upon the future of Canada as a gold and other precious metal producers.

That Canada in ten years will be producing one hundred millions in gold was the prediction made the other night.

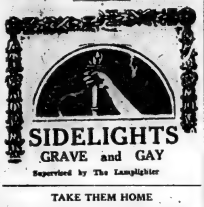
Canada has the resources. She must be proud of them and she must realize what her duties as custodian of these riches are.

SPEED AND PERJURY

Speed limit abolition is in favor with Mr. Justice Logie, from the standpoint of the moral affect upon the motoring public. His findings are that the courts are rife with perjury as a result of the desire of those concerned in court actions to put on the best appearance for their cases by minimizing the rate of speed at which they were travelling.

He is with favor upon the English system which holds every driver responsible for the careful operation of his vehicle whatever the speed whether it be ten or ten miles an hour. Hence he would take off the speed limit.

It is no doubt true that there is a tendency to strain the truth or tell a lie in court regarding speed lest a case be prejudiced because of a driver exceeding the speed limit.



This is another angle of the case for motorists and highway officials to think about, especially as most of the travel on the provinvial highways is in excess of thirty miles an hour, the allowed rate, and of twenty miles per hour in the city, the prescribed top speed.

BUFFALO MEAT

Fifteen hundred buffalo in the Canadian herd at Wainwright have to be destroyed as the numbers have become too large. Some of the meat from the herd will doubtless find its way into the larders of the unemployed. At least it is suggested that the meat be used for his purpose.

On one occasion when buffaloes were killed to reduce the herd, the meat was disposed of in shops throughout the country and buffalo meat occupied attention in the newspapers.

Oshawa Times suggests that the government could do more good by supplying this meat to the unemployed than by selling it on the market to compete with the products of the farms of Ontario.

TAKE THEM HOME

Take home your joy, but leave outside
The looks that scorn and words that chide
And let your children find at night
You're glad to cast your cares away,
And in this peaceful haven find
A resting-place for heart and mind.

Take home a smiling, cheerful face,
Which plainly says: "I love this place."
For none can tell, for no one knows,
How far such commendation goes
To brighten life, and make it run
As glad as ripples in the sun.

And when the children brought up there
Are scattered here and everywhere,
Across the world or o'er the way,
Love's tribute they will surely pay—
For to that home their thoughts shall wing
Like birds that hear the call of spring.

ROMANS WERE GREAT ROAD BUILDERS, and a great nation as long as they preferred road building to burning Christians to make a continuous Roman holiday. Canada is building roads and more roads and realizing the benefit of giving free access to the great open spaces is taking advantage of the vast amount of man labor available at this time. Ontario is blazing the way by contributing a material section to the trans-Canada highway which will be a national asset when completed. Labor is plentiful now and public works can be accomplished now which would be almost impossible and very expensive in the days when the present army of unemployed is absorbed in ordinary industry, Canada has imported thousands of men from other lands to work on the construction of railways and roads, also to work on the farms, which does not appeal to them. These men constitute the bulk of the army of the unemployed. Care should be taken not to augment this army by unselected emigration of more of the same class. Canada has all it can absorb now of the imported laboring class, especially in view of the rapid development of machinery to displace pick and shovel work.

PICK AND SHOVEL his great arms and proud of it, a brave countenon this of the new Executive Secretary of the University of Southern California at Los Angeles. His duties are to act as sort of ambassador between the various departments. Swingle is his name and he was recommended for the place and judged well fitted after enquiry. His last job before accepting this was ditch digger, and now to remind himself of other days he has had placed in each corner of his office a pick and shovel. Goes to prove the truth of the Salvation Army slogan, "A man may be down but he's never out."

NOISE INCREASES NERVOUS and physical fatigue. Sugars and starches have been known to offset it so say certain scientists who have been studying the effect of noise on the human system. Cities where noise is noise and the great open spaces are not because they are filled with the sounds of automobiles, gas engines and other abominations. Noise is rather tardily being recognized as a crime and action taken accordingly. Quiet in the country is still more or less of a pastime rather than criminal. Even the hospital patients have been found to be disturbed by motor horns, whistles and clanging of bells. Motor cycles are permitted to rush horribly through the streets with exhausts wide open, making all the noise of which they are capable, and that is certainly some. Old cars of ancient vintage make a noise like the juggernaut of India and great loose-jointed motor trucks lumber around corners making hideous noises. And the shades of night do not shut out the noise makers, for be it from so, accentuates it rather in some sections. Taxis rushing to the train regardless of stop signs and fellow sleepers, mysterious trucks rushing by, taxis on call which stop and honk their horns until the prospective passengers wake up and leaves the house. Then there is the clop clop of the three o'clock in the morning horse propelled milk wagon. Every footfall a jar to tired nerves, every jar a prayer for just a little more sleep. What a life.

NOT WORLD CONDITIONS ONLY

If Canada is to make recovery from the present depression more rapidly than other countries, it must be by the attitude and efforts of her own people. In that view we must not make too much of the belief that better times are coming, kind generally, under a world condition.

There is no gainsaying that the state of affairs throughout the world has had its effect upon Canada, but that is very far from saying that Canadians must await the action of other people and, meantime suffer with the rest.

This idea will be accepted by everybody, but by too many it will be accepted only in principle which is another way of postponing action. But even those who believe that something can and should be done by ourselves are inclined to keep in mind the thought that our action must be ineffective until the other nations take action all the other nations shall have made the world condition less acutely crying. What we do will not remedy the general depression, it would do good, it will improve the conditions within our own border—Ottawa Citizen.

From Calgary comes news that samples of nuggets taken from Big Timber Creek, Alberta, have assayed and pronounced pure gold. Both placer and quarts mining are already under way in the district indicted to the field, which is 60 miles northeast of Calgary. The fact is a reminder that the prospector and gold seeker are men of a most independent mind, who are ready to endure all sorts of hardships and to refuse all assistance, government or otherwise. They are willing to spend time and effort and to take all sorts of risks in their hunt and labor for treasure. If they win, good; if they fail, they say nothing, but try again. It is in respect they set a fin example—Montreal Gazette.

APPLES AND THEIR NAMES.

Most people will be astonished to learn that the man who developed the delightful and universally popular Snow apple has died, passed away at Ottawa. Most people had a notion that he was named after certain winter qualities, or was due to the pure white of the flesh; and knew nothing of Mr. C. H. Snow: another evidence that great public benefactors are forgotten even before their death.

It is interesting to note that the McIntosh Red also had its beginnings in Eastern Ontario, and, though it has spread to all agglopraying sections of the Dominion, few people know much about the man whose name it bears. It is the same with many other varieties of this wholesome orchard fruit—and in this connection it is interesting to mention that there are in Canada more than forty distinct varieties of apples, with with its particular flavor and its own good time for ripening, from the popular and now being the Culvert, the Wealthy, the McIntosh Red to the late apples.

There is a nice field for specialization as to how all these apples came by their names. Why is the Baldwin so named? And the Ben Davis, the Fameuse, the Northern Spy, the Gano, the Starks, the Stayman and so on? There may be a suspicion that, because of its peculiar flavor, the Winesap appealed to some prominent and fabulously inclined personage, but in this case, of course, names cannot be mentioned. The Rome Beauty surely was christened by a patriotic son of Italy, and it may be that in this case, the "Russlycost," as the children know it—was developed by the dusky abominees, whose orchards are of very original in their layout and knew nothing of scientific cultivation and care.—Toronto Globe.

WHERE A LIFT MEANS MUCH

An editor's mail may not contain so many plans for help as that of a welfare agency or a millionaire, but it includes enough to give a pessimist much to think about and of just what economic stress means in human terms. Hopes disappointed, ambitions deferred—and of what value could be offered by an encouraging hand here and there.

Two examples will tell the story. From a town in the northwestern corner of Ohio comes an account of a young man who has earned his way through college, at years of university by working nights at a bookkeeper but who has hunted unavailingly this year for the sort of work which will enable him to complete his education. His stepfather is said to be a Communist, and though his mother has helped him stand out against that influence, they are beginning to be afflicted by it. From a professional boy of high character, ambitious to be useful, who made honor marks in high school and is eager to enter college. His parents, struggling to bring up other children, can help him no further.

Almost any reader who would like to help in such cases as these can find counterparts of them in his own community. Ask the registrar of nearby any college or university to advise him how to assist deserving students. So far as employment is concerned, the man with a family unquestionably has first call, but certainly a close second where any work can be provided is the boy or girl earning an education. Contributions just now to university or college scholarship funds, student loan funds, or personal loans to individuals to enable them to carry on their studies, will yield especially big returns in good citizenship.—C. S. Monitor.

ACIDITY FOR 10 YEARS
Before he Found the Remedy

Many people endure suffering unnecessarily as Mr. Kruschen did. He had known ten years ago what he knows now, that he would be enjoying a great deal of outdoing.

So he did write a few lines in appreciation of your Kruschen Salts. Mr. Kruschen suffered acutely from chronic acidity of the stomach. I tried many everything, until I was advised by a friend to try Kruschen, which I have taken for the last few months, and I am pleased to say I have had no return of the trouble.—(W. S. Kruschen Salts swiftly neutralises acidity, makes all the organs of it, and gently expels it from the system. And by stimulating the secretion of digestive juices to perfect regular action, Kruschen will prevent this harmful acidity from ever accumulating again. After that you'll experience no more bilious attacks, headaches, will keep your inside clean and sweet, your liver and digestion blood will be sent coursing to every part of your body. You'll feel simply energetic and well. As healthy and hearty as it is humanly possible to feel.

RELIGIOUS SECTS HARD HIT

Istanbul, Turkey. — Modernization in the eclectic hands of Mustapha Kemal is affecting almost every phase of life through the Turkish laity, and shocks that are nearly lethal thru the Turkish clergy. To the Islamic (Moslem clergy), once the most powerful class in the Ottoman Empire, more powerful, even, than the army, modernization is a dark and unhappy process.

It has shaken their wealth, valued before the world war at one-third of the total wealth of the fabulously rich Ottoman Empire. It disclosed their schools, the madresses, which gave them full away over the minds of the nation's youth, as no other primary school existed. It has stripped to pieces their control of the state, the army and the masses.

But while Kemalist reforms are shaking the powers of the clergy, hard times are bucking them up. The economic woes of the masses of the land's people keep the masses fed of the faithful, seeking consolation.

This year the mosques have been full more than in years past. And it is undoubtedly the unrest of a people tired by hard times that has prevented the Kemalist reformers from upsetting them further through their drastic changes in measure ritual as the introduction of the fez and abolition of harem rugs, which were contemplated a couple of years ago. Both changes would certainly have alienated the masses from the clergy capable of tolerating heresies.

About 30 percent of Chosen's 54,-532,100 acres is under cultivation, Japanese owning nearly one-half of the tilled land.

Whats a matter, are you blind in one eye and cant see out of the other? Reddy sed.

Meening he was sharpening a stick, and I kepp on watching a while and the end of my nose started to itch, and I started to wiggle it instead of scratching it on account of both my hands being full of bags of things, and Reddy Merfy sed, Hay who you making those faces at?

What faces, I aint making any faces, my nose itches, I sed.

Well it kepp on doing, and I kepp on wiggling it, and pretty soon Reddy Merfy looked up again, saying, Hay, are you looking for a good punch in the snoot or would you rather have a kick in the slats?

Why, no, neither, good nite I told you my nose was itching, I sed.

Well then let it itch but I advise you not to make any more faces at me, Reddy sed.

Well who is? G wizzickers can I help it if my nose itches? I sed, and Reddy sed, The heck with your itching youre making faces and their pointed in my direction and if you do it again youre going to get a poke in the ribs that'll make you think you was shot in the war and struck by lightning at the same time.

Well heck, cant a fellow's nose itch? I sed.

Not around me, Reddy sed.

Welch pritty soon it started to itch like everything, feeling as if it would wiggle itself if I didnet wiggle it, and Shorty Judge came up and I let a couple of wiggles at him all I wunted and then kepp on going home.

MOT WORLD CONDITIONS ONLY

If Canada is to make recovery from the present depression more rapidly than other countries, it must be by the attitude and effort of her own people. In that view, we must not make too much of the belief that we suffer, as does mankind generally, under a world condition.

There is no gainsaying that the state of affairs throughout the world must have its effect upon Canada, but that it is very far from saying that Canadians must await the action of other people and, unquiring the turn. Do we?

This idea will be accepted by Canadians but not many it will be accepted only "in principle"—which is another way of postponing action. But even those who believe that something can and should be done by ourselves are disposed to keep in mind the thought that our country is quite ineffective until the good time comes when all the other nations shall have settled the world condition less acutely trying. What we do will not remedy the general difficulty but, if well done, it will improve the conditions within our own border—Ottawa Citizen.

From Calgary comes news that samples of nuggets taken from Big Timber Creek assay $19 to the ounce and pronounced pure gold. Both placer and quartz gold are said to be ready under way and a rush is predicted to the field, which is about 75 miles northwest of Morley, Alberta. The fact is a reminder that the prospector and gold-seeker are men of a most independent mind, who are ready to endure all sorts of hardships and who never ask for assistance, government or otherwise. They are willing to spend time and effort and to take all sorts of risks in their hope and labor for treasure. If they win, good; if they fail, they say nothing, but try again. In this respect they set a fin example—Montreal Gazette.

APPLES AND TIKER NAMES.

Most people will be astonished to learn that the man who developed the delightful and universally popular Sinow apple has just passed away at Glasgow. Many people had a notion that the name implied certain winter qualities, or was due to the same reason as "Jersey Jesh" and knew nothing of Mr. C. H. Snow's existence. Obituary and public benefactors are forgotten even before they die.

It is interesting to note that the McIntosh Red also had its beginning in Eastern Ontario, and although it has spread to all applegrowing countries of the world few people know much about the man whose name it bears. He was a farmer with many other varieties of this wholesome orchard fruit—all in this connection it is interesting to mention that there are in Canada more than fifty distinct varieties of apples, each with its particular flavor and its own time for ripening. Those popular just now being the Calvert, the Wealthy, the McIntosh Red and the Snow.

There is a nice field for speculation as to how the various apples came by their names. Why, is the Baldwin so named? Or the Ben Davis, the Newton, the Jonathan, the Northern Spy, the Cleao, the Bach, the Hendrick and so on? There may be a suspicion that, because of its peculiar flavor, the Winesap appealed to some prominent and influential individual personage, but in this case, of course, names cannot be manufactured. Some Beauty surely was christened by a patriotic son of Italy, and it may be that the Duchess—the "Duchess of" as the children know it—was originally a Scotch gooseberry! since whose orchards were at least original in the matter of names, nothing of modern cultivation and care.—Toronto Globe.

WHERE A LIFT MEANS MUCH

An editor's mail may not contain as many gifts as that of the head of a welfare agency or a millionaire, but occasionally comes to give a poignent picture here and there of just what economic stress means to human terms—and how appreciated, ambitious deferred—and of what a little help may mean to an encouraging hand here and there.

Two examples will tell the story. From a town in the northwestern corner of Ohio comes an account of a young man who has earned his way through all but one year of university by working nights at a restaurant. He has had to forego unavailingly this year to find any work which will enable him to complete his education. His stepfather is said to be a Communist, and though his mother has helped him stand out against that influence, they are beginning to be affected by it. From a professional boy of high character, ambitious to be useful, who made honor marks in high school and is eager to enter college. His parents, struggling to bring up other children, can help him no further.

Almost any reader who would like to help in such cases as these can find counterparts of them in his own community. Or the registrars of nearly any college or university can advise how to assist deserving students. So far as employment is concerned, the man with a family unquestionably has first claim, but certainly a close second where any work can be provided is the boy or girl earning an education. Contributions just now to university or college scholarship funds, student loan funds, or personal loans to individuals to enable them to carry on their studies, will yield especially big returns in good citizenship.—C. S. Monitor.

ACIDITY FOR 10 YEARS

Before he Found the Remedy

Many people endure suffering unnecessarily. The man did. If he had known his remedy was what he learned to-day, he would have been spared a great deal of suffering.

"I feel I must write a few lines in appreciation of your Kruschen Salts. I have suffered for 10 years from excess acidity of the stomach. I tried nearly everything, until I was advised by a friend to try Kruschen, which I have taken for the last two months, and I am pleased to say I have had no return of the acidity."—W. B. RELIGIOUS SECTS HARD HIT

Istanbul, Turkey. — Modernization in the electric hands of Mustapha Kemal is sending shocks of new life through the Turkish laity, and those that are surely lethal thru the Turkish clergy. To the Ulema Moslem clergy the most powerful class in the Ottoman Empire, more powerful, more than the army, modernization is a dark and unholy thing.

It has shaken their wealth, valued before the world war at one-third of the total wealth of the Empire, it

HISTORIANS MAY MEET ON MOSSY RUINS

Churchill Built on Site Two Hundred Years Old

ROMANTIC STORY

Old Fort is Now Within One of National Parks

(By Gillis Percell, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Churchill, Man.,—Moss-covered ruins of Fort Prince of Wales on the shore of Hudson Bay may be the scene of a gathering of historians in 1932, two centuries from the time the sturdy embankments were constructed. During his recent visit to the new harbor at Churchill, Hon. R. J. Manion, Canada's minister of railways and canals, suggested that a bi-centennial meeting might be an appropriate manner of marking the historic value of the site.

Battered by time, as well as by Scotsmen's guns, the sprawling stone fort across the Churchill river from the newly-built 2,500,000-bushel elevator could tell a story of pioneering bravery as well as of apparent cowardice. From the fort went out the fearless expedition by the Copperwine, far across the Northwest Territories; yet its massive fort trail fell into enemy hands without a shot being fired.

Despite its unexplained surrender to the French in 1782, and subsequent destruction, the structure ranks as one of the most massive fortresses in the continent. Its 20-foot-high walls are falling in a score of places, and the large stone house within the fortress has found its stone sides ruined by the years, but ample for the historian to restore remains.

As tourist traffic along the Hudson Bay Railway to Churchill promises to grow, attention centres on the soundness of the Dominion government decision to protect the site as least in its present condition. Visitors have carried away old cannon-balls, torn stones from the mutared walls for mementoes, hacked present-day names into the hammer-scarred stone. Folks from Reabura, Man., and Aguadel, Sask., have cut their addresses into the rock beside the 18th century names of old adventurers.

Not only is the fort now placed within one of the Dominion's park areas, but a similar move has been taken in the case of the time-worn battery and powder magazine, across the river mouth from the fort, and Sloop's Cove, up-river about half a mile on the Fort side, where old vessels moored. A calm to Jens Munck, Dane who discovered Churchill in 1619, has been found near the crumbling battery by the government.

Back in 1733 construction of Fort Prince of Wales was started by the Hudson's Bay company. Following a decision to fortify to the utmost the company's best harbor, artisans were brought from England to hasten the work.

Built in the shape of a four-pointed star, more than 300 feet from point to point, the fort accommodated 42 guns of varied calibre. Walls 20 feet wide at the top were surmounted with a parapet embrasured for the cannon; supply rooms were constructed; and water wells were placed at each end of the four corners of the fortress.

Almost 40 years passed before the fort was completed in 1771, after continued efforts of local authorities to prevent the work being done according to original plans, which provided for the erection within nine years of a structure costing about £8,000. An indication of the cost of construction at the time is offered by Joseph Robson, engineer sent out from England by the company to supervise the building. In his memoirs records; he listed the work of three masons, each at £25 per annum, with maintenance of 5s each per week.
